Second Attack

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Friday), Jan. 17.—Informed sources said early today that German dive bombers had attacked the British aircraft carrier Illustrious for the second time in six days Thursday, scoring three direct hits.

The same sources said the attack took place "in a British naval fortress in the Mediterranean, "where a number of bombs were dropped."

(The 23,000-ton Illustrious made port in the Mediterranean under her own power Wednesday, after being damaged in a ferocious attack by German dive bombers on January 10.

(Dispatches from Valetta, Malta, told of a heavy raid by dive bombers on that island naval base Thursday, and presumably this is where the Illustrious was attacked the second time.)

One heavy bomb and two medium bombs hit the Illustrious in the Thursday attack, the Germans said, and "despite fierce antiaircraft fire, only one German bomber has failed to return."

The Germans said they had made a direct hit on a steamer in the same engagement.

Malta Fights Prolonged Raid

Valetta, Malta, Jan. 16 (AP).—Dive bombers bombed this harbor and town this afternoon in a prolonged assault.

There was a continuous explosion of bombs and guns of all calibers roared at the persistent invaders.

Yesterday a hostile plane, curiously marked with a red cross, made a long reconnaissance over the island. Last night there was more reconnaissance and then a prolonged attempt to bomb selected targets, the night's alerts covering a period of almost four hours—a record here.

In both attacks—those of last night and today—there were an undetermined number of casualties. British sources said the raiders' losses were "substantial," and that R. A. F. fighters suffered no damage.

(Since German dive bombers have started a thrust in the Mediterranean it appeared likely that the Malta attack was delivered by Nazis. It also appeared possible that the "red cross" marking seen might be a special German insignia adopted for fliers on duty in the Mediterranean.)

Nazis Admit Need to Pacify Rumanians

Diversion of Trains To Troop Transport Linked to Disorders

By the Associated Press

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 16.—Repeated clashes on the Russo-Rumanian frontier, cancellation of passenger rail traffic in Hungary and reports that Germany would take over Rumania formally combined tonight to keep the Balkans in a state of disturbed anxiety.

An announcement in Budapest that all traffic on Hungarian railroads, except international trains, would be suspended at midnight led to the supposition here that the German military command, which is now running the Magyar railroads, had found drastic steps necessary in order to complete the projected movement of 300,000 troops

Meantime, there are signs of growing Russian-Rumanian friction. A high diplomatic source said tonight that an average of five to ten Rumanian guards are being killed nightly in clashes on the Bessarabian-Bucovina frontiers.

30 Axis Planes Fired at Field, British Claim

Sicilian Base Attacked; Cruiser Southampton Lost, London Admits

Copyright by New York Times

London, Jan. 17.—The Southampton, one of the newest and best British 9,000-ton cruisers, was so badly damaged by German dive bombers on Friday that she had to be abandoned and sunk by other British ships, the admiralty announced today.

At the same time, it was announced that from 30 to 40 German planes, instead of but nine, as previously reported, were burned or wrecked in a Royal Air Force raid on a nest of German aircraft at Catania, Sicily. In the attack, Sunday night and early Monday, the British wrecked one hangar, damaged another and hit a third.

Apparently fire broke out on the Southampton after the attack, and the damage done by the bombs was so great that the crew could not cope with the fire. The majority of the crew was rescued, but it became the sad duty of the Southampton's companion to sink her at once.

Loss Is Serious One

Thus one of the first British ships ever to be seriously bombed—the Southampton was in the Firth of Forth raid early in the fall of 1939—has now been finished off by German planes. The Southampton's commander, Capt. H. C. B. Brooke, now has had two ships bombed from under him. He was on the Curlew when she was sunk by German planes off the coast of Norway last June.

Loss of the Southampton cannot be taken lightly, first because she was an important unit of the British naval forces, and secondly because of what it may mean. Italian planes have not so far managed to inflict any serious damage on the

For Equal Justice

Vanderbilt Suggests Traffic Judges Fix Uniform Penalties

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

The administration of justice in Washington's Traffic Court received a resounding verbal slap yesterday from Arthur T. Vanderbilt, chairman of the National Committee on Traffic Enforcement and one of the country's foremost authorities on traffic court procedure.

He also struck at the local setup which forces courts and police to recognize so-called "Diplomatic" and "Congressional" immunity. Vanderbilt's strongly worded address, coming at a time when the city is up in arms over an alarming accident problem, was delivered at a joint meeting of the Advisory Board and Women's Safety Committee of the American Automobile Association.

"You are not going to get anywhere with the administration of justice in Police Court," he said, "until that court decides to get some new ideas."

Three of the four Police Court judges were present to hear his remarks—Judges John P. McMahon, Walter Casey and George Neilson. They left the Willard Hotel meeting room immediately following the talk without comment.

Ice Sends 31 To Hospitals; Rain Today

Downpour Washes Away Slipperiness But Not Before 20 Are Hurt in Falls

Washington's ice sheath melted away in rising temperatures last night after sending 31 persons to hospitals with fall and auto-accident injuries, tying up traffic and delaying some of the city's transportation agencies.

Twenty persons who fell on porch steps or who slipped on ice-covered walks on their way to work received hospital treatment. At least one of them was hurt seriously. Eleven persons received minor injuries when automobiles skidded on slick roads, though scores of mishaps resulted from obscured windshields.

The rain continued through the night but temperatures, though near freezing, were not low enough to create the picturesque but perilous ice conditions that prevailed in the District area for the 48 hours preceding yesterday noon.

Hazardous Roads

The forecast was for intermittent light rain and slowly rising temperature. Clearing weather will follow tomorrow with colder weather at night.

The airlines were the only public transport facility to be shut down.

The Weather Bureau characterized the storm as a "freezing rain" as distinguished from sleet. The rain, it said, fell from relatively warm air through a freezing layer close to the ground.

Mrs. Rena M. Day, 43, of 2123 Branch Avenue Southeast, fractured pelvis; L. Hoyt Lamb, 60, of 5613 Fourteenth Street Northwest, possible fracture of the vertebrae.

Many Others Hurt

Emma Chadwick, 48, of 208 E Street Northwest, bruised back; Swald Conzort, 28, of the 700 block of Seventh Street Southeast, cut eye; John R. Eheart, 39, of 414 Tenth Street Southeast; possible ankle fracture; Walter A. Saunders, 35, of 215 Eighth Street Southeast, possible shoulder fracture; Harold Backer, 51, of 202 E Street Northwest, fractured elbow; Lester Dempsey, 28, colored, 2317 Virginia Avenue Northwest, possible knee fracture; Margaret Lamb, 45, of 133 Carroll Street Southeast, possible arm fracture.

Also, Toney Bader, 1707 H Street Northwest; Elmore Ralton, 1413 T Street Northwest; Samuel Good, 1109 Fiftieth Place Northeast; Forrest Henkel, Winston Salem, N. C.; William Humphries, 3224 Prospect Avenue Northwest; Louis M. Henry, 847 Twentieth Street Northeast; Tony Nelson, 920 P Street Northwest; James Price, 2000 R Street Northwest; Orin Poulton, 4409 Eighteenth Street Northwest, and Elmo Riddick, 651 Ninth Street Northwest, Sam Davis, 67, 509 Forty-fourth Street Northeast, scalp cuts.

Hurt in traffic:

George H. Spengler, 43, of 1228 Sixth Street Southwest, hip lacerations; Jack C. Arnold, 38, of 1404 Tenth Street Northeast, sprained shoulder; John T. O'Shaughnessey, 53, of 5105 Eighth Street Northwest, broken nose; Nettie Wood, 58, colored, of 61 N Street Southwest, minor injuries.

Albert Toles, 26, 1608 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, possible skull fracture; Sam Chepuras, 62, 2540 Third Street Northeast, leg fracture.

U. S. Advised By Japan to Recall Fleet

Press Bitterly Denounces Hull Statement as Challenge to Axis

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Friday), Jan. 17.—The Japanese press produced today the bitterest criticism of America in recent months, declaring that United States Secretary of State Hull's declaration of Wednesday before the House Foreign Affairs Committee was "a clear challenge to the Axis, short of an ultimatum."

(Mr. Hull, urging passage of the lease-lend "aid-for-Britain" bill, envisaged that the danger to the United States would be "multiplied many fold" if Japan, Germany and Italy gained control of the high seas.)

The newspaper comments, both in editorials and in critical page one stories, reflected the country's sharp reaction, which already has become perceptible.

They followed up comments yesterday by the Japanese Times, a newspaper controlled by the foreign office, describing the United States Pacific Fleet concentrations as "a challenge and a threat" and advising President Roosevelt to withdraw the warships from Hawaii as the best way to keep American troops out of foreign wars.

Called "Outrageous Utterance"

The paper Asahi, under the headline, "Outrageous Utterance by the American Secretary of State," accused the United States of intending to control New Zealand, Australia, Singapore and the East Indies.

Pending a statement expected today from the information bureau chief, Nobufumi Ito, the authoritative Japanese attitude was stated to be that the purpose of some of Hull's remarks was "to regiment United States opinion against Japan."

One vernacular newspaper's headline said: "America Trembles at the Shadow Over the Pacific; Hull Misrepresents Japan, Frantically Seeking Passage of Aid-for-Britain Bill."

(Domei, the Japanese news agency, broadcast from Tokyo that directors of the National Service Association, an influential patriotic organization, discussed the "unfriendly" attitude of the United States toward Tripartite Pact powers and decided on a program to "unify public opinion to tide Japan over the difficult situation.")

The Japan Times said:

"To the Japanese it looks very much like the United States is going the long way around for sending armed forces into the scene of action abroad by maintenance of a fleet at Hawaii.

"The best way to insure the President's pledge of no troops on foreign soil would be to withdraw the Navy to home waters. Hawaii may be 'a home away from home,' but it shouldn't be a permanent station for the bulk of the fleet."

"Nothing New," Says Berlin

Berlin, Jan. 16 (AP).—Secretary of State Hull's remarks before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in Washington interested official Germany for two reasons, authorized sources said today:

First, because of his altogether too "obviously clear evasion of the Russian question."

Facing Death, Woman Goes On Giving Rare Blood to Save Lives

Mrs. Rose McMullin has an "assignment from God" to save lives. Her reward, she well knows, may be death.

Yet she means to keep everlastingly at her task until her remarkable health breaks or until, in some ether-filled hospital room, a tired heart stops working at "the job God has put in my hands to do."

Death, swiftly and without warning, well may end her work. Physicians often have predicted it would.

Mrs. McMullin's job is to give blood to the sufferers from rare infections who would die without it. She is, veritably, a walking blood bank in whose veins flow tiny anti-bodies with the power to attack and overwhelm infectious bloodstream organisms known as staphylococcus aurius and streptococcus viridans.

ROSE McMULLIN

She was resting yesterday, dividing her time between her home at 2524 Seventeenth Street Northwest and her new trailer in Washington Tourist Camp. The trailer is a model home on wheels built at the request of the Government as an experimental answer to the defense housing problem. It has three rooms and a bath. The first of its design, it was given Mrs. McMullin by the manufacturer.

Mrs. McMullin and her husband, William McMullin, a World War veteran, would like to take a nice leisurely trip in the trailer. But there isn't likely to be time for some months, because

Kellogg Pact Legalizes 'Armed' Aid to British, Stimson Tells House

Aid Bill Written to Enable U. S. to Buy Britain's Navy

Terms Designed to Prevent Her Fleet From Coming Into Hands of Germans; Deal for French Ships Also Anticipated

By George Bookman
Copyright, 1941, by The Washington Post

Two clauses in the Administration's "lend-lease" bill were written with the express purpose of giving the President power, if England falls, to buy the British Navy, to allow the British warships to operate from American ports, and to place orders for war materials in Canada, The Washington Post learned yesterday.

Further, the clauses were so written that the United States could acquire the remnants of the French navy, if the Vichy government could ever be persuaded to risk the possible consequences of such a transaction.

The language of the bill was intentionally drafted so that the President, providing the Vichy government cooperates, could remove a threat from the Caribbean by buying the French aircraft carrier Bearn and light cruiser Emile Bertin, now lying in the harbor of Fort de France, Martinique.

Officials who supplied this information admitted that the clauses are in the bill mainly to cope with the possibility of a British defeat in the next outburst of full Nazi blitzkrieg.

If the worst happens, it was explained, the United States and Canada would have to act as one in producing war materials, it would be of prime importance to keep the British navy out of German hands, and it might become a vital necessity to give the British warships shelter and operating bases in American ports.

The bill has been designed to accomplish these purposes, if the British

Roosevelt Asks Start at Once On Cargo Fleet

Calls on Congress For $350,000,000 To Build 200 Ships

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to authorize "immediate steps upon an emergency basis" to construct a fleet of 200 cargo ships.

Envisaging a "world shortage" of such vessels as a result of wartime shipping destruction, the President told Congress in a message that "the national interest" demands quick action.

The program would be placed in the hands of the Maritime Commission and would cost $350,000,000. The ships would be of steel construction and "of such type and design as will permit of their most rapid construction."

Full text of the President's message follows:

I am convinced that the national interest demands that immediate steps be taken upon an emergency basis to provide against the effect upon the United States of a possible world shortage of cargo vessels.

Therefore, I feel that there should be undertaken with the least possible delay the construction of not less than 200 steel cargo vessels, suitable for use in the present emergency and of such type and design as will permit of their most rapid construction.

Such a program of emergency shipbuilding should be entirely distinct from the long-range construction program with which the United States Maritime Commission is proceeding under the 1936 Merchant Marine Act, and interference with that program, as well as interference with the naval construction program, must be avoided.

Army to Test Raid Shelters For Best Type

Mass Output Aim, In Event U. S. Faces An Air Invasion

Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson yesterday announced a program designed to protect civilian America against possible bombings.

At a press conference the department spokesman revealed that Army Air Corps planes are soon to conduct extensive trial bombings of air raid shelters of the type now in use overseas as well as of designs recently developed by the Corps of Engineers.

The ability of various types of shelters to withstand the shock of high explosives will also be tested by "controlled detonation" from the ground.

The structures proving most dependable in the experiments would be produced on a large scale in the near future, it was understood, to provide a supply for the Nation's population centers against any air invasion.

At the same time Patterson disclosed the compilation of pamphlets with general information on protection from bombings, soon to be released to the public.

Ryan Unionists Walk Out

Threats to Draft Striking Plane Workers Assailed by Hershey

A strike at the Ryan Aeronautical Co. plant, at San Diego, Calif., was called last night in the face of threats from California Selective Service officials to stop deferment for company employes in event of a walkout.

The company's 1,600 workers are engaged on production of $7,500,000 worth of Army and Navy training planes. The company also has a backlog of $11,500,000 in orders for military planes.

Informed of the threatened reclassification of employes whose military training has been deferred because their tasks were considered vital to national defense, Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, acting director of the Selective Service, said it would be "contrary to the intent of the law."

Gen. Hershey said the California State Selective Service director would be asked for an explanation.

The strike will be called Tuesday, Richard Frankensteen, C. I. O. union negotiator, announced after a joint conference at San Diego of company officials, union negotiators and Harry A. Malcolm, Federal conciliator.

Company officials were reported to have refused to meet union demands for a pay increase of from 50 to 75 cents an hour. A company compromise proposal to increase minimum pay of inexperienced

'Stand on Law'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson maintained yesterday that the United States has the right under international law to supply Britain with arms and even to "assist with armed forces."

He did not urge the use of armed forces, but he claimed legal authority for every aid to Britain measure proposed in the Administration's loan-lease bill.

Stimson was testifying before the House Foreign Affairs Committee—third Government witness to appear on the "all out" measure.

He had warned that the United States is "in very great danger of invasion by air in the contingency that the British navy should be destroyed or surrendered."

He had asserted that the problem is "keeping war out of America."

He had said that the Navy's front line of defense has been moved to the middle Atlantic."

In answer to the question: "Are you in favor of going into this war?" he had replied:

Differs With Hull

Then he stepped out of his present War Department role and into his former field of foreign relations. He referred to Secretary of State Hull's statement Wednesday that the United States must rely on an older law—the law of self defense.

"I want to put it in the record here that we don't have to go that far—we don't have to stand alone on the law of self defense," said the 73-year-old former Secretary of State.

"We can stand on international law as it stood before the Axis powers started to tear down the structure of our world."

Urging swift enactment of a "clear grant of power" to the President to arm Britain, Stimson cited "Articles of Interpretation of the Briand-Kellogg pact" drawn in 1934 by the International Law Association in Budapest.

Jurists representing Germany, Italy and Japan and others of the 63 nations which signed the Kellogg pact agreed then that international law gave signatory nations the right to proceed against any signer which violated its pledge not to use armed force, he said.

Aid British, Bar War From U.S., Stimson Urges

Kellogg Pact Made Such Action Legal, House Hearing Told

Under this "authoritative" interpretation, Stimson said the United States has a legal footing for everything the pending loan-lease bill proposes in aid of Britain.

According to Stimson, here are three of the things the Budapest articles said the United States or other signers could do if one signatory resorted to armed force against another:

"Decline to observe toward the state violating the pact the duties prescribed by international law, apart from the pact, for a neutral in respect to a belligerent.

"Supply the state with financial or material assistance, including munitions of war.

"Assist with armed forces the state attacked."

Hammering home his contention that the United States is not breaching international law in aiding Britain, Stimson read the Budapest "Articles" to the committee.

After pointing out that Germany, Italy and Japan each signed the Kellogg pact, he stressed the following other points in the 1934 "interpretation:"

"A signatory state cannot, by denunciation or nonobservance of the pact, release itself from its obligations thereunder.

"A signatory state which threatens to resort to armed force for the solution of an international dispute or conflict is guilty of a violation of the pact.

Fish and Bloom Clash

As hearings recessed for the day, Chairman Bloom and Representative Fish, of New York, ranking minority committee member, engaged in a sharp verbal tiff over a long list of witnesses "invited" by Fish.

Later the committee met in executive session to iron out the tangle. These proceedings were kept secret. But Bloom disclosed that hearings will probably run all next week and the committee later will act on the Fish invitations. Indications were that at least four of those who showed "a desire to appear"—former President Hoover, Wendell L. Willkie, Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring Ambassador to Great Britain, and William C. Bullit, former Ambassador to France—would be invited by the committee.

Meanwhile bewhiskered Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, took the floor of the House to charge President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull "plotted against the peace and safety of the United States by knowingly and designedly committing the United States in advance to active participation in the present wars of Europe and Asia."

"I charge," said Tinkham, "that President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull have betrayed the American people and have been disloyal and traitorous to the United States, its integrity, its Constitution, its institutions, its traditions and its safety."

From Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, came the first isolationist reaction to the Stimson testimony.

"Every informed person in Washington knows," said Wheeler, "that Mr. Stimson was placed in the War Department because of his known prowar attitude. And every informed person knows that high officials of the War Department are today working on the assumption that we will probably be in the war by April 1."

He's Invited Back

Secretary of War Stimson testified through two morning hours of House Foreign Affairs hearings, and then was invited back for today. Secretary of Navy Knox will follow him either today or tomorrow, and then National Defense Commissioner William S. Knudsen.

Stimson, roused by cross-examination by Fish, rose several times and fairly shouted his replies.

One query that roiled him was an inquiry by the New Yorker on transfer of bombsights to the British.

"I do not care to make myself a voluntary channel for conveying information to Mr. Hitler," Stimson retorted. "There are some matters that I do not think advisable to discuss except in executive session."

Fish said he would demand that Stimson later answer questions in executive session, and Bloom shot back that there would be no executive session unless members pledged themselves to secrecy.

The New York Republican asked Stimson if he would object to a prohibition against releasing American warships to Britain.

Stimson said the Secretary of the Navy should answer that question, but for his own part he would object to such a prohibition. He said he could "foresee conditions" where such transfers might be made "to our advantage."

Fish asked at one point: "Has a plane been invented that will cross the Atlantic and bomb our cities?"

"There are many places short of the full width of the Atlantic which could serve as bases for air attacks on this country by a power controlling the Atlantic Ocean," Stimson replied.

Fish: "Are you speaking of South America?"

Stimson: "Newfoundland and northern Canada would be within easy bombing range of our New England coast."

Fish: "Are we in danger of invasion?"

Stimson: "I think we are in very great danger of invasion by air in the contingency that the British navy should be destroyed or surrendered."

Fish: "You don't fear invasion except by air?"

Stimson—"No. I didn't say that. I haven't been above learning a great deal about warfare in the last eight or nine months . . . We have seen nations go under with great suddenness. The Axis powers do not strike until they are ready. It is our paramount duty to help those nations that are holding back a movement which may reach us."

The Secretary of War said that while Congress has been generous with appropriations some members seemed to think that money for weapons could be appropriated on Monday and the weapons delivered on Tuesday.

Asked Fish: "There is a lag in production, is there not?"

"There will always be a lag," Stimson replied. "We have the job of transforming a peaceful democracy into a machine for the production of military materials. It involves a change in the nature of our business structure. Experts familiar with the job have always spoken of it as a two or three year job."

Fish—"Whose fault is it?"

Stimson—"It is nobody's fault. The time needed lies in the magnitude of the task, in the extent to which our business structure must be changed."

Fish—"How large an Army do you have now?"

Stimson—"The United States Army is in nowise as large or as well-trained as were the armies of Holland and Belgium last May when the German invasion began."

Fish—"Whose fault is that?"

Stimson—"Our own."

Fish—"We will soon have an Army of 1,400,000 men, will we not?"

Stimson—"No. We will soon have that many men but not an Army. Mr. Fish, you have been a soldier, as I have been. You know that 1,400,000 men do not make an army. You have been a football player, and you know the difference between 11 men and a football team. The men have to be trained and equipped before you have an army."

Fish—"I believe an Army of 1,400,000 men is all we need to defend the United States. Do you?"

Stimson—"No."

Fish—"Do you believe in the Monroe Doctrine?"

Stimson—"The Monroe Doctrine belongs to the time of sailing ships, not to the age of steam, electricity and motor power. You are a New Yorker, Mr. Fish, as I am. The defenses of New York City, once located at the Battery, have had to be moved further and further out. Now, as everyone who knows anything about warfare knows, our line of defense lies in the middle Atlantic."

Fish—"Our Navy is our first line of defense?"

Stimson—"Our first line of defense is our diplomacy, our efforts to make and retain friends. Our Navy is another line of defense. Our Army is our last line of defense. We want to keep possible attack from reaching that last line so far as we can."

Army Sergeant's Trailer Gets Landowner Into Trouble

ON THE SPOT—Sergt. Roy Wood (left), who has been ordered to move his trailer-home from the Spot Tavern property, discusses situation with Mrs. Nena Edwards, tavern manager, and Andrew H. Gast, owner of the property. While sitting in the trailer, they look over zoning commissioner's order to move

For allowing an Army sergeant stationed at Fort Myer to park a trailer on his property, Andrew H. Gast, of 1200 North Fort Myer Drive, Arlington, was found guilty of violating the county zoning ordinance in the county court yesterday. The case was continued until next Thursday by Judge B. M. Hedrick, for passing of sentence.

Sergt. Roy R. Wood, of Troop A, Third Calvary, arrived at Fort Myer from Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont, about October 1. He offered in evidence a letter from First Lieut. E. A. Luckenbach, acting adjutant of the Third Calvary, stating: "There are no quarters available for Sergt. Wood at this post."

Donald R. Locke, Zoning Administrator, who swore to the warrant against Gast, testified that Sergt. Wood could not live in his trailer within the county, even at a licensed camp, for more than 60 days during any one year.

Gast pointed out that he does not operate a trailer camp, but that his store fronts a Government road, patrolled by Fort Myer military police and he felt he was doing a service in permitting the sergeant to park the trailer in his side yard. He also presented a petition signed by 15 neighbors declaring that they had no objection to the trailer. Gast's property is zoned as local business.

A rough and unofficial estimate of the money value of the British navy now afloat was given as between $6,000,000,000 and $8,000,000,000.

If the British were defeated in their homeland, and wanted to seek the safety of American ports in a hurry, it might not even be necessary for the United States to actually buy his majesty's vessels, it was said. Simply allowing them to use our ports might accomplish the same purpose.

On the other hand, these same sources said that the United States might be in a clearer legal position if it bought the ships.

The bill contemplates both possibilities.

Section III, Subsection A, paragraph 3, of the "lend-lease" bill now being discussed by the House Foreign Affairs Committee contains the authority to base British or even French vessels here.

It authorizes the Government to "test, inspect, prove, repair, outfit, recondition, or otherwise to place in good working order any defense article for any such government under paragraph 2 of this subsection." The governments referred to are those "whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States." For the present, that is believed to apply mainly to Great Britain, Greece, China and all countries in this hemisphere. The list could be expanded by simple proclamation of the President, under terms of the bill.

Section VIII contains authority, officials told The Post, for the President to acquire the British navy in an emergency, or perhaps the remainder of the French fleet, or for that matter any military equipment of nations fighting the Axis.

The section reads:

"The Secretaries of War and of the Navy are hereby authorized to purchase or otherwise acquire arms, ammunition and implements of war produced within the jurisdiction of any country to which Section III is applicable, whenever the President deems such purchase or acquisition to be necessary in the interests of the defense of the United States."

Authorities who explained this language said that it had been so written primarily to permit the U. S. Government to draw on Canadian resources and factories in the event of an extreme emergency. This would bind the United States and its northern neighbor into one for purposes of self-protection.

But also in the minds of those who worked on the bill, it was said, was provision for acquiring the British navy.

When France fell to the German armies, disposition of the French fleet became a prime question of defense for Great Britain. Some units of the republic's navy have been reported to be cooperating with the British and with Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French forces. Other units were destroyed in battles with the British navy. Still others are believed to be in control of the Vichy government and perhaps at the disposal of Germany or Italy.

Bearing these facts and reports in mind, officials who wrote the lend-lease bill wanted to give the United States Government authority to prevent the British fleet, if England meets disaster, from suffering the same fate as the French.

It was officially admitted yesterday that it would not be feasible now for Washington to negotiate with Vichy for purchase of the remaining French vessels, or even for purchase of the Bearn and the Emile Bertin. Probability of reprisals upon French officials by the German authorities was given as the reason for ruling out such a transaction for the present.

Active attempts to swing Vichy officials into opposition to their German conquerors have been reported, however, in recent weeks.

Lend-Lease Gets Dry Goods Men's Approval

National Retail Group Hears Adm. Woodward Discuss Naval Defense

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 16.—Convention delegates of the National Retail Dry Goods Association voted approval of President Roosevelt's "lend-lease" defense bill today, then heard Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward suggest that acquisition of new naval bases in South America would make the United States "nearly impregnable to attack from either the Atlantic or Pacific."

Admiral Woodward, who is commandant of the Third Naval District, did not indicate whether the United States has engaged in negotiation for such bases, presumably with the governments of Brazil and Ecuador.

The association, representing 5,700 retail stores throughout the Nation, is one of the largest business organizations in the world. The delegates gave their approval to the defense bill by a unanimous voice vote in the main ballroom of the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Favor "Reasonable" Restraint

"We, the members of the National Retail Dry Goods Association," the delegates declared, "support the present program before Congress for the full implementation of our national defenses and for maximum aid to Great Britain and its allied democracies in the struggle against totalitarianism . . .

"We believe, in keeping with true democratic process, that certain reasonable limitations upon such grant of power (to the Chief Executive), particularly as to time, should be established but that they should not in any way restrict the full and immediate assistance for which this world crisis calls."

The retailers also instructed the officers of the association to set up a committee to collect funds "for the relief of destitute British drapers," the English term for retailers.

Admiral Woodward was the chief speaker at the association's thirtieth annual banquet.

F. R. Mayfield Reelected

The new naval base possibilities mentioned in his prepared address were "along the northeastern shore of South America, where the distance to the potentially threatening West African coast is shortest," and "in eastern equatorial Pacific waters, such as Gallapagos and Cocos Islands." (Areas in these zones are mainly under the sovereignty of Brazil and Ecuador, respectively.)

The delegates reelected Frank M. Mayfield, president of the St. Louis department store of Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, Inc., for a second term as president of the association.

They also elected five regional vice presidents, as follows: New England, George Hansen, of Chandler & Co., Boston; Middle Atlantic, W. H. Burchfield, of Joseph Horne Co., Pittsburgh; South, W. A. Green, Jr., of W. A. Green Co., Dallas; Middle West, Jay Iglauer, of Halle Bros. Co., Cleveland; West, Col. Robert A. Roos, of Roos Brothers, San Francisco.

Define Powers In Lease Bill, Hoover Urges

Ex-President Cites 'Growing Bitterness Of Discussion' in U. S.

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 16.—Former President Herbert Hoover called today on the House Foreign Affairs Committee to draft immediately into the proposed aid-to-Britain bill positive definitions of the powers to be given President Roosevelt.

In a letter to Committee Chairman Sol Bloom (Democrat), New York, Hoover said:

"There is unfortunately growing up in the country a bitterness of discussion which it seems to me in the interest of national unity could be allayed by the committee. This division lies largely in the interpretations and implications in respect to the powers proposed to be conferred in this bill and its meaning."

Hoover, asserting that he favored extending "every practicable aid, short of war, to Britain," but that he did "not approve of our joining in the war," listed several points on which the controversy centered.

Public Assumptions

"For example," he wrote, "citizens of high patriotic thought and experience, who desire to support the President, believe that under the bill and even without any supplemental action by the Congress:

"That battleships and other naval vessels could be given away;

"That our our defense could be vitally impaired by giving away Army equipment;

"That equipment and materials provided in the bill could be transported through the war zone in American ships convoyed by the American Navy;

"That commodities and articles could be purchased in other countries with our money;

"That alien ships now in sanctuary in our harbors could be seized;

"That it opens American ports to repair of belligerent vessels and makes such ports bases for belligerent operations and may become the objective of them;

"That the program of gifts to Britain could begin before the very considerable resources now available to the British government in the United States had been first called upon as payment or collateral;

"That the bill could cancel parts of the labor laws, the Johnson Act, the Neutrality Act, the Hague conventions and possibly other laws;

"That it empowers involvement in war as distinguished from a declaration of war by the Congress."

Hoover said there were many other questions which have been raised, among them time and expenditures limits, and added:

"It seems to me urgent that these matters should be at once clarified because the public mind si apprehensive and confused.

"If the committee would at once draft into the bill positive definitions of what these powers are and specifically exclude what they are not, I am sure such an early action would enable concrete debate and eliminate much controversy and bitterness. As I said, it would greatly contribute to national unity."

Threat to Draft Strikers Assailed

workers from 50 to 58 cents was rejected by the union.

Lieut. Comdr. Maurice Sparling, U. S. N. R., liaison officer attached to State draft headquarters, was reported by the Associated Press to be telling local draft boards that workers placed in a deferred class because of their employment in the Ryan plant would not be entitled to retain deferred status should they walk out.

Later, Ralph B. Elm, a local draft board chairman in California, declared he would have "no sympathy with defense workers who struck," the Associated Press reported. This drew from Lou Michener, regional C. I. O. United Automobile Workers Union director, a telegram to Gov. Olson demanding Elm's removal.

The Selective Service System, Gen. Hershey said, "is not in a position to use induction as a threat to force a man to do something or to restrain him from some course of action.

"It is one thing if a man's employment has been terminated and he is not likely to be reemployed for some time. But a man on strike is still an employe."

Hershey observed that questions of occupational deferment of men of military age are decided by local boards from which a selectee has appeal to regional boards. However, he said, the President has legal power to intervene.

Hershey said use of threats to reclassify deferred defense workers as an antistrike weapon has never before come up and that Selective Service headquarters have not even considered the question, let alone advised such a course.

"We are always opposed to use of the system for purposes for which it was not intended," he said. "This is an industrial dispute and we are not policemen."

Other defense labor developments yesterday:

The National Labor Relations Board dismissed a C. I. O. petition for collective bargaining certification at the Saginaw (Mich.) plant of the Eaton Manufacturing Co. The decision came one day after settlement of strikes tying up five Eaton plants making airplane motor parts.

The Gallup Poll

Public Opinion by Small Maority Opposes Sending Supplies to Britain in U. S. Ships

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 16.—One of the biggest issues of the next few months is certain to be the question of sending war materials to Britain in American ships.

It is argued on the one hand, that there is no use making America an "arsenal of democracy" if, owing to British shipping losses in the Atlantic, our arms and war materials cannot be transported across the ocean to the people who need them most. On the other hand, many experts believe that sending American ships with these materials into the war zone will ultimately mean war.

The Institute, through a Nationwide interviewing staff, put this question to a cross-section of the American voting public:

"Since the English have lost many ships, they may not be able to come and get the war materials we make for them. If this proves to be the case, should American ships with American crews be used to carry war materials to England?"

The results indicate that public sentiment is about evenly divided, with a slight majority against the proposal.

Yes	42%
No	45
Undecided	13

What makes these results especially interesting is their contrast with the results of a poll made in September, 1939—the first month of the European war. That survey found an overwhelming desire among the American voters to keep United States ships out of the war area. The issue was stated then as follows:

"Should the United States allow American ships to carry goods anywhere, or should our ships be kept out of the war zone?"

The vote of those with opinions was:

Sept. 1939
Keep Ships Out of War Zone	84%
Let Them Go Anywhere	16

Only one in 17 (6 per cent) expressed no opinion.

The issue of sending ships to Britain has one further aspect which was explored in today's survey. Should the American Navy be used to guard American ships crossing to England? This issue was put to persons who had voted in favor of sending the ships, with the following result:

"If American ships and American crews are used to carry war materials to England, should these ships be guarded by our Navy while crossing?"

Vote of Persons Who Favor Sending American Ships

Navy Should Convoy These Ships	82%
Should Not	12

Bloom, Fish In Verbal Tiff At Hearings

'I Did'—'You Didn't' Row Enlivens Session On Lease-Loan Bill

The team of Sol Bloom and Ham Fish, which isn't hitched for double harness and seldom pulls the same way, enlivened dignified House loan-lease hearings yesterday with a little act all their own.

It seems Fish had gone ahead and "invited" eight witnesses when Bloom just told him to "ask" them. It was just a case of "You did" and "I didn't" and "I did" and "You didn't" as spectators crowded in for an earful.

Fish had called the loan measure "the dictatorship bill." Bloom said this was "absurd." Fish had announced hearings for ten days. Bloom said he had no right to do so.

Ham said Sol was being "ridiculous" and Sol returned the compliment.

Later the full committee went into executive session to straighten things out. It apparently succeeded. Bloom and Fish received reporters again, this time in smiling companionship. Bloom called Fish "Ham" and Fish called Bloom "Sol."

"Any news?" asked reporters.

Bloom looked at Fish and Fish looked at Bloom.

"The committee," said the chairman, "has instructed its members to say nothing."

Morgenthau Insists Britain Lacks Funds

Cites 'Inside' Figures To Explain Difference In Estimates

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau insisted yesterday that, to the best of his knowledge, the British government has no assets it "could lay its hands on" beyond the $1,775,000,000 of gold, cash and securities which he reported to Congress Wednesday.

Pressed by reporters at a press conference to explain discrepancies between the British "balance sheet" he showed Congress and figures issued by the Federal Reserve Board and the Commerce Department, the Treasury Secretary said he was satisfied that the British had no expendable assets further than the figure he had named.

Morgenthau told Congress that Britain anticipated expenditures in 1941 requiring $3,019,000,000 in dollar exchange, that her dollar receipts for the year would be $1,555,000,000, leaving a deficit of $1,464,000,000.

Paying off the bills with available assets will leave $311,000,000.

As he revealed these facts under questioning, the Treasury Secretary also discloses that the British government has spent almost all of its $3,000,000,000 currency equalization fund which it formerly used to support sterling and allied currencies in emergencies.

A study by the Federal Reserve Board had said that the British owned gold and dollar resources totaling roughly $7,000,000,000.

Morgnthau explained the difference between the figures by saying that the British government had made available information to him that was not available to the Federal Reserve Board. He also pointed out that the FRB calculations were in many instances based on projections of figures not released after the war began in September, 1939.

Other officials who were reminded that the United Kingdom was shown in a tabulation released by Morgenthau Wednesday to have $3,868,000,000 of long-term foreign investments outside the United States, said that few of these investments could be readily liquidated.

They pointed out that defaults, exchange difficulties, tariff barriers and sea warfare would make transfer of many of these properties to Americans a difficult task.

Roosevelt Asks Start on 200 Ships

necessary shipyard facilities for the building of these emergency cargo ships should therefore be provided, so far as necessary, specifically for that purpose, in the simplest possible manner and in the shortest possible time. Title to such special facilities should in most instances vest in the Government, but the managerial abilities of private contractors must be utilized to the utmost in the construction of facilities and ships.

By making use of the experience and administrative facilities of the Maritime Commission and by clothing that agency with appropriate authority, the contemplated emergency program can be handled most effectively and expeditiously and without the creation of any new or special governmental agency.

Because of the urgency of the situation, and after consultation with the Office of Production Management with respect both to the necessity for immediate action and to the coordination of this ship construction with other phases of the national defense program, I have already allocated to the Maritime Commission the sum of $500,000 from the emergency fund for the President contained in the Military Appropriation Act, 1941, and have authorized the commission to enter into contracts for these purposes to the extent of $36,000,000 under the contractual authority contained in said appropriation.

Total $350,000,000

An immediate appropriation is necessary for the payment of such contracts, and the proposed resolution provides that the appropriation contained therein shall be available for their liquidation and other expenditures pursuant to this program.

The commission estimates that the total cost of this program will be $350,000,000. The $313,500,000 provided in the attached joint resolution, together with the $500,000 allocated from the emergency fund for the President, and the $36,000,000 which will be available on July 1, 1941, for the payment of obligations incurred under authority already provided, will make up this amount.

In view of the emergency, I ask your immediate and favorable consideration of the attached draft of joint resolution.

Airline, Plagued by Cupid, Seeks More Hostesses Here

Official Has to Recruit Them Fast To Keep Ahead of Wily Son of Aphrodite; 20 Pretty District Nurses Interviewed

Cupid brought Herschel E. Fowler from New York to Washington yesterday, but he wasn't seeking a romance. He merely wanted to see what Washington had to offer in the way of airline hostesses.

The airlines, it seems, have more trouble with Cupid than with Old Man Weather. No sooner does the airline find and train a hostess, than Cupid also finds her and woos her away.

And that is why Fowler was here yesterday. Fowler is assistant personnel director for American Airlines. He had a date at the Ambassador with 20 nurses between the ages of 21 and 26, who besides having good health, personality and poise, presented a pleasant variety of good looks.

Fowler does only the preliminary picking, he explained to reporters. His selectees then have to be approved by other interviewers in New York before starting six weeks of training.

Fowler cautioned the camermen that he drew the line against "leg pictures," because "they are undignified and not in keeping with American Airlines' policy.

Photographers nodded sympathetically, in fact, understandingly. And if there were any "leg pictures" taken, it must have been by accident.

House Gets $1,209,000,000 Naval Bill; Quick Passage Seen

The House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday approved a Navy request for $909,000,000 to expand America's shipbuilding and naval ordnance capacity and provide the fleet with 400 minesweepers, torpedo boats and submarine chasers.

The House leadership, acting swiftly on the naval committee's recommendation, announced that the authorization bill will be given the right of way when the House assembles Tuesday after the inaugural ceremonies.

Also scheduled for House consideration Tuesday is a $300,000,000 authorization to strengthen the fleet's defenses against air attack, approved by the naval committee Wednesday.

Both bills, described by Naval officers as essential in the light of lessons from the European war, are expected to pass the House without delay. The Navy will call for immediate appropriation of about one-quarter of the $1,209,000,000 authorized under the two bills, in order to begin construction of the small, auxiliary ships designed to combat mines and submarines.

Another bill expected to receive committee approval today would authorize each member of Congress to appoint five midshipmen to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, instead of four. The measure, introduced by Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, is intended to furnish an adequate supply of officers for the two-ocean Navy now taking shape. If approved by the committee today, the legislation will come before the House Tuesday or Wednesday.

Rear Admiral Samuel E. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships, and Rear Admiral W. R. Furlong, chief of naval ordnance, testified briefly before the committee yesterday, as the final draft of the $909,000,000 authorization was prepared.

As the bill now stands, it allocates $315,000,000 to expansion of shipbuilding facilities, $194,000,000 for increasing ordnance output and $400,000,000 for submarine chasers, torpedo boats and other auxiliary vessels.

30 Nazi Planes Burned, British Say

British fleet. But the Germans on their first time out in the Mediterranean managed to destroy one of the best cruisers the British have, and in addition to inflict serious damage on one of their newest aircraft carriers, the Illustrious.

It is true the British fleet can suffer heavier losses than this—but not much heavier—and still dominate the Mediterranean. It is true that even while the Illustrious and the Southampton were being bombed, the convoy which they were protecting slipped safely through the Mediterranean, so the operation in itself must be regarded as a British victory.

It may also be true that the British shot down many more hostile planes than the conservative 12 they claimed officially.

But against these arguments a careful observer must place the fact that at least a skirmish has been won in the old, old fight between battleship and airplane, and has been won by the airplane.

Another admiralty announcement showed that the British still control the Mediterranean. The submarine Pandora has returned to port with the scalps of two Italian supply ships at her belt. They were both of about 5,000 tons and both were proceeding southward in the central Mediterranean. One had a deckload of trucks.

Federal Jury Gets 'I Am' Mail Fraud Case

Los Angeles, Jan. 16 (AP).—The mail fraud case of Mrs. Edna Ballard and eight other leaders of the "I Am" religious movement tonight was received by a Federal Court jury after a trial that lasted more than seven weeks.

Mrs. Ballard, widow of the "I Am" movement, and the other defendants were accused of obtaining $3,000,000 through the sale of books about the organization and from "love offerings" of followers.

'Leak' of War Supplies to Axis Worries U. S.

South America Transships Vital Materials to Italy

Concern over the export of vital United States war materials, some transshipped to the Axis from South American nations via Italian commercial airplanes, was reported yesterday in defense circles.

The shipments, consisting of small items of high value, such as tools for precision instruments, tungsten wire, industrial diamonds, platinum, radio equipment, quartz crystals and the like, are said to be increasing. They are carried from Rio de Janeiro to Rome by planes of the Linee Aeree Transcontinental Italiane, known as L. A. T. I.

L. A. T. I.'s devious activities, in choosing various routes and dispatching "blind" planes to deceive any possible interceptors, have been the subject of increasing reports from South America. The line is also seen by the British as a highly important communication channel for Axis financial transactions needing speedy consummation.

Defense officials said it was "likely" that certain American products, particularly radio parts and precision tools, were being sent under bona fide papers to Brazil or other South American countries, whence they are flown to Rome. It would be "almost impossible" to detect and stop such shipments, they said.

American machine-tool producers have recently reported to officials here intensified German buying of industrial diamonds in Brazil. Such purchases were begun first a year ago, but were discontinued when Germany overran the Low Countries and captured "enormous" diamond stores in Holland and Belgium. Brazilian purchases have lately been revived, they declared.

Fireman, 2 Others Hurt as Flames Destroy Dwelling

Three persons, including a District fireman, were injured yesterday when fire from an overheated oil stove destroyed a two-story frame house at 706 Barry Place Northwest.

Herford White, colored, 47, in whose room the stove was located, was severely burned on his face, arms and legs. Another resident of the house, Annie B. Guest, colored, 27, suffered a sprained back when she jumped from a second-floor window. Both were treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

The fireman, Leon H. Winstead, 33, of No. 6 Truck Company, received a cut to his left knee when struck by flying glass. His injury was not serious.

Text of Stimson Statement On Lease Bill

Invasion a Peril If British Lose Fleet, House Group Told

The text of Secretary Stimson's statement before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the aid-to-Britain bill follows:

In what I have to say upon this bill, I propose to confine myself so far as possible to the matters which have come under my observation as Secretary of War. In respect to the wider aspects of world conditions which the bill is designed to meet, I assume that you gentlemen have been fully advised by the Secretary of State. And in respect to the financial questions of credit, security and international exchange which may be involved in the transactions made possible by this bill, I assume that you have been advised by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Furthermore, I assume that this bill is based upon the proposition that the effective defense of this country in the pending emergency depends in large part upon our giving effective help to Great Britain and perhaps to other nations defending themselves against the Axis powers. The fact that this policy is favored by our people seems to be abundantly established by the long series of events during the past 16 months since the war broke out, and I do not propose to discuss it here.

It is sufficient to recall to your committee the consistent utterances of the President throughout that period on this subject; the action of the Congress in October, 1939, in repealing the automatic embargo legislation and thus permitting Great Britain and France to purchase weapons from our nationals; the statements of the two candidates during the past campaign on the subject of rendering assistance to Great Britain; and the various well-known actions which have been taken by our Government, with the obvious approval of the people as a whole, in assisting Great Britain by the transfer to it, directly and indirectly, of munitions of both military and naval character.

Own Observations

On its face this bill is intended "further to promote" the defense of the United States by facilitating this assistance to governments "whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States." With these things assumed or admitted, I propose to discuss from the standpoint of my own observation the importance of the enactment of such a bill in order to expedite the production of arms and munitions; to produce them with much greater economy to all governments involved; and eventually to provide assurance to this country that the distribution of these weapons and munitions at the time of their completion will be to the governments which can use them most effectively with reference to the defense and welfare of the United States.

In the first place, let me point out how much more acute is the present emergency and how much more dangerous is the situation of our own country with reference to the time element in the production of munitions of defense than it was in 1917. Then, as now, we were engaged in the same problem of preparing munitions for our defense.

In 1917 there was a stable front line in France, safely held by the Allies against Germany. Italy and Japan were arrayed against Germany on the side of Britain and France. The British, French, Italian, and Japanese fleets were in practically complete control of all of the oceans of the world. Today Italy and Japan are members of the German Axis. France is conquered and her fleet is incapable of opposing the Central Powers. The British fleet today stands alone as an obstacle to German control of the Atlantic.

Principal Arsenals

In 1917 the munition factories and supplies of Great Britain and France were so abundant that they were able to supply, and did supply to us, the great bulk of the weapons which we then needed. In spite of our own efforts at munition production during the year and a half of our participation in the war, France and Britain furnished us with substantially all of the airplanes, the artillery and with a large proportion of the rifles and machine guns which we used, as well as with great stores of ammunition for those weapons. In other words, those countries constituted our principal arsenals and furnished us with the bulk of our most important weapons. Today many arsenals in conquered countries such as France are at the service of the Axis nations; and Great Britain, far from being in a position to come to our assistance with munitions, is compelled to enter our markets for a substantial quantity of weapons for her own use.

Instead of being assisted by other nations in obtaining the weapons needed for our own defense, we are obliged to prepare our defense in consideration of their needs. This constitutes almost a complete reversal of the situation with which we were then confronted. Instead of being able leisurely to pick and choose and deliberately to arm ourselves, relying upon the then existing stability on the other side of the Atlantic, we are not only compelled to arm ourselves entirely by our own efforts but to do so at the very time when it is imperative that our American industry and plants should be working at top speed to furnish vital weapons of defense to Great Britain in order that she may meet the crisis which is confronting her this spring and summer, and thus preserve her fleet as a bulwark in the Atlantic Ocean.

I think it is manifest that in such a situation every possible effort should be made to simplify all steps in the production of the munitions which in the last analysis are to constitute our defense. I also think it is manifest that expeditious means and clear authority must be provided to assure the prompt distribution of munitions to countries whose defense is important to us. To be alert in our defense we must have flexible means with which to act.

Essence of the Plan

It is the essence of the President's plan, as I understand it, that the United States shall become virtually the sole purchasing unit for war materials to be ordered from the manufacturers of this country; that there will thus be constituted one great funnel through which all the production of such materials in this country will be ordered and through which the materials when finished will flow from the production lines; and that, consistent with our national policy, as it has been enunciated and indorsed by the Congress and the people, we shall then be in a position to apportion these munitions among ourselves and other democracies whose defense is important to us.

This plan has many advantages. It will eliminate the competition of many different purchasing agencies from different countries. I am informed that there are or have been at least a dozen different purchasing commissions from foreign countries operating in this country since the outbreak of this war. It has also the advantage of enabling the manufacturer to carry out all his dealings with but one purchaser—a purchaser with which, in many cases, he has already been in contact over a number of years. Much wasteful duplication of effort and conflict of aims will thus be avoided. It enables us to build a well-ordered system of placing contracts and to utilize and carry into effect the studies which have been made over a period of 20 years by our Army and Navy officials in preparation for just such an emergency as we now face. Our Ordnance Department and Quartermaster Corps, for example, are composed of experienced officers who have been in constant touch with manufacturers in this country who know the American system of production and business methods, and who, with the assistance of the Office of Production Management, are in a position to deal effectively with those manufacturers. The representatives of the foreign purchasing commissions have no such advantage.

The proposed bill will permit such a plan to be carried out inasmuch as it will empower the President to authorize existing Government departments to procure munitions for other countries.

Degree of Control

The plan also authorizes the utilization of our existing Government establishments for the general defense. The Government of the United States has in the past spent many millions of dollars in the erection and maintenance of our arsenals; in the training of the men who operate them; and in the establishment of inspection forces and proving grounds. These establishments are designed for the production of munitions of war. In a peaceful democracy such as ours, they are the very spearhead of an armament production effort. But under existing law it is, in most cases, impossible to use those facilities except for the particular needs of our own armed forces.

The proposed bill will enable these facilities to be used for the benefit of the countries which the President shall designate. Thus, they may be used to their fullest extent not only for our own direct defense, but for our indirect defense by making them available to others where our own interests so require. If we are to render material aid to Great Britain, it would appear that we should certainly be in a position to supplement the efforts of our private industry by the special skill, knowledge and equipment of the only existing American munitions industry—namely, our governmental arsenals.

Finally, and perhaps most important of all, is the degree of control which, under the plan described above, it is possible to retain in the hands of this Government with respect to the distribution of the munitions of defense. Not only will this bill permit the authority of our Government to be placed behind the solution of the our over-all defense production, but it likewise enables it to control the distribution of the products of this program when they are ready for delivery.

The munitions of defense can and will be distributed in accordance with strategic conditions which obtain at the time of the distribution. Those who are interested primarily in the defense of this country and this hemisphere will be the ones who will make the plans for distribution—namely, members of the American Government. Naturally, our conduct at such times will be governed by the interests of the defense of this country. Far from being a surrender of our rights to other interests, however worthy, the provisions of this bill make it possible to place in American hands this important power and responsibility.

Compilation of Statutes

I wish to emphasize another feature of the bill. It gives authority to the Commander in Chief to authorize the transfer, sale, lease or other disposition of defense articles on such terms as he deems satisfactory. There are many existing statutes which relate to the disposition of War Department material, and authority to dispose of many types of military equipment can now be found in those statutes. But these statutes have been passed sporadically during a long period of time and have never been codified or revised so as to form a reasonable or workable program of action. On rather short notice I have had prepared a compilation of such statutes; and that compilation is at the disposition of this committee.

The terms and conditions imposed on the transfer vary with the different types of equipment in a way which is haphazard and in many cases totally unrelated to existing conditions. In many cases any efforts to dispose expeditiously of a complete unit of military equipment cannot be effected without enormous delay. In many cases the conditions imposed by the existing statutes are virtually impossible of fulfillment, although other practicable terms equally beneficial to the United States could be easily suggested. Often the statute will authorize the disposition of the component parts of a unit and yet it will not authorize the disposition of the complete unit equipped to function as an effective weapon.

In such a confused situation of the law, you can see how impossible it would be thereunder to render the effective aid to Great Britain which is called for in the present crisis. If we wish to proceed in a prompt and effect manner, it is essential in my judgment that the Congress provide now in one bill specific and clear authority to transfer all kinds of military equipment, limited only to the determination by the Commander in Chief of considerations necessary for our own defense. Such authority is contained in paragraph 3 (A) of this bill.

I think it may be well to call attention of this committee to the fact that this bill is not a radical departure from existing legislation. Under the so-called Pittman Act (Public Resolution No. 83, Seventy-sixth Congress), enacted on June 15, 1940, the President may do for American republics many of the things that are proposed to be authorized in this act for all democracies whose defense is important to us. Under the Pittman Act the President may authorize the manufacture in Government factories and arsenals of coast defense articles, antiaircraft material and ammunition therefor.

For the benefit of American republics he may authorize the procurement or sale of such material, and may use Government officials to test, prove, or repair it, and he may also authorize the construction of their vessels of war in our shipyards, the manufacture of armament and equipment for such vessels in Government arsenals, as well as other acts of this nature, including the communication of Government plans and specifications and information relating to the defense articles covered by that act. I think it is manifest that today the defense of Great Britain is of at least as great concern to the United States as, say, the defense of Paraguay.

To summarize: I feel that the proposed bill is a forthright and clear grant of power which will enable the President to place in operation the best and simplest plan to carry out a national policy many times stated and indorsed. It substantially assists us in the job of caring for our own needs and the needs of those whose defense is a matter of vital importance to us. But it leaves in our hands the power to determine at the time when the munitions are completed the country which shall receive them, and thus to insure that this vital decision is made solely in the interest of the defense of the United States. I therefore urge that it be given prompt and favorable consideration by your committee.

Give Roosevelt Power to Fight Dictators, Willkie Urges

New York, Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Wendell L. Willkie in an impromptu speech on the Town Hall of the Air radio program tonight, urged "all Americans" to give President Roosevelt all the powers he needs to carry out his aid-to-Britain program so "we can debate with him again in another free election."

The former Republican Presidential candidate said he believed that if Britain collapses, "within a few years the free way of life will pass from America."

"We will keep America out of war if we supply to the fighting men of Britain the resources they need to defeat and crush the ruthless dictators," he said.

Willkie was a guest at N. B. C.'s weekly town hall meeting to hear a debate between Norman Thomas and Dr. Frank Kingdon on the President's lend-lease program. Willkie spoke extemporaneously at the invitation of Moderator George Denny.

He was given an ovation when he appeared and was applauded when he urged support of the President.

A condensed text of Willkie's statement follows:

"If I believed that Britain would collapse and America could survive economically, then I would not take a single risk in involving this country in any international entanglement. But if, on the other hand, I believed, as I do believe, that if Britain collapses, within a few years the free way of life will pass from America, then even I, who opposed the election of President Roosevelt with all the resources of my being, would grant to him such extraordinary powers as might be needed.

"We shall not keep America out of war by mere strong statements. We will keep America out of war if we supply to the fighting men of Britain the resources they need to defeat and crush the ruthless dictators.

"We shall not preserve this great standard of living in America by withdrawing within ourselves. It is only in expanding trade, in the opening of the world markets, in the peace that will come after the crushing of dictatorship, that America can go on to its greater development. I, who opposed Franklin Roosevelt with all my resources, I call on all Americans to give him such power in this crisis that we can save America so that we can debate with him again in another election."

British Turn Wilhelmshaven Into 'Inferno'

R. A. F. Pilot Calls 2 Huge Raids 'More Like Stoking Than Bombing'

Copyright by New York Times

London, Jan. 16.—The British carried out heavy, concentrated raids Wednesday night on big shipbuilding dry docks at Wilhelmshaven, main base of the German North Sea fleet, according to tonight's air ministry communique.

Bombers of the Royal Air Force had been there 39 times before but never in such force. It was a sort of double-header raid, for it was carried out by two separate waves of attackers, one of which bombed the objective from 8 p. m. to midnight and the other from 5 to 6 a. m. today.

The chief point of attack was Bauhaven, a great square harbor joined by the Haven Canal to outer harbors and the sea. Around this protected basin are crowded slipways, docks, engineering works of all kinds, storehouses, assembling sheds, armor plate shops, foundries, iron works and gun stores.

Antiaircraft Fire Terrific

In the dry dock of Marinewerfte to the north 24 submarines could be built at the same time, and the harbor itself, with its great floating cranes, is designed to accommodate the largest warships.

The main railway station at Wilhelmshaven lies a few hundred yards to the southwest, but there are power stations and many naval barracks near by. This whole section was set afire by incendiary and heavy bombs, the air ministry said.

There are few places in Germany as well defended as this important naval base, and the antiaircraft fire was terrific. While R. A. F. bombers were concentrating their attack on Wilhelmshaven, planes of the coastal command were hammering Brest and other ports on the continent where Adolf Hitler has been gathering boats and barges, supposedly for an invasion attempt. Towns included in this assault were Emden, Bremerhaven, Rotterdam, Flushing.

From all these operations, the air ministry said, only one British plane failed to return. Before this one was lost, it was said, its crew reported by wireless that it had successfully carried out its mission. Pilots who did return said they had turned Wilhelmshaven into an "inferno," and one described the night's work as "more like stoking than bombing."

Fires Guide Next Planes

So successfully did the first wave of bombers carry out their mission that the later waves of aircraft had only to find the Dutch coast, whence the glow of fires guided them across Holland and 50 miles of Germany to the spot they were seeking.

When the second attack was made before dawn, Bauhaven was still encircled by walls of fire, and smoke from fires concealed part of the town. The pilots said they had no difficulty finding the dock yards, and indications were that their follow-up attack was as successful within its limits as the earlier and heavier raid.

Rep. Cox Brands Walter Reuther 'A Violent Red'

By the Associated Press

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, declared in the House yesterday that Walter Reuther, of the C. I. O.'s Auto Workers Union, was "as violent a Red as was ever turned loose on the American public by Russian communism."

Cox's outburst came when he obtained consent to place in the Congressional Record the "full details" regarding Reuther.

Reuther's plan for mass production of aircraft in automobile plants recently was submitted to President Roosevelt.

Cox's statement said it was "rumored" that Reuther would be named a special assistant to Sidney Hillman in the Office of Production Management.

It contained a letter which Cox said was identified as having been written by Walter Reuther and his brother, Victor, from Russia in 1934. After praising working conditions and other "great things in the U. S. S. R.," the letter said:

"Carry on the fight for a Soviet America."

Fire Bombs Rain on Three English Towns

Two Quick Thrusts On London Reach Capital's Outskirts

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Jan. 17.—German raiders showered two west English towns with fire bombs last night while limiting their assaults on London to two quick thrusts which drew intensive antiaircraft fire in the capital's outskirts.

An east coast town also was the target for incendiary bombs.

These assaults came amid indications that Britain's constant research on the problem of night defense against bombers had not, in the words of Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair, "gone altogether unrewarded."

"No decisive result can be expected immediately," he told a Glasgow audience, and an air ministry news service bulletin cautiously credited one of the increasing number of night fighter planes being used with shooting down two German bombers last night, one over London and the other over Essex.

(The German high command acknowledged no losses.)

Two other problems in the defense of London received attention.

Malcolm MacDonald, minister of health, ordered compulsory removal from the entire metropolitan area of all children under 14 considered likely to suffer "in mind or body" from air attacks if they remain in the capital or its outskirts.

Earlier, all Britons between 16 and 60 learned they would be compelled to register for duty as fire guards under a draft order signed by Herbert Morrison, minister of security.

Two other coast towns (the Germans identified one as Dover) were attacked last night. Casualties were said to be few and damage slight.

(The Germans said they hit railroad yards, the canal and the port of Dover, starting several large fires.)

Raids on the Midlands last night brought the most casualties, the government reported, when several houses in one town were demolished.

Army Shifts Three Generals, One to Hawaii

Gen. Walter C. Short To Take Command Of Island Department

The Army yesterday announced the transfer of three of its general officers, one of whom, Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, will take command of the large Hawaiian Department and will be advanced to a lieutenant generalcy.

SHORT

Gen. Short, a native of Crawfordsville, Ind., and a veteran of 42 years service, will succeed Lieut. Gen. Charles D. Herron, who will reach the statutory retirement age of 64 March 13.

Other officers shifted were Brig. Gen. Clarence S. Ridley, a former Panama Canal Zone commander, and Brig. Gen. Joseph A. Atkins. Gen. Ridley, of Corydon, Ind., who is now on duty with the Third Division at Fort Lewis, Wash., was named commandant of the Sixth Division, with headquarters at Fort Snelling, Minn., a post that has been vacant since October 17.

RIDLEY

Gen. Atkins, a native of Atlanta, who won the Distinguished Service Medal in the World War, goes as chief of staff of the Third Army, with headquarters at San Antonio, Tex. Until recently he was chief of staff of the Second Division at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. He succeeds Brig. Gen. Harvey D. Higley, soon to retire.

At a press conference yesterday Undersecretary of War Patterson said the Army will number 1,418,000 and will be equipped with all "basic weapons" in early 1942. Slowest in receiving equipment will be the Air Corps, he said, but in general arms and other individual equipment will be ready for troops as "they take the field for training."

ATKINS

The War Department official also revealed the induction of 8,000 National Guardsmen, of California, Utah and Nevada had been delayed from February 10 to March 3. At the same time the swearing-in of 18,250 Guardsmen from the District and nine States in this sector will take place on February 3, it was officially announced.

The Army will call 70 Ordnance Reserve first and second lieutenants to a year's active duty to serve at nearby Aberdeen (Md.) Proving Ground replacement center, between February 1 and March 1.

Defend Tobruk Unto Death, Italian Troops Believed Told

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

With British Forces, Jan. 16.—Burrowed within the semicircle of a 30-mile defense line which includes a 10-foot tank trap, the 30,000 Italians at Tobruk apparently have been ordered to resist the pending British assault to the death, if necessary.

The purpose, the British believe, is to permit the remainder of Marshal Graziani's hard-pressed African army to reorganize in the Bengasi region, about 200 miles to the west.

The R. A. F. command at Cairo reported today that on Monday and Tuesday nights the Bengasi waterfront, shipping and government buildings were heavily bombed and that returning British airmen strafed Bengasi's airdrome at Benina, destroying or damaging planes aground.

With British armored units to the west of Tobruk's coast-to-coast defense semicircle, and infantry and artillery to the east and south while warships keep watch on the Mediterranean shore of the Italian base, the British say Tobruk's position is about the same as Bardia's a week before it fell January 5.

The field guns thunder intermittently. By moonlight British patrols penetrate the Tobruk defense zone for sporadic skirmishes. The massing of British men and material continues.

The Italians have one large naval gun—the British call it "Tobruk Tom"—and it provides the heaviest of the defense shelling. The British are trying to silence it. Otherwise, the Italian artillery action is weak.

In the Bardia region, 70 miles east, the roundup of prisoners continues. Most of these men greet capture as deliverance from the waterless desert.

Many of the men are bitter over the Italian high command's failure to deliver air and naval aid. When Italian planes raided Salum, Egypt, near Bardia, recently, dropping bombs near the prison stockade, some of the prisoners broke into an anti-Fascist song.

Captives are fed largely on captured Italian supplies and each gets a quart of water daily. The more seriously wounded were moved in British ambulances to British field hospitals and others to hospital tents in Bardia, where British and Italian physicians work over them, side by side.

U. S. Observer Under Fire On Illustrious

Navy Now Has Four Attaches With British Mediterranean Fleet

By Larry Allen.
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Mediterranean Fleet, Jan. 16.—The United States, closely watching British fleet operations in the Mediterranean, has boosted its staff of official observers to four with a fifth expected to arrive soon.

To help gather data which British fleet officers say should be invaluable to the United States Navy Department in connection with its vast construction program, Lieut. Comdr. James Fife, jr., of Reno, Nev., until recently assistant naval attache at London, has joined Lieut. Comdrs. Kenneth P. Hartman, of Philadelphia, and John N. Opie 3d, of Long Beach, Calif., as observers with the eastern Mediterranean units. Lieut. Comdr. Augustus D. Clark, of New York, is with the western Mediterranean squadron.

Hartman was aboard the aircraft carrier Illustrious during the seven hours it was attacked by German dive bombers January 10 off Sicily, and Opie and Clark were on the London naval attache's staff, which was enlarged soon after the war started.

The rapidly developing field of naval air operations will bring an aeronautics expert, Lieut. Comdr. Steadman Teller, of Locust Valley, N. Y., to the Mediterranean soon. He is expected to be assigned to an aircraft carrier immediately.

The observers forward their confidential reports to the United States Embassy at London, which relays them to the Navy Department at Washington.

Hartman, Opie and Clark, who have been aboard different units in all operations of the British fleet here, have obtained a most comprehensive picture of the Mediterranean warfare.

Aboard the Illustrious, Hartman saw what may well go down in history as one of the most magnificent displays of courage under fire ever recorded.

Youthful seamen and their officers stood up under seven hours of attack by German dive bombers which rained thousands of pounds of bombs alongside and on deck and flung torpedo after torpedo at the sides of the Illustrious.

They manned guns sprayed by enemy machine gun fire and blazed away at the attackers.

Observers agreed that had it not been for their courage the British would not only have lost their convoy, but would have suffered far more damage than the loss of the cruiser Southampton and the battering of the Illustrious.

U. S. Board Urged to Guard Army Morals

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, chairman of the General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains, yesterday proposed that President Roosevelt be urged to set up a national commission on the spiritual life of American service men for the present national emergency.

In a statement issued through his committee, Dr. Weaver called attention to the fact that the President has established a Commission on National Defense, and urged organization of the spiritual life commission "for the purpose of mobilizing and bringing to bear in the most effective ways the spiritual forces of the Nation upon the young men called into their country's service."

"The pastors," he said, "look to the chaplains as the ministers whom they will hold primarily responsible if their trained, consecrated and enthusiastic young men return to civil life shipwrecked in faith and morals."

Italian Division Shattered, Greek Army Reports

Athens (Friday), Jan. 17 (AP).—The Greeks announced continuing successes against Italy on the Albanian battlefront yesterday despite snow and rain which reduced the scale of operations.

"A whole Italian patrol was taken prisoner" in a southern sector, a Greek spokesman said.

He added that "an Italian division has suffered such heavy losses that it has been necessary to reform it with men and equipment recently sent over from Italy."

Lend-Lease Bill Termed Mild Measure

The lend-lease bill merely would give President Roosevelt limited powers in the field of economic aid to Britain, Livingston Hartley, chairman of the Committee to Defend America, declared last night in an address before the Town Hall Association at the Jewish Community Centere.

Joseph M. Tuchman was chairman of the gathering.

Bishop Freeman Addresses Temperance Leaders Marking 21st Anniversary of Prohibition

CIVIC, LEGISLATIVE AND RELIGIOUS LEADERS ADDRESS MEETING—Attending the forty-sixth annual breakfast meeting of International Reform Federation at the Methodist Building were (left to right) Clinton N. Howard, general superintendent of the Federation; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, and teacher of the Harrison Bible Class of Congress Street Methodist Church, composed mainly of police and firemen; Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Ida B. Wise Smith, president of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union

Temperance and morality leaders yesterday heard the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, sound a call for churches to unite under the banner of Christian idealism.

Celebrating the twenty-first anniversary of prohibition's enactment in connection with the forty-sixth fellowship breakfast of the International Reform Federation, they were warned by the white-haired apostle of Christian unity that "we face a perilous future," but predicted an eventual breakdown of denominational barriers.

"Our biggest job," he said at the Methodist Building, "is not to legislate for industry or for traffic. These are side issues. Our greatest job is to legislate for the future of the world in the light of the dictums of the Man of Nazareth."

Senator Morris Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, "father" of the eighteenth amendment, spoke briefly at the meeting, and later in the day stood on the floor of the Senate to deliver his annual prohibition anniversary address.

Maj. Brown Speaks

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, speaking at the breakfast on behalf of the Metropolitan Police Department and the Harrison Men's Bible Class of Congress Street Methodist Church, of which he is president, declared that the law enforcement agencies look to the church for support in the "very difficult task" of enforcing the liquor control laws. The Bible class is composed mainly of policemen and firemen.

Other speakers were Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, local Methodist resident prelate; Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas; Representative Guyer (Republican), of Kansas; Clinton Howard, general superintendent of the federation, presiding, and others. Business sessions were held in the afternoon at the federation's headquarters, 134 B Street Northeast.

Sheppard Speaks in Senate

Senator Sheppard, in his annual address to the Senate in commoration of prohibition's twenty-first anniversary, said:

"The year 1940 was another year of continued prosperity and activity for the liquor industry. While millions of our people struggled against privation, want and misery; while America began to call forth its material resources to prepare against modern aggressors; and while American youth prepared to leave their homes and occupations to enter upon a period of preparation and training in defense of a civilization which they believe to be worth preserving, a golden stream of profits continued to pour into the coffers of the liquor industry as constantly as relegalized liquor poured incessantly out of its vats, its casks, its barrels, and its bottles to undermine and cripple the human resources of this republic."

Senator Sheppard quoted medical reports on the harmful effects of alcohol and concluded with the statement:

Food Strikers At Tuskegee Threaten Driver

Tuskegee, Ala., Jan. 16 (AP).—State patrolmen were rushed here late today as a group of noisy, striking students at Tuskegee Institute were reported to have threatened a truck driver who sought to unload a cargo of food at the Negro college's dining hall.

Unloading finally was accomplished without incident, while eight patrolmen, equipped with riot paraphernalia, looked on.

The strikers started demonstrations yesterday in protest of food served in the dining hall.

They refused to attend classes, and Dr. F. D. Patterson, institute president, said they gathered in noisy crowds today. He added, it was announced:

"The institute has taken the definite stand that all students not at work or in class at 7 a. m. will be automatically suspended."

Paul Muni Changes Pace In 'Hudson's Bay,' Capitol

Appears as French-Canadian Trapper-Diplomat In Sketchy Story of the Seventeenth Century; Three Stars Stop Stage Show in Turn

THERE ARE TENSE and exciting moments in "Hudson's Bay," which Twentieth Century-Fox brought to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater yesterday, but somehow the picture leaves an audience with the impression that it has told only a fragment of the story of the founding of a famous fur-trading company. What should have been a drama of heroic proportions has been capsuled into the personal narrative of a small group of characters who, to be sure, eventually deal directly with King Charles of England, but the vastly thrilling background of their adventurous enterprises is no more than hinted. If it started out to be big, "Hudson's Bay" must have become far more discouraged than the hardy woodsmen and trappers it celebrates.

BELL

Pierre Esprit Rabisson was a French Canadian with golden dreams of a snowy empire to be financed into a Utopia of free men, dealing in peace and friendliness with the Indians, by the priceless pelts of the fur-bearing animals that swarmed the land. His proposal to the British governor in Albany that a trading company be formed was rewarded by a prison term for him and "Gooseberry," his gigantic man Friday of the forests. In prison they met Lord Edward Carewe. All three escaped and struck a bargain with the French governor of Quebec. Returning from their first expedition to the Hudson Bay country with 300,000 pelts, their furry fortune was confiscated by the despotic governor and again they are clapped into prison. Being trappers who cannot be trapped for long, they escape once more, steal back half of their precious skins and set out for England to sell the King a bill of goods. This takes a bit of doing, but is done. Gerald Hall, a dandy of the court and brother of Carewe's betrothed, returns with them to Canada and makes a very elegant mess of things by using brandy for money in trading with the Indians. So Pierre takes him out in the side yard and snuffs him out with a firing squad. This makes things a bit thick with the King on the second voyage to England with 400,000 pelts, but Pierre is able to talk him out of his petulance, gets his Utopia, Carewe gets his girl and Gooseberry gets something better than a raspberry in the form of a noose around his neck. Maybe that's the way it was back there in the seventeenth century but, without looking at the history book, there might be a doubt.

Foremost among such virtues as "Hudson's Bay" possesses is the appearance of Paul Muni in the role of Rabisson after a long absence from the screen. The character is a combination of valor, roguery, humor and gentle philosophy which Muni manages to encompass splendidly in an amiable French-Canuck dialect that gives the part a frequently comic zip. It is all far afield from the stolid historical characters he has impersonated in the past. Laird Cregar, who is both literally and figuratively collossal, is first aid to all of the film's better moments, as Gooseberry. John Sutton passes well enough for Lord Edward Carewe as half of the romantic interest in the play, but Gene Tierney, as the other half, leads to the suspicion that her qualifications for stardom have been just a shade overestimated. Vincent Price, with his lap full of King Charles spaniels, is a fittingly exquisite ruler, with a dash of roguery in his own nature. Nigel Bruce's Prince Rupert is all right, too, and Norton Lowry makes a nicely craven Gerald, who couldn't take it out there in the wilds.

There are three stellar acts on the Capitol stage this week—Dean Murphy, smoothest and most expert of the "character impressionists" (mimics to most of us), the Adrian Rollini Trio, three white-tied gentlemen who performe miracles of melody and rhythm on xylophone, guitar and bass viol, and Diosa Costello, a Latin-American ball of fire, whose songs are blazing and dances inflammatory. The Great Yacopis at yesterday's first performance were not as great as usual, missing more of their hazardous feats on the bounding spring-boards than they executed successfully. A gracious sense of humor converted most of their mishaps into comedy. The Yacopis must have been tired after a long train trip or something. Usually they have no peers in the skill and daring of their work. As for the others, it would be better to see and hear them. Each stopped the show as cold in its tracks as the outside sidewalks.

Sam Jack Kaufman's rousing "Inaugural Overture," with vocal interpolations and patriotic scenic effects, and the Fox Movietone News augment a bill which, by and large, inauguration crowds no doubt will find greatly to their liking.

A Famous Fur-Trading Company Begins to Take Form

PAUL MUNI, GENE TIERNEY AND JOHN SUTTON, three of the pivotal characters in the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Hudson's Bay," the current screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater. The third of the "three musketeers" of the Canadian north is portrayed by Laird Cregar, a Gargantuan fellow, who adds much zest to the action of a picture that contains just a dash of history

'Gone With Wind,' After Year, Still An Enormous Achievement

By Richard L. Coe

Having devoted a hundred days of 1940 to impassioned defenses of "Gone With the Wind" against real or imagined complaints posed by disbelievers (many of whom hadn't the hard cash to see whereof they spoke), we burst through the Palace portals early yesterday morning for the three-hour, 40-minute film's first return showing. Boy, was our side right!

It lacks ten days of a year since "Wind" first blew into F Street and, to coin an understatement, much has happened since.

It's still a superb film and a year has dulled nothing of its brilliant production. Vivien Leigh's Scarlett O'Hara surely will stand as one of the cinema's finest characterizations.

But, just as was the case last year, the first half is by far the better. That portion, a unity in itself, carries Scarlett and Tara from the leisurely prewar days to the destruction that followed Sherman's march to the sea. Then the figures are not only startingly human, but they are moving across the most sweepingly dramatic period our country has yet known.

The latter portion, you will recall, is devoted almost entirely to the solution of Miss Mitchell's central foursome, a tangle that depends purely on individual motivations with which the first half has clearly acquainted its audience. Second time through, this seems even more unnecessary than it did a year ago.

Admitting this fault (if such it be), "Wind" remains an enormous achievement. As was pointed out elsewhere not long ago, its unprecedented length made possible the production of many major films of the past year. This step was a fundamental one that others followed.

To the detractors of Miss Mitchell's novel in the first place, the most telling reply one can make is to point to the completeness with which a huge public embraced her characters. The general agreement that Clark Gable would be the perfect Rhett Butler was almost as complete as the general wonderment at who would play Scarlett. The fact that these figures lived so vividly in so many minds is one of the greatest tributes to her book.

Academy awards have praised the production details and its cast far more than any "first anniversary" review could. Miss de Havilland has not approached her Melanie since and Mr. Howard has scarcely been heard from. Hattie McDaniel, Thomas Mitchell and all the others got their cheers.

Sidney Howard's screenplay will be a lasting memorial to the late playwright and Victor Fleming's direction is still a high watermark.

PHIL BAKER took his 7-year-old daughter, Margo, to lunch at Rumpelmayer's. Greta Garbo and Gaylord Hauser arrived there and were seated at the next table . . . The Bakers couldn't help but hear Hauser give his order in a rather loud voice to the waiter. The dietitian ordered a salad for himself and for Miss Garbo. Then he complained to the waiter that the dressing was not quite right—and needed more paprika, which was brought . . . "And now lemon," Hauser continued . . . The waiter obeyed . . . "Not a half a lemon," Hauser snapped. "A whole lemon." The waiter brought him a whole lemon . . . Margo Baker could not restrain herself. The 7-year-old stood up, faced Gaylord Hauser and said: "Aren't you fussy!"

THE FEDERAL Government is establishing a central registration bureau for the countless number of business executives who wish to volunteer for $1-a-year jobs in the defense program . . . The Columbia Broadcasting System will present a series of 13 programs about democracy and our liberties. James Boyd, the novelist now working with the government, is in charge of the arrangements. The programs will be written, gratis, by one of the most distinguished playwrights in America, and will include Eugene O'Neill, Bob Sherwood, William Saroyan, Marc Connelly and Maxwell Anderson.

IRWIN SHAW, whose "Retreat to Pleasure"—which had a Florida setting—was panned by the critics, decided to get away from it all after the show closed. He sailed for a cruise on the Manhattan, which was beached—and now he's stranded in Florida.

TOMMY MANVILLE attended the premiere of "Crazy With the Heat." He confided that he had been on the wagon for 11 months. "And on February 12," the clear-eyed Manville declared, "it will be a year that I haven't touched a drop of liquor" . . . "That will be a real anniversary," a reporter told him. "And newsworthy, too" . . . "I'll make it really newsworthy," Manville vowed. "On that day, I promise you, I won't get married."

MANY OF the President's friends haven't as yet received their invitations to the inaugural celebrations at the White House, because the invitations are engraved ones—and only 100 a day can be delivered . . . Kurt Kaszner, who produced and wrote lyrics for "Crazy With the Heat," has been absent from Broadway for five years. His last association with the theater was in "The Eternal Road"—when he acted as a super.

AUSTIN McCORMICK, the former commissioner of correction, conferred with the President recently. It concerned the fate of prisoners who have been released or escaped from Devil's Island—the problem of getting them back to France and their families, both in the occupied and unoccupied zones.

BEFORE THE STORY first broke about the impeding arrival of sextuplets to a mother in Guatemala, Gen. Jorge Ubico, the country's dictator, telephoned Alexander King, the editor, whom he knew . . . Ubico, mindful of Guatemala's economies, first had the charges reversed and then tipped King to the story—which ultimately was disproved . . . The editor was reluctant to believe it. "Hold on and I'll have the doctor confirm it," Ubico stated and gave the phone to an American doctor working in Guatemala for one of the medical foundations here . . . "Did you take X-rays?" asked King . . . "Yes," said the doctor . . . "I didn't know there was an X-ray machine in Guatemala," said King . . . "There is," assured the doctor. "They use it for inspecting letters and for packages received by the officials."

BECAUSE THE new Moss Hart show, "Lady in the Dark," concerns psychoanalysis, a group of the most eminent psychoanalysts at Harvard and the rest of New England attended the first performance in Boston . . . Hart was interested in getting their reaction, and a few days later he asked one of them what he thought of the play . . . "Frankly, I've received a number of complaints from my patients as a result of the show," the analyst confided. "They say that in your play the analyses went off smoothly, with little difficulty, and seemed so simple" . . . "Well, you tell them not to complain," Hart reassured. "Tell them that the man who wrote it just can't wait to get back to his analyst."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 16.

Those girls who wept bitterly because they didn't get Scarlett O'Hara didn't know at the time how lucky they were. They do now. It's a one-career part. It makes you—then tears you down, because you'll never get a part as good. Take Vivien Leigh in "Waterloo Bridge." People said, "She's good, but——." What they meant was, the part wasn't so good.

HOPPER

Let's take a look at some of the girls who didn't play Scarlett. Paulette Goddard has made the most terrific strides with Bob Hope and Fred Astaire, she grabbed the spotlight from Madeleine Carroll in "Northwest Mounted Police," and now plays opposite Jimmy Stewart.

Norma Shearer got "The Women" and "Escape." Miriam Hopkins staged a comeback in "The Lady with Red Hair." Joan Fontaine made a name for herself in "Rebecca." Martha Scott, with "Our Town," got the Red Book award.

No matter what Vivien Leigh ever plays, she can never wipe out the memory of Scarlett. That role tops everything—and her.

Brian Donlevy's been on the Metro pay roll for six weeks, but has never been on the Metro lot. The day he finished "I Wanted Wings" at Paramount, he was rushed to Flagstaff, Ariz., for "Billy the Kid." When he returned, he wasn't needed for the picture, and spent his time with his pals at Paramount. Now he's off again to Tucson, Ariz., for another location trip.

After six years at Warners, Writer Milton Krims is about to take his first long vacation. He'll soon be off again to South America. He spent seven weeks there recently, found it so interesting he's going back and write a book about it.

Ernest Anderson, the colored service boy on the set for "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America," is a graduate of Northwestern University and a poet. He read some of his poems over the radio. Had a transcription made, and the director stopped shooting long enough the other day to listen to them. Ernest is no longer the service boy—he's playing a part in the picture.

Soviet Hails Move for 'New British Order'

'People's Convention' In London Described By Moscow Dispatch

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Jan. 16.—A "people's convention" in London last Sunday, which urged creation of a new British government to make a "people's peace" and establish friendship with Soviet Russia was hailed today by Tass, official Russian news agency, as "a new step toward union of the workers' class and democratic elements in England."

The Tass account of the convention, to which Izvestia, the government paper, devoted half a page, attributed the following statements to convention speakers:

"England is almost in a state of war with U. S. S. R. because she maintains in London the Polish government, which declared war on the Soviet Union.

"The Soviet Union cannot cooperate with England until there is a (British) government which really and sincerely will cooperate with the Soviet Union."

The news agency added its own comment that "What deserves attention is that, among the delegates, there were many soldiers and pilots, the best representatives of the English people, ready to carry on the struggle against reaction within the country and against foreign enemies."

In London, a responsible Soviet source asserted there was "hope, but nothing more tangible," that, with Anthony Eden as foreign secretary, British-Russian relations might improve. The spokesman added:

"Each time, since the start of the war, that there has been a chance of better relations, someone or some group in Britain sabotaged the opportunity."

Rescue Mission Plans Birthday Fete Tomorrow

The Northeast Rescue Mission, church-supported institution at 1340 H Street Northeast, tomorrow will celebrate its fifth birthday with a donation day program and open house.

Scarves, sweaters, tie racks and other articles made by the children of the mission will be displayed. Three hundred children attended classes last month.

Thawley L. Holmes, mission superintendent, who will greet the guests, said yesterday that donations of cash, groceries and clothing are especially needed by the mission, which last year cared for more than 15,000 men.

Illinoisans to Dance

The Illinois State Society will hold its annual reception of new members at 9:30 p. m. today at the Shoreham Hotel. Following this, there will be a dance, continuing until 1 a. m.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

PARSONS

Hollywood, Jan. 16 (INS).—Hold everything! "Charley's Aunt" is again headed for the movies. Brandon Thomas' old comedy, first produced in London in 1893, was bought today by Twentieth Century-Fox for the unprecedented sum of $110,000. Sydney Chaplin made it for Warners in the silent days, but, of course, the purchase didn't include the talkie rights. The revival of "Charley's Aunt" in New York last year undoubtedly had something to do with Darryl Zanuck's determination to remake it.

Ever since the play opened on Broadway it has been doing sensational business. Nedda Harrigan has been seen in one of the top roles and everyone who goes to New York raves over her and over the play. It has been seen by almost as many people as "Hamlet" and really holds the long-distance record for plays. No cast has yet been selected.

The last time I talked to Ida Lupino she told me she hoped one day that she and Louis Hayward, her husband, could make a picture together. Her wish comes true much sooner than she hoped, for Ida and Louis will costar in "Gentle People," the Irwin Shaw play—and what a surprise that play was to Franchot Tone's fans, for it was the first time they had ever seen him as a baddie. Franchot's role is that of a conscienceless boy to whom murder is only a part of a day's work, and, of course, it will be played by Louis while Ida will play the part Sylvia Sidney created on the stage. Anatole Litvak, who is directing, will start shooting before many days.

Claudette Colbert returns from Sun Valley, leaving her favorite sport of skiing, to go to work. Paramount has finally found a costarring partner for her for "Skylark" and it's Brian Aherne, no less. Mark Sandrich today put the coveted Aherne's name on a contract. Interesting that the very first picture Brian made in Hollywood was with Marlene Dietrich for Paramount. It was after he appeared with Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and every studio in the business was trying to nab him. Since that time Brian has appeared in much better pictures than Marlene's "Song of Songs"—"My Son, My Son," "Juarez" and "Hired Wife."

∞

Sylvia Fairbanks will not play Vera in "A Woman's Face," principally because George Cukor feels it is too heavy a role for her first and that she should start with something much simpler. Joan Crawford couldn't have been nicer to Sylvia when she was testing. She made all the scenes with her and helped her with her makeup and with suggestions. George says if Sylvia would take a less important role in "A Woman's Face," he would love to direct her, for she really has something to offer. Whether or not Sylvia wants to make a picture now I don't know—she is talking about going to South America on a good-will tour.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Betty Grable has gone into the hospital suffering with an impacted wisdom tooth; Olivia de Havilland doesn't look like Marlene Dietrich, but Burgess Meredith is finding her excellent company; Virginia Gilmore, blonde beauty, and Fritz Lang, the director, have discovered each other; I keep hearing that Dick Powell and Joan Blondell have made a pact to make only two pictures a year—one with each other and one alone.

The party Countess Barbara Hutton von Reventlow is giving Saturday night is in honor of Cary Grant's birthday and there will be no announcement made. Barbara is not yet legally free and until she gets her divorce from her husband she will not become engaged to Carry or anyone else; the ten Western Union boys Mervyn Leroy sent to sing Happy Birthday to Jack Benny and Allan Jones, were so embarrassed Mary Martin had to come to their rescue.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Couple Leaving For 'Lost City' Of Guatemala

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
MR. AND MRS. LAMB

By the Associated Press

Santa Ana, Calif., Jan. 16.—Mr. and Mrs. Dana Lamb, explorers and authors, will leave tomorrow to find the "lost city" in the unexplored Central American mountains.

After a series of conditioning hikes, they reported themselves in fine trim and said they would leave by train for Colima, Mex., hike 1,500 miles south along the Mexican west coast, to Tonala, Chiapas, Mex., and then inland into the northern section of Guatemala.

The effort to find the "lost city," which has been sighted several times from the air but never reached by land, they said, might take anywhere from six months to two years.

Arlington Play Tonight

"The Meddlesome Maid" will be presented under the direction of Mrs. E. L. Woodall at the Washington Lee High School, Arlington, tonight at 8. The play is sponsored by the parent-teacher association of the Clarendon School.

DOCTORS stress remaining in bed until the body temperature is normal. Sound advice.

You know how weak you feel after a cold. Colds play havoc in weakening the body. The story is well told in the blood picture. It is important to build back body strength right away to carry the load of work, worries, and loss of sleep. A weakened body may be more susceptible to relapse or long drawn out recovery.

So reason sensibly and take the choice of millions by immediately starting on a course of S.S.S. Tonic—taken three times a day immediately before meals. Britain's Sea Losses

In the week which ended December 8, a total of 101,190 tons of British shipping was sent to the bottom by German U-boats and bombing planes. This followed a period of steadily rising losses at sea which threatened, if extended over any great length of time, to cut off Great Britain from indispensable overseas sources of food and raw materials. Once again, as during the black month of April, 1917, the British were confronted by the grim specter of starvation.

Fortunately, British shipping losses have shown a marked decline since then. In the week of December 8-15 British vessels aggregating 41,476 tons were sent to the bottom. Losses rose to 54,834 tons the following week but declined to 43,328 tons during the December 22-29 period. The first week of the new year saw the destruction by torpedoes and bombs of only 14,687 tons, the smallest losses since last May.

Part of this decline in the effectiveness of German counter-blockade operations may be due, as the British believe, to the raids constantly carried out by the R. A. F. against German submarine nests on the French coast. To no small extent, however, the temporarily favorable turn of affairs is probably the result of bad weather, which has made it difficult for German bombers and U-boats to operate. We must also take into account the fact that, in addition to actual sinkings, an undisclosed number of ships have been forced to lay up for repairs. Despite the improvements of the past month, the British shipping situation thus remains critical.

Sage Of Philadelphia

Americans who are conscious of their great heritage seldom let January 17 pass without reflecting on the life and achievements of Benjamin Franklin. The farther the eighteenth century recedes into history the more outstanding the sage of Philadelphia seems to become. In his own day he was the best known American in the world. In our day he rightfully takes a place among the distinguished characters of all times.

Franklin lived and died in an age that seems far removed from our times. His were the problems of a pioneer community and an infant nation. To these he brought so large a measure of common sense, such keen imagination, such tireless energy and wholehearted devotion to the public welfare that his influence may still be detected in many of the institutions on which our present way of life is based. On the 235th anniversary of his birth we recognize him as the greatest creative mind of our colonial period and one of the foremost statesmen of the New World.

Undoubtedly Franklin's memory has suffered at the hands of those who know only his phenomenal success story and his reputation for thrift. The energetic and bookish lad who became a successful printer, editor and publisher should not be forgotten. But that achievement to Franklin was only a means to an end. He retains a place in our hearts today largely because of his passion for intellectual growth and public service. For those who know Franklin the loaves under his arms are overshadowed by "The Junto," his library company (the first circulating library in America), his work as a scientist, as a legislator, as a civic organizer, as a sponsor of education and as a brilliant diplomat.

It was Franklin who secured repeal of the British Stamp Act in 1766. It was he who brought France to the aid of the revolutionary American colonies, after his efforts to avoid an open break between the colonies and the mother country had failed. His patience and genius for compromise helped to save the Constitutional Convention in some of its darkest hours. And throughout his career as a legislator, as Postmaster General of the colonies, as President of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and as Minister to France he found time to write scientific and philosophic pamphlets, to pursue his interest in medicine and even to organize a militia for the defense of Philadelphia.

The amazing thing about Franklin's career is that one man could have enriched so many diverse fields of activity with his genius. Even though Franklin has not yet been appropriately honored in the country to which he contributed so much, the now voluminous record of his activities stands out as an ever-refreshing challenge in this age of specialization.

1917 And Now

The reasons why the United States, out of consideration for its own safety, is preparing to give "all-out" aid to Great Britain were never more clearly brought out than by Secretary of War Stimson yesterday. His testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee should open the eyes of those who tend to discount the seriousness of the situation confronting us. It cuts the ground from under those who question the wisdom and necessity of legislation appropriately drawn to effectuate this national aim.

The United States is today in the midst of what is rapidly becoming the greatest rearmament effort in our history, comparable only to the effort we made during the first World War. Yet the present situation, says Secretary Stimson, is more critical than that which faced us in 1917.

At that time we were able to build up our defenses in comparative leisure. The Central Powers had lined up against them not only Great Britain and France but also Italy. The British, French, Italian and Japanese fleets were "in practically complete control of all the oceans of the world." Today, however, as the Secretary of War points out, "Italy and Japan are members of the German Axis. France is conquered. . . . The British fleet today stands alone as an obstacle to German control of the Atlantic."

When we entered the first World War we were unable, and for a long time continued to be unable, to supply our troops with the necessary weapons of war. Practically all of the planes flown by American fliers on the Western Front were of Allied manufacture. So was a large proportion of the artillery used by the A. E. F. and even the rifles and machine guns with which our soldiers were equipped. Today the situation is exactly reversed. We must not only equip ourselves but also assist Great Britain in arming herself against an enemy which has the resources of an entire continent to draw upon.

The situation is one which demands not only a very considerable expansion of our armaments industry but also a thoroughgoing coordination of our own needs with those of countries whose defense is vital to our security. And to be alert in our defense, as Mr. Stimson says, "we must have flexible means with which to act."

Congress does not need to resign its authority to accomplish this purpose. The bill before it is not sacrosanct. It can be modified in various particulars without hampering its essential purpose. The necessity of the policy it is designed to implement, however, has been made abundantly clear.

Scraping The Barrel

Secretary Morgenthau told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that the British have enough ready cash to pay for their current war orders, but "when it comes to finding the dollars to pay for anything like what they need they just haven't got it." His statement is amply confirmed by supporting data from London, placing available dollar exchange assets of the British government at only $1,775,000,000. During the present year it is estimated that total dollar requirements for government orders placed in 1941 and for purchases on private account will amount to $1,554,000,000. Purchases by empire countries (excluding Canada) payable in gold or dollars will amount to $1,465,000,000—a total of $3,019,000,000. Gold shipments and commodity exports will provide additional dollar balances for purchase of United States goods. But the dollar deficit for Great Britain and the empire countries (excluding Canada) will, nevertheless, approximate $1,464,000,000 in 1941. Hence, if payments have to be made in cash it will not be many months before the British till will be empty. And long before that time arrives placement of new orders here would have to be suspended for lack of funds.

It was a stunning surprise to learn that Great Britain has already parted with her gold reserves, except for a mere $205,000,000 in the United States or en route and an additional $33,000,000 widely scattered throughout the world. Unofficial estimates of British gold and overseas security holdings had indicated a much greater reserve of buying power than is here indicated. Indeed, if British overseas investments outside of the United States are included in the inventory of assets available for payments to us, Britain's financial position still seems impressive. For British-owned investments abroad payable in sterling are nominally valued at approximately £3,900,000,000 ($15,600,000,000). However, these valuations are only tentative. What such holdings would bring at forced sale nobody can say. In some cases, sales could not be made at all. Moreover, it would be difficult, often impossible, to convert the proceeds of eventual sales into dollars, although in some cases sterling balances could be used to buy materials to be shipped here for our own use.

Prolonged delays in placement of defense orders would certainly result if the British were compelled to liquidate overseas sterling holdings in the empire, Latin America and the Far East to obtain funds for paying us. Some of these holdings might, however, be pledged as collateral to secure repayment of advances made to the British government. But that raises complicated issues of policy which need not be decided at this juncture. The outstanding fact at the moment is that the British need many more dollars than they now have or can acquire in the near future to pay for the ships, planes and implements of war that we have announced our willingness and eagerness to supply to countries resisting Axis aggression.

District Court Jam

It is unfortunate that the District Bar Association, at its meeting Tuesday night, did not discuss the congestion in the District Court. In the past, committees of the association have made practical suggestions which, if adopted, might have averted the condition in which the court now finds itself. As Dillard Stokes has pointed out in an article for The Post, the court on June 30 had 2,544 civil cases pending. By December 30 it had disposed of 953 of these cases, but 2,134 new ones had been filed.

Obviously there is no hope of attaining a current docket unless the court's personnel is increased or its methods changed. One of the 12 judges who is eligible for retirement has been ill for some time and there is no indication when he will be able to resume his duties. Other judges are occupied with necessary tasks which keep them off the bench. Justice Luhring, who assigns the cases, has found that only five of his colleagues are on hand to attack the congested docket of civil cases.

Some progress doubtless could be made through forceful administration of the present system, so as to keep all judges on the job every working day until they have done all the work they can efficiently handle. Of course, such administration would require positive leadership from within the court itself. Several other suggestions are worth consideration by the judges.

The three-month summer vacation has been criticized. When court adjourns June 30, one justice sometimes is assigned to continue criminal trials for a month. At times, also, one criminal court is assigned to open a month early. One judge is also present during the summer to handle emergency civil cases. About a year ago a bar committee suggested that vacations be shortened, and that the one judge present during vacation do a full day's work. At the same time it was suggested that courts in regular session remain open until 3:30 p. m. instead of 3. Another idea advanced is that the justices should sit on Saturdays.

If adoption of any or all these measures would not clear the dockets, the court could ask for justices on loan from other circuits. If additional permanent judges were then needed to make good the guarantee of speedy justice, the court could ask for those, too. A committee of justices, perhaps working with members of the Bar Association, could certainly brighten the present outlook. But someone must take the initiative.

Congress And Traffic

Representative Schulte is right in thinking that reforms in the Police Court are necessary to deal with the menace of traffic accidents. The question of whether penalties are severe enough is still an open one, but beyond doubt uniform and certain penalties would deter many prospective offenders. The way to accomplish this result is to name a full-time traffic judge who is interested in the problems of safety on the streets. Congress had in the mill during its last session the Schulte bill to provide such a judge. If Mr. Schulte will reintroduce this measure and fight for its enactment, he can make a real contribution to the safety campaign.

Still other signs show that the epidemic of fatal traffic accidents has caused in Congress an awakening to District problems. Both Representative Dirksen, an old friend of the District, and Senator Reynolds, who has recently taken over leadership of the Senate District Committee, promise a Congressional search for a remedy. The interest of these gentlemen will undoubtedly be welcome at the District Building, although the direction of their energies at the moment seems somewhat confused.

ABODE

You praise these narrow bones that build my wrist,
With lingering finger-tip attest the fine,
Consummate craftsmanship of their design—
You, better schooled than the anatomist.
Slowly your hand explores the intricate mesh
Of branching veins, those contours which reveal
How delicate as foam, how strong as steel
May be this living edifice of flesh.

And yet more strong the dweller who resides
Within this house and waits beyond the sill,
Who, knowing walls will crumble and be wrecked,
Has found the only shelter that abides
To roof us over, warm, enduring still,
Framed by the Everlasting Architect.

Machiavelli's Answer

Lately there have been in print theories trying to account for the extraordinary showing of the Italian army in defeat. The truth may be found in the Essays of Machiavelli. That author depicts a small state, surrounded by other states of about equal size, where the business of conducting war is turned over to a hired army entirely devoid of patriotism. In one battle lasting all day only one casualty was reported, and that was a case of a soldier falling from his horse and being smothered to death, the weight of his armor preventing him from getting up. The Italians of that day, perhaps more civilized than in other countries, depended upon intrigue and scheming, and the "subtile" genius (Prescott) of the Italian statesmen was well fitted for this kind of warfare.

When Charles VIII of France invaded Italy he swept through the country like a bat out of hell, until faced by the Spanish soldiers under Gonsalvo of Cordoba, who, being trained for fighting instead of maneuvering, soon drove them back home.

The spirit of the Italians, it seems to me, was forged during the fifteenth century, and now they do not see the use of continuing the fight, when defeat seems inevitable. The English, on the other hand, are in the habit of fighting to the bitter end, thereby changing what appears to be a hopeless defeat into ultimate victory.

It is not cowardice nor indifference that afflicts the Italians. They are the product of their training and of years of entrusting the defense of their country to a hired band of mercenaries and to scheming politicians.

Of "Appeasers"

If those who feel that America should adopt a tolerant attitude toward Germany are "appeasers," what title shall we give to that Being who told his followers: "But I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you:

"That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust?"

A Debate On Presidential Powers In The Lend-Lease Bill

Since it is not feasible to discuss here the broader aspects of the proposed transfer of legislative power to the executive branch, I shall comment briefly on certain portions of the proposed bill to promote the defense of the United States.

In the first place, this bill would place in the hands of the President the legal right to commit acts of war which would have the identical legal effect of a declaration of war. Thus, in effect, the Congress would abdicate its exclusive right to involve this country in a foreign war.

Infinitely more serious, however, is the fact that whenever those powers violating international law are exercised, we must be prepared to become immediately involved in actual war—a war that an overwhelming majority of the American people do not want despite our preference for an English victory. I, for one, do not believe that an executive act of war would change the determined will of the people. Therefore, the awful consequences of making it possible and even likely to involve this country in an unwanted and unintended war should make every Congressman and Senator think deeply before casting his vote. Indeed, unless extreme care is used, this might very possibly be the last chance which Congress will have in determining whether this country enters the present war. And to let the present situation get beyond our own control would be to the lasting disgrace of every member of Congress.

Assuming that some form of legislation is passed which will enable us to aid Great Britain without exposing ourselves to involuntary war, I feel it is imperative that some limits be placed on the quantity and kind of equipment transferred. Some group, probably composed of Army and Navy officials, should be consulted in order to determine our own requirements for hemispherical defense in the event of the worst possible consequences, especially those which the supporters of the bill claim they are going to prevent. Our own defenses should never be weakened beyond this point.

All equipment that is transferred to other countries outside the Western Hemisphere should be adequately secured. The proposed broad powers given the President to see that satisfactory terms are made is especially objectionable in view of the demonstrated disregard which most foreign countries have toward their American debts. Perhaps a priority list of satisfactory types of security could be established.

Finally, this grant of power must be further controlled by a definite time limitation. It seems advisable to limit the grant to a single year. Certainly there is no reason for extending the grant beyond a year, for if the Congress and the people still believe the need continues after the year, the bill can be extended. On the other hand, the right to alter or withdraw this power should be carefully guarded and made immediately responsive to the will of the people.

WILLIAM E. DOMINICK.

Washington, Jan. 14.

When a Senator of the United States is quoted as having said that he favors the "lend-lease bill" because he is willing to fight this war "to the last Englishman," it fills me with horror, dismay and foreboding. And the time to call a stop on partisanship has arrived when Mr. Landon suggests that it would be a greater catastrophe for the country to reelect our President for a fourth term than to witness the destruction of the British Empire by Hitler. Is our country to be exposed to danger of losing everything we hold dear because of unreasoning and blind hatred and mistrust of our chosen leader? How can the President attain national unity and present a solid front to our enemies if the Republican leaders continue to indulge in such unjustified and unbridled vituperation?

It seems to me that "all-out aid to Britain, short of war," is no longer enough. We must trust that the President will do everything he can to avoid calling on our armed forces, but we must authorize him now to do so, whenever he deems it to be indispensable for an Allied victory. I have disagreed with many of the President's domestic policies. In fact although I served during his first Administration (1933-1936), in a very minor post, I resigned because of my discontent with the situation, and although a lifelong Democrat, worked with the Republican National Committee for Landon's election. But my partisanship stops at the water's edge and it seems to me that his foreign policy is 100 per cent right.

Let us debate it by all means, but fairly, and decide it once and for all —not as Democrats, New Dealers or Republicans—but as Americans.

If the President finds that we can manufacture, ship and land in Britain sufficient armaments and food to enable her certainly to prevail, and if she needs and continues to refrain from asking for fighting men, well and good.

But if the President finds it will require the aid of our Navy or Air Forces to make victory certain and to get the necessary supplies to Britain, can it be that even in the face of almost certain loss of all our liberties if Britain falls, the opponents of the President's plan will continue to insist that our men, not "boys," as the politicians love to call them, must not be asked to fight once more for their country as did their forefathers?

I, for one, as a native-born citizen, a war veteran—who saw front line service in France—(and therefore loathes war, as the President does), cannot believe that if the above situation develops, 1 out of 100 of our citizens would hesitate for a second to support our immediate unconditional entry into the war as a belligerent. But we must give the President the power now to act swiftly. We cannot take a referendum then. We must settle it now.

The President need not fear lest, when, as our commander in chief, he gives the order "Full Speed Ahead," our people will not give him willing and undivided support. We have elected him and must trust his judgment.

It cannot be that true Americans desire lightheartedly to take advantage of Britain's present bloody agony, and to point with pride to the fact that we can thereby prevent the loss of a single American life. If and when she asks, we must go in—if we believe she is fighting our battle. If she is not, there is no justification for giving her any aid at all.

Nor can we hope for good will toward us and the continued willing protection of our Atlantic Coast in the long future by the British navy if we turn deaf ears to her pleas for help now, even if she wins unaided by our armed forces a battle we have proclaimed to be ours. Canadian, Australian, New Zealand and British parents are no more anxious for their sons to be "plowed under" than are we.

If Congress does not face this great issue now in a completely nonpartisan spirit, it will be faced by an aroused electorate which will sweep the mere partisans to oblivion.

In my judgment, we should make it clear to the dictators now that this Nation is aroused and united in its unhesitating willingness to support the President in any course he finds necessary to crush them, even if it requires not only the active use of the Navy and Air Forces, but the dispatch of a fully armed, trained and equipped expeditionary force to finally and utterly end the menace of Hitlerism, if they believe that it would surely shorten the war and perhaps bring an early and just peace.

W. CAMPBELL ARMSTRONG.

Washington, Jan. 13.

The Post Impressionist

Verbum Sapienti

ONE BY ONE many of the historical landmarks of Washington are passing. Perhaps the most recent to yield to modernity are the Cosmos Club quarters at Madison Place and H Street, including the Dolly Madison House and the Mark Hanna House. But there is one Washington establishment that, if the fates remain kind, is likely to persist. I mean the Smithsonian Institution, which is now nearly a century old and has this very week taken a new lease on life. I will tell you about it.

True, the old restful red-stone building looks the same exteriorly as it has for many years, but there have been strange goings-on just beyond the north porte-cochere that has constituted a sort of symbol of stability in the midst of the rather violent changes that have transpired in the Mall in recent years.

For a year now the main hall has been closed to visitors, but do you remember how it used to look? Its contents consisted chiefly of innumerable glass cases and cabinets devoted to the subject of graphic arts. The pieces de resistance were Benjamin Franklin's printing press at one end of the hall and a model of a Japanese printmaker at the other. There was also the Lord's Prayer engraved on the head of a pin (or was it the point?), which you looked at through a microscope. It was all very educational, but it did not represent the Smithsonian's work as a whole. It did not give much of a bird's-eye picture of how this institution goes about "increasing and diffusing knowledge among men," which were the jobs assigned to it by James Smithson himself.

But all that is altered. In fact, the place is so changed that it's breath-taking. Even the walls, the surfaces of the high ceiling, and the great romanesque columns have been redone. The whole has been transformed into a veritable palace of science, in which modern exhibition techniques are harmonized with the beauty and dignity inherent in the building's architecture. It is a brand-new presentation of the glories of the earth and the wonders of man's quest for knowledge.

Opening this new exhibit is especially fitting at the present time, when so many events are happening to divert us from a normal perspective of things. It is well to emphasize right now the part that science has played in man's affairs. Man himself has so frequently been accused of applying the discoveries of science and invention toward his own destruction that it is good to have a fresh vision of scientific achievement to balance the picture. For while it is true that without the science of the past 50 years warfare as known today would have been impossible, it is also true that man's peaceful progress and his pursuit of happiness owe an equal debt to science.

The new display, however, was designed with no such ulterior ideas of timeliness. It was intended to depict, modestly and in readily understandable form for its legions of visitors, the varied activities of the Smithsonian Institution. It was intended to enable the visitors to go away with a fresh and unified conception of the meaning of life on the earth, the marvels of the universe, the history of this continent and its peoples, and the evolution of man's culture and arts. It was intended, too, to inspire him with the feeling that surely, after all, it was not in vain that man was given the power of reason and set apart from the other animals.

Today this unique exhibit will be viewed by the Smithsonian Board of Regents, headed by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, in connection with their annual meeting. On Monday, Inauguration Day, it will be open to the public for the first time. Perhaps there will be a few persons among the Inauguration throng who will be looking for a place to get in out of the cold or to rest their tired feet. Let them extricate themselves from the crowd and walk across the Mall to the Smithsonian. They will find there a sort of sanctuary, with "bright-eyed science watching round." And in one day two of their primal cravings will have been nourished—their desire for pomp and circumstance and their thirst for knowledge. This insatiable hunger for knowledge was once described in verse by Maj. John W. Powell, one of America's most distinguished scientists of a generation or two ago and for several years on the staff of the Smithsonian:

With knowledge gained man never is content:
Nor wold, nor mount, nor gorge, nor icy field,
Nor depths of sea, nor heights of starry sky,
Can daunt his courage in this high emprise,
Or sate the vision of his longing eyes,
But evermore of truth invents new store
And seeks the proof that multiplies his lore.

That is the essence of the new exhibit. Or, as Emerson more succinctly expressed it, "Men love to wonder and that is the seed of science."

The Congressional Hearing

THE PROTECTION of the democratic process demands more than allegiance to its outer forms, it demands the strictest loyalty to its inner purposes, lest we "redouble our zeal as we lose sight of our aims." Indications of degeneration are there when the forms and habits fail to fulfill the function for which they were designed; when, for instance, the law, through its infinite complications and pedantries, becomes an instrument for covering rather than publishing crime; or free speech becomes distorted into a weapon of blackmail and intimidation; or free assembly becomes a means of organizing open conspiracies against the structure and purpose of the state.

THIS HOLDS, also, for the processes of government itself. All over the world the party system, which grew up as one instrument of democracy, has been carried to such lengths of partisanship that it has contributed to the wrecking of democracy.

That was true in Germany under the republic. That was true in Italy before fascism; that was true in France, and was a factor contributing to her collapse.

President Washington was so afraid of it that he hoped never to see a party system emerge in our democracy. He was particularly afraid of it during times of international disturbance and crisis, such as that of his second administration, and the famous farewell address is almost wholly devoted to the dangers to a republic arising from the disease of faction.

The first instinct, therefore, of a threatened republic—if the instincts have remained sound—is to abandon party strife in time of emergency and create governments of national concentration with unified command.

The American Constitution has excited the admiration of scholars for a century because of the exceptional strength that it gives to the Executive in dealing with foreign affairs and emergency situations—which makes him, for instance, the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and which secures his office for a fixed tenure of years against the moods and changes of the legislative body and against the inevitable factionalism of that body.

It is this feature of the Constitution as much as any that has enabled us time and again in our history to achieve a necessary concentration of authority without violating or circumventing the Constitution and which has assured us a more perfect continuity of historical development than that of any other republic except, perhaps, the Swiss.

AND AGAIN, in all the minor functions of government, a clear concept of purposes is a guide against pitfalls.

This holds for legislative hearings. The purpose of holding hearings is to afford a means whereby the members of Congress may receive facts and information which will help them to frame intelligent legislation.

It is a purpose, however, which has often been completely or partially ignored. The Congressional hearing has become in our days an instrument whereby interested groups are afforded a rostrum from which to make partisan speeches and a means of pillorying and intimidating groups and persons whose public prosecution—without benefit of counsel, and with the exclusion of all the rules of evidence—is a means of furnishing the public with a confirmation of current prejudices.

THESE THOUGHTS are induced by the hearings on the lend-lease bill now in progress. Certainly the Congress is justified in giving this bill their most earnest consideration. But the object of the hearing is to produce light and clarity, not to furnish a platform for a confusing public debate in which partisanship and acrimony can be stirred up in the face of the world to the delight of those foreign nations who wish nothing more than confusion and division in this country for their own purpose.

It is fitting and proper that the Congress should hear those who are unquestionably qualified to testify on constitutional matters and regarding the state of the world at this time.

It is well that the committee should hear the Secretary of State, the representatives of the Departments of War and Navy and outside citizens whose views are worthy of consideration because they possess some special information and knowledge.

In this class fall, naturally, such diplomatic representatives as are available in this country.

But here again the committee should take account of the wisdom of discretion. It would seem that Mr. Hull, as Secretary of State, and the recipient of the reports of all of his ambassadors and as ultimately responsible for them, were alone qualified to speak for his department.

The Congressional hearings take place under the eyes and ears of all the world, and a world that keeps the utmost secrecy and discretion regarding its own moves vis-a-vis others powers. If Mr. Bullitt and Mr. Kennedy are to testify in discreet matters, it were well that they testified in camera, except for an additional unfortunate fact of experience, that there is no such thing as testimony in camera in the present state of this Republic.

For no sooner are the hearings over than some Senator or Representative rushes out to spill to the press his own version of the testimony, and often in a seriously garbled torm, accompanied by his own partisanly flavored comments.

This happened in connection with the hearing in January, 1939, when the Washington correspondents were all able to bring versions of an "unprecedented secret meeting," according to the prejudices of the particular persons who broke the secrecy.

IN LOOKING OVER the list of some of the persons whose testimony is to be solicited, one sees names of those who certainly cannot cast more light than they have already shed.

I do not know what more Gen. Johnson, or Mr. Roy Howard, or Col. Lindbergh, can contribute to the enlightenment of the Senators than they have already publicly contributed. It is as foolish, and as time-wasting to call them as it would be, for instance, to call Mr. Herbert Agar or Miss Dorothy Thompson.

There are others called whose testimony can only be a means of airing a partisan and inexpert viewpoint; for instance, Mr. Verne Marshall or Mr. Thomas Dewey.

ON THE OTHER HAND, there are many persons who have been reticent about opinions, but who do possess exceptional and disinterested knowledge which might be of great value to the committee.

I think, for instance, of two journalists who are not, nor have been, engaged in forming opinions, but who are as certainly possessed of as exceptional knowledge and information as any diplomat.

I think of Mr. Otto Tolischius, for 20-odd years correspondent of the New York Times in Berlin, and of Mr. William Schirer, until very recently the Columbia Broadcasting Co.'s reporter in the same capital, who also possesses knowledge gained from 20 years' residence and study in central Europe.

It would also seem to me—if what the committee is seeking is expert opinion, and not ammunition for partisan policies determined upon in advance—that the committee could well afford to hear Mr. Hamilton Fish Armstrong who, as editor of Foreign Affairs, the magazine exclusively devoted to the subject of its title, possesses more overall information than many a diplomat, and whose impeccability of character and moderation in judgment are known to all his associates.

FOR SURELY the object of these hearings is to generate light, not heat, to give the committee access to facts, not prejudices, to be a means of assistance to wise judgment, not to take a poll of opinion, to be a seminar, not a debating forum.

For when the functions of government become confused in purpose, they cease to operate for the general welfare, and if they fail too radically, the whole structure is threatened.

Everybody on the committee will agree on one thing—that we live in a crisis of unprecedented proportions, in which boldness, vigor, wisdom and the greatest possible amount of factual knowledge are all required.

Fair Enough

Some Heavy Brooding

IT MUST AMUSE the Communists and the Nazis to observe the squirming of the American people in a desperate struggle to escape communism and naziism, which are pretty much the same. The more we wiggle and writhe the tighter our bonds are drawn, like the cords enmeshing the victim of a ribald prank known as the sack trick which the bootleggers sometimes practiced on their friends in the days of prohibition.

To free the world of this dreadful thing and protect American civilization from it we resort to the very thing we loathe and fear, and it is only a wish and not a promise to ourselves that when the war is over the people of the United States will again break ranks and discipline as in 1918 and 1919. How can we ever know that we have won the war, presuming that we will go to war and win, when by that time there will be only a few minor peculiarities to distinguish our brand of government from that which we are so determined to put down?

DOES ANYONE believe seriously, I wonder, that private ownership will survive this war, when we have been observing already, in peacetime, eight years of unrelenting effort from the top of the Government and all down through the departments of the National Administration to establish some form of socialism?

The British, of course, will never be able to pay what they owe, and not only that but they themselves will have socialism when it is over, and will simply repudiate the debt and use our own words to justify their contention that it never was a debt at all but our own expenditure to save our own American way. The cost of it all in spending of our own and lending or, more truthfully, giving to Britain will be such that it will be hopeless to try to carry on in the old American way—the only way, incidentally, under which the American liberties can exist.

I suppose some leaders of labor unions really do believe in their dull, dumb way that it is a fine thing to herd all the workers of a huge Nation together in two great organizations, or, better still, in one organization. But the Communists and Nazis must find humor in that, knowing, as they do, what a handy, compact force this would be with which to boss all labor from one desk in one Government office. Already millions of patriotic Americans are caught in unions—some of them willingly and suspecting no danger, others by force of coercion—and are now subject to orders from above.

WE FIND Sidney Hillman, a Socialist of some kind who has traveled to Moscow, in command of labor's effort in the national defense, and nowhere are there any signs that the Government repudiates the Communists and party-liners in the Labor Board and other departments. Gathered together in the unions, labor now can be told, and will be told, politely at first and bluntly as time passes, to forget any frivolous notions that unions are free organizations and their own masters.

The labor leaders, like the industrial leaders in Germany, will be allowed to keep their nominal authority only as long as they please the Government; and when private ownership of industry has passed, labor, of course, will be employed by the Government and will obey the boss as a patriotic duty. There will be laws covering that problem when the war is over.

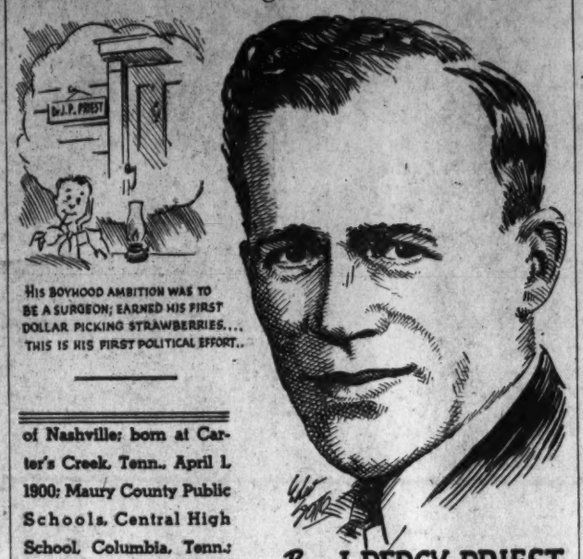

In a very short time now opinion in the press will be curbed in the interests of the great national effort to preserve freedom of speech, thought and writing, for already the feeling is on the rise that criticism of the President or resistance to his plans is obstructive and wrong.

STRANGE IT IS that so many of us see fascism or naziism in the minds of those who oppose regimentation of men and the confiscation, by indirect means, of property, when the record shows that fascism and naziism are based on regimentation and confiscation. And, of course, the Communists are delighted by every new step in the direction of fascism or naziism, because, after all, their ism differs only in the label.

We can't see it, because we are so close to ourselves, but the enemies, including Russia and the Communists here, can see that already we have had to adopt their own ways to deal with them on even terms in our international relations. So, just as they took part in the Spanish War, but only with "volunteers," and denied any formal participation, the United States now is going to war without a formal act of Congress.

We can tell the American way good-by now.

Labor In Defense

By Ernest Lindley

Sidney Hillman Makes Good

THE NOTION that Sidney Hillman was made Associate Director-General of Production Management merely to protect labor's rights is refuted by the work which already has been done by his division of the National Defense Advisory Commission.

Hillman has been primarily concerned with allaying industrial disputes and with training labor for defense production. Both activities are not only constructive but vitally important. In addition, his division has initiated schemes for expediting rearmament by using facilities which had been overlooked by the armed services and the management side of the NDAC.

At least five major achievements or projects of Hillman's division deserve to be recognized as of great positive value.

First was his success in creating a Labor Policy Advisory Committee of union officials; six from the A. F. of L., six from the C. I. O., and four from the railway unions. This group has been active in averting strikes and in overcoming jurisdictional feuds which might lead to strikes. Hillman is being criticized in both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. because he hand-picked this committee so that it is responsible to him rather than to the heads of the main branches of organized labor. But this is not a criticism which carries much weight outside the field of labor politics.

Secondly, Hillman's division has drawn on the resources of the Civilian Conservation Corps, the National Youth Administration, the educational system, and miscellaneous facilities, to provide elementary training for defense industries. Included are refresher courses for older workers—metal workers, mechanics and others with manual skills—who drifted into other jobs or have lost the fine edge of their skill from lack of work. About 500,000 men, it is estimated, will go through the refresher courses or will acquire elementary training this year.

Third comes the program for training within industry—training on the job. To help work this out, Hillman brought to Washington the top personnel men of Western Electric, Socony-Vacuum, United States Steel and the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. In key plants, joint management and labor committees have been experimenting with "on the job" training. Incidentally, they have searched the manual skills used in civilian production to determine which can be most quickly converted to defense uses. To cite an example: they found that women who had been trained for fine embroidery work had the deftness and delicacy of touch needed in the making of the finest shell-fuses.

THE "ON THE JOB" training program is just about to swing into action on a big scale.

Perhaps the most startling venture of Hillman's division is the survey of "ghost towns" and other scattered small facilities which might be used for defense production. Test checks in several localities turned up surprising numbers of idle plants, ranging from foundries to machine shops. Publication of the findings started a census-taking by many communities. In several localities arrangements have been made to pool idle facilities.

The resources already discovered are large in the aggregate. The War Department is enthusiastic about the results of Hillman's venture—which originated and was conducted by Morris Llewellyn Cooke, an industrial engineer of long experience. A real "bits and pieces" program is now in the making. In addition to enlarging and expediting defense output, it will cut down relief rolls in communities afflicted with what seemed to be permanent economic decline. In many of these, older workers have been found who can be used in defense production after receiving refresher courses.

The minor devices of Hillman's division for recruiting and training labor for national defense runs into a lengthy list.

THE STRIKE prevention record, up to the first of this year at least, was really remarkable. Out of 241 disputes in which defense orders were involved, only two finally culminated in important stoppages. In one of these seven working days were lost, and in the other, four. During the second half of 1940 the time lost through industrial strikes generally was about 45 per cent less than in the second half of 1939.

Hillman is traveling a rough road. Labor expects him to protect its rights—especially the right to organize and bargain collectively supposedly guaranteed by the National Labor Relations Act. Ford and Bethlehem Steel are especially sore spots. The award of the second defense contract to Ford—for scout cars which could have been made elsewhere—came close to causing real trouble, not only for Hillman but for defense production generally.

Hillman's record, both as head of his union and as a defense commissioner, has shown his interest in efficient production. In his grasp of the problems of management he is outstanding among labor leaders. In naming him as joint head with Knudsen of the new OPM, the President was recognizing not only the changed status of labor but Hillman's personal qualifications and constructive outlook.

Pattern Of Conquest

By Barnet Nover

Can The Americas Be Invaded?

THOSE WHO ARGUE that the United States is invulnerable to attack from overseas because 3,000 miles of blue water separate us from Europe ignore both history and Hitler.

They ignore history because in the five and a half centuries since this hemisphere was discovered the Atlantic has far more often served as a highway of conquest rather than as a barrier to aggression. They ignore Hitler because he does not rely on military means alone to bring about the subjugation of his intended victim. In some instances, he won his victories without the firing of a shot; in others the German army and air force came only after the spies and saboteurs and fifth columnists had done their work. In every instance he employed methods that best suited his needs, not those of his enemies.

LET US LOOK at the record. The conquest of Austria was made possible by a psychological offensive within that country which undermined its stability and a diplomatic offensive which succeeded in dividing the western powers and made them reluctant to act against the Reich. Czecho-Slovakia was conquered more or less in the same way. The destruction of the independence of Norway, the Low Countries and France involved more sanguinary methods. But in the case of each of these nations military offensive was preceded by less open and less obvious acts of aggression successfully designed to "soften" the victim.

Can Hitler repeat these tactics in the Americas? The answer is that he has already begun to do so. There is not a nation in this hemisphere, including the United States, where that isn't true. The New World is full of Quislings and the Seyss-Inquarts and Lavals, as was the Old World. Nowhere have Hitler's agents in Latin America succeeded in making the nations where they operate satellites of the Third Reich. But the story may be a far different one should the Third Reich triumph in Europe.

The overwhelming majority of the inhabitants of the republics to our south have no sympathy for German aims or Nazi ideology. They want their nations to remain free and independent, just as the great majority of Norwegians, Dutch, French and other peoples now living under the Nazi yoke wanted to keep their nations free and independent. Whether the Latin Americans would be more successful in this regard than Europeans is by no means certain.

TO BRING ABOUT internal disintegration in Latin America, Hitler would not have to send troops at all. In some instances he might find it sufficient to apply economic pressure to which those nations that depend for their livelihood on the export of their surpluses to Europe would be particularly subject. In other instances, Hitler might supply arms to the disgruntled Outs to enable the latter to stage a rebellion against the Ins.

Following a successful war he would have arms aplenty to sell or give away to Latin America. Indeed, he might find it wiser, for a time to give away those arms rather than sell them as the Standard Oil Co. used to give away lamps in China to create a market for kerosene. For such arms while intended by those who received them for the defense of the nation against outside attack could also be used to foment civil war.

To prevent such a development the United States might have to go into competition with Germany in supplying arms to Latin America. We would also have to go into the business of subsidizing those elements that favor cooperation with us in order to keep from power those elements that are prepared to work with Hitler. We would, in addition, have to buy up the surpluses of Latin America to prevent Hitler from employing the economic weapon against the freedom and independence of Latin-American nations. But it would cost billions, and these billions would be in addition to many more billions spent in building up our Army, Navy and air force and the defenses of our neighbors.

IN THE PAST we have blithely assumed that the defense of the hemisphere was a relatively simple task. We have even assumed, and those ignorant of history continue to assume, that we did so in the past merely by proclaiming the Monroe Doctrine. Actually the Monroe Doctrine protected this hemisphere because this hemisphere was from 1823 until this year never in danger and it was never in danger because Europe was divided among itself and between Europe and the New World stood the British fleet.

The defense of this hemisphere, in the event of a British defeat, would be a staggering task. It could be done. Indeed, it would have to be done by us regardless of the difficulties and the expense involved. But the probable cost is something we could hardly view with equanimity. And rich as is this Nation it might not be rich enough to do the job adequately. All the time we were spending our substance on one gigantic rearmament program after another Hitler, we may be sure, would be preparing, too. And he would have at his disposal the agricultural and mineral resources of three continents with the labor of hundreds of millions of individuals reduced to a slave status, the industrial plants and the shipbuilding facilities and armament capacity of all Europe.

The United States can have no assurance, now or hereafter, that it will not be invaded. But even if an invasion were utterly impossible the prospect we would have to face in the event of a Nazi victory would be grim in the extreme.

Lend-Lease Hearing Is Capital's Big Show

Spectators at yesterday's hearing on the Administration's lend-lease bill saw the scene above as Chairman Sol Bloom (A), of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Representative Hamilton Fish (B), ranking minority member, angrily exchanged sharp words on the bill to aid Britain.

The row started when Fish said Bloom had told him to invite witnesses, including Wendell L. Willkie, to testify next week. Bloom denied it, asked Fish if it was true that he (Fish) has said the legislation was "the President's dictator bill." "Of course it's a dictator bill," was Fish's reply. Representaive Tinkham (C), who argued with Secretary of State Hull the day before, appeared to thoroughly enjoy the spat.

SECRETARY OF WAR STIMSON, raising his arms in a dramatic gesture, told the committee this country is in "very great danger of an invasion by air in the contingency that the British navy should be destroyed or surrendered"

Twenty-seven feet 7 inches high, the clipper will have a cruising range of approximately 4,000 miles. Note the comparative size of men

Hot Spot—Fire Razes Night Club . . .

The Del Rio Restaurant, popular night spot at Bladensburg, Md., was destroyed by fire yesterday. Damage was estimated at $85,000.

The flames started in the boiler room and spread swiftly through the entire structure. Seven volunteer fire companies, responding to a general alarm, fought the fire for more than two hours.

Reports circulated that the fire would lead to a general investigation into precautions being taken by tavern proprietors to protect their patrons, but no official announcement was made.

BLAZE AT ITS HEIGHT

Destroyed in the fire were musical instruments and sheet music valued at almost $5,000. Members of the two dance bands employed at the establishment rummaged through the ruins searching for their instruments, but there was little to salvage.

George Ray, leader of one of the orchestras, said the flames had destroyed most of his song arrangements on which he had worked a year. His wife sobbed hysterically.

Frank Padilla, leader of the Conga-Rhumba Band, bemoaned the loss of a $700 library of Spanish music. One member of Padilla's band rejoiced because his trumpet had not been destroyed. "You are very lucky," said the drummer as he looked regretfully at the blackened remnants of his instruments.

Lobster Newburg Holds Spotlight Among Prize Recipes

Mrs. Charles N. Malone Takes First Award With Her Directions for Preparing Favorite American Dish Dating Back to Civil War

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor

LOBSTER Newburg zoomed right into society during the Gay Nineties. Perhaps its popularity was due to its being in the kitchenless cooking category. Even now, from coast to coast this favorite dish is being concocted wherever there is a can of lobster and a bottle of sherry.

Martha Ellyn

However, the christening of Lobster Newburg was not done with sherry, but with rum, and it was invented during Civil War days, and not in the Gay Nineties. It is a dish that is made easily and for that reason it is often used for Sunday night suppers, which is the theme of this month's Post recipe contest.

The winner of first prize, Mrs. Charles N. Malone, 2737 Devonshire Place Northwest, includes this famous dish in her menu. Inspired by a Christmas vacation cruise to old New Orleans, and having eaten her way around the Vieux Carre in New Orleans, the winner thinks that a Sunday night supper with the Creole influence is most appealing. Here is the menu and recipe for Rhum Lobster Newburg that won the first award for Mrs. Malone.

Supper Menu

Sazarac or Fruit Cocktail
Rhum Lobster a la Newburg
Salad Bowl French Dressing
Toasted Pulled Bread Sweet Butter
Ice Cream Petit-fours
Cafe Noir

Rhum Lobster a la Newburg—Flake 2 cups cooked or canned lobster. Cook for 5 minutes in 3 tablespoons butter. Stir in slowly 1 2/3 cups half milk and half cream. Add ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Heat to near boiling point. Stir in 2 slightly beaten egg yolks (to which a little milk has been added to prevent curdling.) Cook 2 minutes longer. Just before serving add 2 tablespoons rum. Serve on brown fingers of toast; decorate with parsley and a squidge of lemon. A little mace may be added if desired. Serves 6.

Corned beef recognizes no class distinction and often makes its appearance in such a way that it stands on its own merits. Helen E. Richter, 24 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, winner of the second prize in The Post recipe contest, serves it at her Sunday night suppers. Miss Richter's winning menu and recipe for Corned Beef Patties is as follows:

Supper Menu

Corned Beef Patties
Kernel Corn Saute
Olives Pickles
Hot Rolls Butter
Chocolate Cake Coffee

Corned Beef Patties—Sift 2 cups flour with 1 teaspoon baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Add 6 tablespoons shortening and mix in thoroughly with a fork. Add 1 slightly beaten egg yolk to 1/3 cup milk; add to dry mixture to make a soft dough. Turn out on a floured board and toss lightly until the outside looks smooth. Roll out half the dough ⅛-inch thick; cut into quarters. Fit each quarter into muffin pan; fill with corned beef mixture and fold the edges of the pastry over to the center. Pinch the edges together on the top. Repeat with the remaining dough. Bake in a hot oven at 425 degrees for about 20 minutes. Serves 8.

Corned Beef Filling—Melt 2 tablespoons butter, add ¼ cup chopped onion; cook slowly until soft. Add 2 tablespoons flour, stir until well blended. Add 1¼ cups cooked corn beef, cut in pieces and 1½ cups canned tomatoes. Bring to boil, stirring constantly until thick and smooth; let simmer about 10 minutes.

There are some people who think Sunday without chicken means a Sunday lost. Miss Margaret Black, 3740 W Street Northwest, is one who has this idea. With her $3 prize money—the award for third prize—Miss Black can buy several more chickens. Here is her winning menu and recipe for Chicken-Almond Casserole.

Supper Menu

Chicken-Almond Casserole
Toasted Corn Bread Squares
Jelly Olives
Grapefruit-date-green pepper salad

Chicken-Almond Casserole—Prepare 4½-pound stewing chicken and cut into stewing pieces. Stew chicken on Saturday until tender—about 3 hours. Drain and save broth. When chicken is cool, remove skin, take chicken from bones and cut in pieces with scissors. Do not use skin. Cook 1 1-3 cups rice in boiling salted water, using only four cups, and keeping heat as low as possible. Pour boiling water on almonds and blanch, making 1 cupful. Saute 1 small onion in 4 tablespoons butter in large skillet. Remove the onions and saute 1 pound fresh mushrooms which have been washed and cut into pieces. Make a sauce with the onions, mushrooms, 8 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons salt and 1 quart of the chicken broth. Combine all the ingredients put into 2 casseroles, cover with buttered bread crumbs, put into refrigerator until 1 hour before serving time. Heat in oven at 350 degrees. Serves 8.

When giblets and mushrooms are about done, melt 4 tablespoons butter in a skillet and add 1 small onion, chopped fine. Cook slowly for 5 minutes, then add 3 tablespoons flour and brown. Next add 1½ cups milk slowly, stirring constantly, until a smooth gravy of the desired consistency is attained. Add the giblets and mushrooms from which the water has been drained. Season to taste and cook a few more minutes over very slow fire. Fill pastry shells and serve hot. Serves 6.

Beat thoroughly with egg beater or electric mixer. Fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in hot waffle iron until brown. Serves 4 to 6.

Never throw leftover batter away. It will keep well in refrigerator for several days. After being thoroughly stirred, it can be used again as waffles or makes an excellent batter for vegetables or fruit fritters.

The second five of the $1 winners in the recipe contest will be announced Saturday.

A Report on the B Vitamins in Meat

New vitamin chart accepted by the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association shows meat one of the rich sources of B vitamins

ONE of the most thrilling discoveries of science in years is the importance of the B vitamins. These vitamins are needed —to protect against certain diseases arising from their deficiency

—for good appetite

—for the normal, healthy growth of children

—because normal health cannot be maintained without them.

Borderline cases of diseases caused by a deficiency of these vitamins exist among people in all stations of life, though they may believe their diets to be adequate and ample.

Now comes the important discovery that meat, which mankind has always liked and thrived on, is a good natural source of these B vitamins:

Thiamine (vitamin B_1)
Riboflavin (vitamin B_2)
The Anti-pellagra Vitamin

As the new chart shows, these vitamins are found in varying quantities in all meats—beef, lamb, veal and pork as well as liver, heart, kidneys and other meat specialties. Smoked ham, bacon and sausage also contain them.

The B vitamins are necessary for growth, health and normal nutrition. Many people are getting barely enough of them. The human body has little capacity for storing them, and for normal health an adequate supply is necessary. Your physician will tell you more about them and their benefits to you.

Based on 4-oz. servings uncooked meat (edible portion): (1) Thiamine: 1 microgram = ½ International Unit—(2) Riboflavin: 1 microgram = ½ Sherman-Bourquin Unit.

Neilson Wants Higher Penalty For Speeders

Should Be Punished As Reckless Drivers, Judge Declares

An increased maximum penalty for first-offense speeding is necessary to combat effectively Washington's traffic problem, Judge George D. Neilson declared yesterday after sitting in District Traffic Court.

Apparently incensed over his inability to impose fines in excess of $25 "in flagrant cases," the judge said he was convinced the penalty for first offenses should at least equal that for reckless driving.

"Several times during the past few days," the jurist declared: "I have heard cases where cars were traveling greater than 50 and 60, and even 70 miles an hour. Speeds that great, in my opinion, constitute reckless driving and should be punished as such. But I am bound by the law and may not impose more than a $25 fine, if it is the driver's first offense."

Judge Neilson pointed out that the penalty for reckless driving provides a fine of $250 or 90 days in jail or both.

"High speeds on city streets," Judge Neilson continued, "are in most cases more dangerous than reckless driving."

Judge Neilson also referred to penalties under the law governing operator's permits and termed the statute "inconsistent."

He said that judges may impose fines up to $500 in cases of driving without permits, where in most cases the facts do not warrant penalties in excess of $25 or $50.

"It seems to me," Neilson added, "that maximum penalties in all traffic cases should be high, leaving the imposition of them to the judge's common sense."

Police Court records disclosed that Judge Neilson has imposed the maximum punishments in all cases involving "moving violations."

When questioned about this policy he said: "Personal injuries are not a result of parked vehicles. It is the moving car which kills and I think the sooner moving traffic is controlled the sooner we will have a safe city."

A short time before leaving the bench yesterday Judge Neilson imposed a sentence of $80 or 80 days on a motorist for three traffic violations, allegedly committed while taking an ill child to a hospital.

Traffic Policeman A. R. Newcomb arrested the driver, Jessie Stringfellow, colored, 33, of 420 K Street Northwest, Tuesday, after a collision on U Street Northwest. The driver, the policeman stated, told him he was taking a child to Freedmen's Hospital.

"There's altogether too much of this sort of thing," Judge Neilson told the driver before passing sentence. "You not only endanger yourself and your sick passenger by such driving, but also jeopardize the lives and property of others."

Uniform Traffic Penalties Urged

wide study of traffic courts and prosecutors. His recommendations have been indorsed by the National Conference of Judicial Councils and four constituent groups of the American Bar Association.

Declaring that Washington's system of traffic-control should be a "model for the Nation," Vanderbilt denounced the practice of rotating judges in Traffic Court each month and advocated a separate court for traffic matters presided over by a full-time judge.

Introducing the speaker, A. A. A. Advisory Board Chairman John L. Vandergrift praised The Washington Post for its series of articles on traffic court operations.

Washington's traffic problem, said Vanderbilt, merits serious attention of all enforcement agencies, particularly the court. He cited the lack of uniformity in the judges' penalties for crash-breeding violations and blamed it on the "varying notions of the judges as to what certain offenses are worth in fines."

"I suggest," he said, "that the judges get together some afternoon after court and decide on how these offenses should be punished and stop this variation in sentences."

He added that the judges should pool their experiences in typical cases which come into Traffic Court and "get together" in their judgments.

Then, in even stronger terms, Vanderbilt lashed at the manner in which traffic control officials must bow to "special privilege" motorists who insist on claiming immunity to arrest and prosecution.

"It is a peculiar problem which exists nowhere except in Washington," said Vanderbilt, "and shouldn't be permitted to exist anywhere."

He charged that certain officials who are "entitled" to this immunity are not satisfied, but demand that their secretaries and messengers be included.

"By extending 'immunity' to these persons," he declared, "all semblance of equal justice is destroyed."

The local Police Court judges have a distinct advantage over colleagues in other cities for an opportunity to correct evils because they are not forced to respond to political pressure, Vanderbilt pointed out.

He pointed out that the local judges are appointed by the President and said they have no reason to fear for their positions by delivering impartial justice.

Vanderbilt also struck at the open practice of granting long continuances when lawyers attempt to bring their clients before a judge who has a reputation for "leniency."

Guests at the AAA meeting also included Lieut. Franklin Kreml, director of the Northwestern University Traffic Safety Institute; Sidney Williams, safety director of the National Safety Council; Norman Damon, of the Automotive Safety Foundation; E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co.; Inspector Arthur E. Miller, police accident prevention head, and Col. L. C. Crawford and Harry Wender, members of the Commissioners Traffic Advisory Council.

Warned She Faces Death, District Woman Keeps On Giving Rare Blood to Save Lives

Mrs. McMullin expects in a few days to be abroad in the land again, racing by train and plane to distant corners where blood-infection victims are dying.

Yesterday she received a plea for help from a sufferer at Holyoke, Mass. She may leave tonight.

There will be more appeals for help, she knows from experience. She will go February 4 to New York City for another appearance on the radio program, "We the People." At that time, she will be decorated for bravery by Milo Warner, national commander of the American Legion, on behalf of the departments of Alabama, Oklahoma, Illinois and New Jersey.

Mrs. McMullin appeared on the program about a year ago. In the following 12 months she traveled 29,000 miles to give 53,093 cubic centimeters of blood—53 quarts—in 256 transfusions.

The average human body holds at any given instant between 5 and 6 quarts of blood. In a normal person, blood given in a transfusion will be replenished in two or three days, yet physicians seldom permit a blood donor to submit to a transfusion oftener than once every six weeks.

During 1940, Mrs. McMullin averaged a transfusion every day and a half.

Most of Them Recovered

Mrs. McMullin began giving transfusions in 1935. For the next four years she gave 38 transfusions, traveled about 600 miles. The radio program increased her assignment nearly sevenfold.

In five years she has given transfusions to 37 persons, most of whom were considered hopelessly ill. Some of these required many transfusions. Twenty-eight of her "patients" recovered, nine of them from streptococcus viridans, which usually strikes the heart.

Most of her patients, she recalls, were young, poor, struggling, and in love. She hears regularly from most of them. Their letters tell of marriage, the new job, the arrival of the first-born.

Life Depended on Transfusion

Mrs. McMullin has no children, but staying with her are the daughters of her sister, Mrs. John Ryan, of Philadelphia. Delores Ryan is 6, Rose Marie, 8. Rose Marie was dying in 1935 of a staphylococcus infection resulting from a July 4 firecracker burn. Her meager chance for life depended on the last-minute discovery of someone who had recovered from the infection and who could, therefore, provide immunized blood for transfusions.

No such person could be found, so Mrs. McMullin, though warned by physicians that she faced death, submitted to inoculation with staphylococcus germs. The doctor's warning very nearly materialized.

There were days when even Mrs. McMullin despaired of life. Years before she had recovered from a streptococcus viridans infection and the immunization this built up may have been responsible for her recovery. Rose Marie got her life-giving transfusions.

Mrs. McMullin is 42. Her blue eyes are calm and clear and she looks every bit as healthy as she says she feels. She has yet to feel weak or ill after a transfusion. She never eats special, blood-building diets.

Yesterday she ate only fruit. She's worried about her weight. In 1940, the year of 256 transfusions, she gained 30 pounds.

Recreation Unit Proposed

Transformation of the Industrial Home School grounds at Wisconsin Avenue and Calvert Street Northwest into a recreation center, when and if the institution is moved elsewhere, was urged yesterday.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission made the recommendation, according to Secretary Thomas S. Settle, in anticipation of the school's transfer in the near future. It is administered by the Board of Public Welfare.

Construction of a maximum of 20 tennis courts in East Potomac Park by the office of National Capital Parks was approved by the commission. The courts, to be built with CCC labor, will be replacements for those abolished by the Jefferson Memorial project.

The commission indorsed land-use plans for the 600-family naval housing project in Anacostia and the James Creek housing development, sponsored by the Alley Dwelling Authority, in the Southwest section.

Veterans for Home Guard

Round the Clock Styles for the Conservative Matron

These smart Capitol matrons are here modeling the outfits they will wear at the benefit tomorrow at the Sulgrave Club for the Metropolitan Police Boys Club. All costumes stress dignity and simplicity of line. Below—Mrs. Paul V. McNutt models a Hattie Carnegie afternoon dress. At center—Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould wears a Hattie Carnegie model in an ice-blue wool and chiffon coat. Right—Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling models a brown shepherd-plaid suit

'Be Your Age' in Dress, Capital Matrons Advise

Models in Benefit Fashion Show For Police Boys Club Stress Need Of Simple Lines, Unified Effects

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

If you are 40, it's smarter to look your age than to look the age of your debutante daughter. A matronly woman should shun extremely high style fashions and should wear clothes that are individually becoming to her.

These are the opinions of some of Washington's best dressed matrons who will model spring costumes tomorrow afternoon in the fashion show at the Sulgrave Club for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club.

For the first time the exclusive, austere quarters of the Sulgrave Club are being opened to a fashion show. A feature of the show will be clothes for the matron, modeled by some of Washington's best dressed matrons who are noted for their smartness and good taste. These will include Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould and Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt.

Long Lines Good

"A matron should not be tempted to be too youthful in her dress," said Mrs. McNutt. "She doesn't do herself or her clothes justice." She continued by saying that she likes long draped lines because they are more figure-flattering when the waistline begins to thicken. Mrs. McNutt doesn't like fussy costumes, but those with very simple lines. She thinks a woman should buy clothes with as fine lines as possible for the amount of money she has to spend on them. And above all, she believes that as matrons increase in age they require "infinitely more care in grooming."

Mrs. Houghteling thinks that a matron should be especially careful not to select clothes that a young deb should wear. "A costume should not be so smart that it can be worn only two or three times," she said. "Young girls will disagree with me on this point," she continued, "but I think a costume must be complete. Above all, a hat should be worn. All accessories—hat, gloves, shoes and purse—should be suitable for the ensemble, or the most charming costume can be ruined."

Extremes Are Bad

Mrs. Houghteling prefers simple clothes, rather than fussy ones, and believes most matrons look better in them. "It's a great mistake to wear a style just because it's being done," she said.

"The most important thing in any woman's dress," said Mrs. Gould, "is to wear what is individually becoming to her, regardless of what is fashionable for the season." Mrs. Gould's criterion is individuality at all times in dress. She believes a woman should not indulge in extremes of style when they do not suit her. She likes plain sport clothes and thinks that plainness and good line make them unusual.

All of these women shy away from prints, as they feel they are seldom flattering. They prefer black for daily wear and think it is suitable for most occasions.

Miss Elizabeth Howry is president of the Women's Auxillary to the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, which is sponsoring the show.

Music Committee Tonight

Te Advancement of American Music Committeee, of the District D. A. R., will meet this evening at 8 o'clock, at the chapterhouse. Miss Wilmuth Gary, well known writer and composer, will speak on "The Origin of American Music." Miss Martha R. McCabe, of Col. John Donelson Chapter will talk on Lowell Mason.. Mrs. Lois Marshall Hicks will preside.

New Shampoo Can Be Used In Sickness

If the flu bug has bitten you, or you are in bed convalescing from some other illness, no doubt your hair has become unruly. But there is a way to combat this hair situation because of a new Minipoo shampoo with a mitt.

Because no water or liquids are required, doctors approve of this shampoo used in the hospital or at home. Minipoo thoroughly cleanses the hair and scalp and keeps the wave intact. Children too approve of Minipoo because no soap and water can get in their eyes.

To use this shampoo mitt, you simply put the mitt on and sprinkle it with Minipoo. Rub the powder into the glove, then with the mitted hand, grasp a lock of hair right next to the scalp and rub it, working out toward the ends of the hair. Very little of the powder is required. Go over the entire head in this manner, then remove the glove, shake it free of powder, turn inside out and put it on again. With the clean surface, go over each lock of hair to remove Minipoo. Finish off with a good brushing and combing.

What a Record?

When Tiffany moved to their new building recently, they carried along 3,000 barrels of china and glass without breaking a single piece!

Now is the Time to Beware of Contagious Colds!

At a treacherous time like this, with contagious colds all around you, what you do today may save you and your family a lot of sickness, worry and trouble later.

Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SNIFFLE, SNEEZE OR SIGN OF NASAL IRRITATION . . . put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril right away. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because Va-tro-nol is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you'll find that a few drops of Va-tro-nol helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) depend on Vicks VapoRub to relieve miseries. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a warming poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both Va-tro-nol and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks Va-tro-nol and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today—have them handy, ready to use.

How Meet 'Nice People' Who Won't Scorn Her Because of Her Occupation, Asks Widow Who Entered Domestic Service After Husband Died

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a widow, 42 years old, with no children or close relatives. Two years ago, when my husband died, the very bottom seemed to drop out of my world. I didn't know which way to turn. It was necessary for me to become self supporting, and having no business training, I turned to the only work I had ever done, which is housework.

I came to Washington, as I didn't want to engage in that kind of work in my home town, where I was widely known and had always had my own home and circle of friends. Now, after two years here, doing housework, I am growing desperate. I have a good place, where the family is very nice to me, but I don't know a soul.

I am in a rut. I do my work, go to bed, get up and start over again, without ever having anyone even to talk to. I tried going to church Sunday evenings, thinking I could make a few friends there: but to no avail. Is there anything I can do, any place I can go, where I would meet really nice people my age, who wouldn't "look down on me" because of the work I do?

Any advice you can give me certainly will be deeply appreciated. I shall watch your column in the paper and listen to your Saturday morning radio talks, hoping you may find some time for me. I don't believe I can carry on much longer in this utter loneliness. Very sincerely.

Join 'Discussion Group' Which Meets at G. W. U.

DEAR L. S. M.: The answer to your desperate need of constructive social fellowship may be found in attendance at the weekly meetings of the Women's Job Clinic, held every Tuesday night from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock, in Room 105, Building D, on the George Washington University Campus, under the leadership of Dr. Marjorie Shearon. The Clinic came into existence nine weeks ago, under the sponsorship of the Women's Occupational Council of the District of Columbia—of which Dr. Shearon is president.

Primarily designed to acquaint jobless or unsuitably employed women, from the ages of 35 to 60-odd, with the kind of work each is individually best qualified to do—the Clinic is now attracting a steadily growing attendance of women, both employed and unemployed, from all types of social and professional backgrounds. It has become, in essence, a dynamic "discussion group," the spirit of which might be defined as: "All for one and one for all." Whereas the "business of the meeting" is formally concluded by 9:30 p. m., each week, a goodly portion of the audience invariably lingers on until around 11 p. m., enthusiastically discussing common problems in informal fashion.

Because your loneliness is an outgrowth of (a) your isolated employment and (b) your embarrassed sense of social, economic and occupational "dislocation"—participation in the Clinic's lively, democratic attack upon the problem of improving the lot of the non-specialist middle-aged working woman, offers the heaven-sent total solution of your distress.

Had you listened to my radio talk of Saturday morning, December 28, you would have heard the Clinic's activities reviewed in greater detail—a review, by the way, that brought 30 additional clients to the Clinic the following week, thus obliging Dr. Shearon to find a larger room for the meeting, which had an enrollment of about 100 women.

Employed professional women are rallying to the support of their less fortunate sisters by attending Clinic sessions for the purpose of instructing the jobless in how to find jobs; and the unsuitably employed in how to fit themselves for—and acquire—more suitable employment. Women with cars are chauffering those without cars on job hunts. The skilled help the unskilled in filling out attention-getting application blanks. Business men and directors of personnel in many fields of employment are turning to the Clinic for "older age" women employes to handle certain responsible jobs, requiring mature experience and judgment.

The list of "success stories" based on the Clinic's activities is growing daily. A former teacher, now 61, recently found a job in a private school. Another private school has appealed to the clinic for a woman, "up to 50," for an office position. One woman, imbued with hope and self-confidence after a Clinic meeting, went out the next day and landed a good job at excellent pay,—and she is 44. Another woman, 54, with silver hair, talked herself into a secretarial position,—after taking the Clinic's advice to make herself as chic and pretty as possible before seeking employment. "You should have seen her the day she got that job," says Dr. Shearon. "She was lovely in a maroon-colored outfit,—simply perfect with her white hair."

The atmosphere of the Clinic—as I reported over the radio—is electric with hope, expectancy and activity. The enterprise has been described as "a project glorifying the older woman." Helpful suggestions are freely exchanged in open forum discussion, led by Dr. Shearon; personal experiences at job-hunting are cited; the importance to the older woman of style and manner and "personality" is continually emphasized; the talk is lively and general; and the shy or self-conscious woman (such as you) is thus indirectly trained to that poised conversational approach which helps "win friends and influence people."

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

A Recluse Explains

It's not that I don't like the people
I meet at cocktails and teas
It's only that those on the radio
Make me feel so much more at ease.

It's not that I don't like the friends
I see when I go to a party,
It's just that the ones on my bookshelves
Are so much less exhausting and arty.

Today's Social Notes
(From the Truthtown Torch)

Junior Men About Town are making plans for a "Screwball Cotillion" next month to lighten the drab social scene for members of the younger set who are unable to go south to sun or north to ski. The committee includes Eustis (Chunky) Birdseed 2d, J. K. (Squeaky) Jitters 3d and Amory B. V. D. Zither 4th.

Mrs. Elspeth Ermine has had to abandon temporarily her work with the Committee for Starving War Refugees and will leave by plane tomorrow for Palm Beach. "I feel that I simply must have some sun—also some rest," said Mrs. Ermine today. "My metabolism tests are not what they should be."

The Ditherton Doolittle 3ds, wed last May, have engaged Dorrance Doodlebug, the noted architect, to draw plans for changing the hobby room of their new home into a nursery.

Mr. and Mrs. Arbuthnot Abercrombie are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Archibald Abercrombie and Mr. and Mrs. A. Algernon Adolphus Abercrombie over the week-end.

The Busy Mrs. Beetle

Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, Truthtown's eccentric dowager, will shortly transfer her activities to Palm Beach. Mrs. Beetle is organizing a movement to establish there a large gambling casino modeled after Monte Carlo, also some spas where millionaires may take "cures" and in addition hopes to promote an international best-dressed woman contest.

"Something should be done," said Mrs. Beetle yesterday "to duplicate the atmosphere of the Riviera. Otherwise the wealthy refugees from that district will not feel at home. And a discontented populace always leads to revolution."

Lecture Series

Mrs. Croesus DeMink heads the committee on the "What of Tomorrow" lecture series which will start next Tuesday morning in the Babylonian room of the Hotel Swank. Among the lecturers will be: Count Il Penseroso, refugee poet and pessimist; Archduke Charlemagne, pretender to the throne of Cornucopia; Don Juan Casanova, authority on love and bull fighting; Prince Dmitri Vronsky, a connoisseur of wine, women and antique glass; Baron Hapsburg, authority on hunting lodges, and the Duke of Bovary, former Parisian bon vivant and boulevardier.

Clymer-Popinjay Feud

Hat Sensation For Mary Astor

Hollywood, Calif.—A bombshell in hats is the one Orry Kelly will introduce on Mary Astor who plays a leading role in "The Great Lie."

This is a one-sided diminutive toque of natural gosling down. (Just between us, this feathery down is plucked from the rear of a baby duckling, where the feathers are the softest.) A muff matches. Both are worn with a simple black woolen frock, the bodice carrying a gleaming spray of green tourmalines set in gold.

Juniors to Meet

The Junior Women's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., will meet at the clubhouse tonight at 8 and, following the business meeting Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard, will speak on "Current Events."

Miss Phillips and Miss Hammond Awarded French Croix de Guerre

Ambassador Confers Honors at Embassy Here on Two Who Drove Ambulances In France; Weather Keeps Gen. Pershing Away

By Hope Ridings Miller

Inclement weather and the doctor's orders kept Gen. John J. Pershing away from the ceremony yesterday at which Miss Beatrice Phillips, daughter of United States Ambassador to Italy William Phillips, and Miss Susan Hammond, of Boston, were awarded the Croix de Guerre.

Gen. Pershing was ready to go when his physician took one more look at the ice-coated streets and decided it was a day when nobody should be outside unless it was absolutely necessary. But the ceremony went on at the French Embassy just the same. The French Ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, made the presentation at 1 o'clock, citing in a few simple words the service Miss Phillips and Miss Hammond has rendered his country in driving ambulances in the war zone a few months ago.

Among those witnessing the ceremony was Miss Anne Morgan, head of the American Friends of France, the organization with which Miss Phillips and Miss Hammond worked. Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. Samuel Hammond were down from Boston especially to see their daughters receive the award. Others there were the Counselor of the French Embassy, Jacques Dumaine, and those members of the staff who fought in the war.

The group included Col. Bertrand Vigne, Naval Attache; Commander Denis de Bourgoing, Military Attache; Gen. Auguste Bonavita, attache; Charles Brousse, attache, and Mme. Brousse; the Assistant Naval Attache and the Marquise de Levis-Mirepoix, and Lieut. Michele Dorrance, Assistant Air Attache. (The latter, called the "second World War Ace," was mentioned 14 times in special dispatches and was decorated for his outstanding service to his homeland.)

Drove Ambulance Under Fire

All the young women who rallied to war service in France with Miss Morgan have been awarded the Croix de Guerre. Miss Phillips happened to have hers presented at the French Embassy because she has spent much time in Washington. She was here, in fact, when war clouds began to gather in Europe. Her first step in doing her bit was to line up with the Red Cross. Next she set out to learn typing and also took a night course in automobile mechanics.

From April until the end of war in France, Miss Phillips was on duty—driving an ambulance under shot and shell; serving food to starving women and children; looking after the lame, the halt and the blind and carrying out any welfare orders that came her way.

Miss Hammond's service was much the same type, and both young women proved over and over again that they deserved the Croix de Guerre as much as any soldier who fought on the front. Miss Phillips' harrowing experiences, told in the first person, were written for the Foreign Service Journal of the State Department.

Here in Interest Of Friends of France

Since her return to Washington, Miss Phillips has been doing volunteer work here. She has an apartment at the Fairfax. Her father recently returned to his post at Rome and Mrs. Phillips is spending the winter at her home in Boston.

Miss Morgan, who arrived in Washington yesterday morning, is staying with her niece, Mrs. Arthur Woods. The latter, incidentally, will leave Sunday for Arizona, where she has a school. She will be away from Washington for several weeks.

Here until tomorrow, Miss Morgan will devote as much time as possible to discussing with officials the work of the Friends of France, which she terms "an active organization in temporary suspension." After being in the occupied part of France for several months, Miss Morgan returned to this country recently. She says her plans for the future are indefinite; she has no idea when, or if, she will return to France.

French Envoy Is Feted

In town for a brief stay, the French Ambassador to Brazil, Count de Saint Quentin, who formerly served his country as envoy here, was guest of honor at a dinner given last night by Jacques Dumaine. The party took place at the Mayflower, and guests were mostly members of the embassy staff who served here with Count de Saint Quentin.

Later the entire party went on to the Georgetown home of Baron and Baroness Baeyens, who had also invited in a number of guests for a buffet supper. Among the guests was Miss Phillips, who wore her new Croix de Guerre.

Count de Saint Quentin, who has been staying at the Shoreham, will return to New York tomorrow and will sail for Brazil January 22.

Mrs. Sterling Gives Dinner Honoring Mrs. Atwill

Mrs. Frederick Sterling, wife of the American Minister to Sweden, entertained at dinner last night in honor of Mrs. Lionel Atwill. The party took place in the private dining room of a local restaurant.

Among the guests was Hallett Johnson, who recently returned here from his post as Counselor of our legation in Stockholm, and Mrs. Johnson.

Also present were the Irish Minister and Mrs. Robert Brennan, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, James Clement Dunn, Gen. Allen Gullion, Myron Hofer, Ake Sjolin, attache of the Swedish Legation here, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kauffmann.

Midday Parties Set Record For Number, Despite Weather

Miss Lucinda Rayburn Is Honored At Luncheon for 12; Mrs. Stapleton Entertains for Mrs. Fenton Turck

Women's luncheons took over a sizeable share of the social calendar yesterday, as dozens of Capital hostesses and several out-of-towners braved the winter weather to attend a record number of midday parties.

Miss Lucinda Rayburn, of Bonham, Tex., sister of the Speaker of the House, was guest of honor at a luncheon for 12, at Pierre's. Another out-of-towner, Mrs. Fenton Turck, of New York, house guest of Mrs. John Allan Daugherty, was feted by Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton. Countess de Castellane was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman at the Republican Club. Mrs. Bernard B. Jones was luncheon hostess to a small group of friends who stayed on for bridge and Mrs. David Barkley, daughter-in-law of Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, had a company of 16 lunching with her.

Miss Rayburn, who came to Washington to stay until the day after Inauguration, may yield to the plea of friends to extend her visit. According to present plans, she will stay through next week, at least, and possibly longer. Yesterday's party for her was one of a number on her Washington calendar. Several in the company, including the hostess, Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, hail from Texas, and there was a strong Lone Star accent in the table talk from first to last. Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of the Texas Senator, was there; also Mrs. Fritz Lanham and Mrs. Eugene Worley, wives of Representatives. Mrs. Jack Beall, of Dallas, who is spending some time at the Shoreham, was among the guests, as was Mrs. George Murphy, who formerly lived in Texas.

Other guests were Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Mrs. J. Fred Essary and Mrs. John O. Herrick.

Mrs. Tuckerman's guest list, reading something like a "Congress of Nations," included a number of women who have come to this country "for the duration," as well as several long-time Washington residents. Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czecho-Slovak Minister, was ranking guest, and others there included Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Comtessa de Sylva, Countess de Marenches, Countess de Buyer-Mimeure, Mme. Perotto, Mrs. Mary Stewart, Mrs. Dougall MacDougall, Mrs. Edward Warren Sturdevant, Mrs. Frank Andrews, Mme. Ramaer, Mrs. John Bigelow and Mrs. Harrison C. Stanton.

Mrs Jessie Jones and Mrs. Richard Kleberg were among guests of Mrs. Bernard Jones, who entertained at her home on Wyoming Avenue. Mrs. Barkley was hostess at the Cleveland Avenue home of Senator and Mrs. Barkley and was assisted by the latter.

Gardners Plan Dinner Party

Former Gov. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner will give a dinner Saturday at the Mayflower in honor of a group of friends who will be here for inauguration ceremonies.

Their guests will be Gov. and Mrs. J. M. Broughton, of North Carolina; the Lieutenant Gov. and Mrs. R. L. Harris, R. J. Reynolds, jr., treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, and Mrs. Reynolds; Mrs. Charles W. Tillett, executive director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, and Mr. Tillett; E. B. Denny, State chairman of the North Carolina Democratic Committee, and Mrs. Denny; the adjutant general of North Carolina, J. B. Van Metts, Ralph Webb Gardner, president of the Young Democratic Clubs of North Carolina, and Capt. and Mrs. James E. Webb.

Marjorie Webster To Give Sketches

Miss Marjorie Webster, president of the evening auxiliary of the Women's Guild of the Central Union Mission, will give a program of war-time sketches and impersonations on Wednesday evening January 22 at 8 o'clock under the auspices of the auxiliary in the social hall of the National City Christian Church at 1308 Vermont Avenue Northwest.

The music of the recital will be given by the Glee Club of the Marjorie Webster School. The soloist of this group will be Miss Rosemary Ward of Chicago. Miss Frances Brunt will play the piano accompaniment. Miss Wilhelmina Haley is director of the Glee Club and has chosen some new and striking numbers for her choristers.

Gadsby Tavern Plans Washington Concert

Historic Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria, where George Washington attended two public celebrations of his birthday, 1798 and 1799, will be the setting for a candlelight concert in his memory on February 28. The Pro Musica String Quartet and Emerson Meyers will play a program of eighteenth century chamber music.

William Robert Adam, of Alexandria, is sponsoring the concert and 200 will be invited.

Inauguration To Bring Many Notables Here

Almost Any Hotel Will Be a Paradise To Autograph Fans

Over the week-end Washington will be a paradise for celebrity seekers. A morning spent sitting in the lobby of almost any hotel would result in a full book of famous autographs for those interested in collecting them.

Ethel Barrymore has deserted Broadway and her hit-play, "The Corn Is Green," for several days and took over the Lunts' reservations at the Shoreham when, at the last moment, they found it was impossible for them to come. She will appear at the Inaugural Gala Sunday.

Capt. and Mrs. Boerge Rohde—she is the former Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen—will accompany Fannie Hurst to Washington. They will stay in Mrs. Henry L. Doherty's apartment at the Shoreham.

Among the many others who are here to see or to participate in the activities attending Inauguration are Mickey Rooney and Edward G. Robinson, the former Senator from California and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, and the New York sports authority and short-story writer, Damon Runyon.

Mary Wallace To Be Wed

Of particular interest to the service set is the announcement by Capt. and Mrs. Henry George Stewart Wallace, of Coronado, Calif., of the engagement of their daughter, Mary Marjorie, to Ensign John Briscoe Pye, U. S. N., son of Vice Admiral and Mrs. William Satterlee Pye, of Long Beach, Calif., and Washington.

The prospective bride is a granddaughter of John Gillie, of Butte, Mont. She was graduated from the Bishop's School for Girls at La Jolla, Calif., and is now a freshman at Pomona College. She is a member of the Zlac Club of San Diego. Ensign Pye was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1939.

Mrs. Pye recently returned to Long Beach after an extended trip to Honolulu and a stay in Bremerton, Wash.

Ensign Pye's grandfather was Judge John P. Briscoe, of Prince Frederick, Calvert County, Md., and he is a grand nephew of Dr. William Sinclair Bowen, of Washington.

Donna Brambilla Honors Niece At Cocktail Party

Donna Julia Brambilla was hostess at a cocktail party yesterday at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of her niece, Mrs. Virginia Rodgers Barker, and Capt. Carl Darnell, U. S. A. Their marriage will take place at noon today at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Philip Coffin.

Yesterday the hostess wore a frock of black, simply made, with emerald buttons. She was assisted by Mrs. Coffin, Mrs. Carl Darnell, mother of the bridegroom-elect who with Mr. Darnell is here from Chicago for the wedding, and Miss Eleanor Darnell, sister of Capt. Darnell.

Also present was Mrs. Barker's sister, Mrs. John Sweeney, of Charleston, W. Va., who will be her only attendant today. Mr. Sweeney is in town for the wedding and was among the guests, who also included friends of Donna Julia and the bridal couple.

Wallace Family To Have Reunion

The Vice President-elect and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace are looking forward to a family reunion over the week-end.

Their daughter, Miss Jean Wallace, will join them from her studies at Connecticut College, and their two sons, Robert and Henry, will come from Iowa. The latter will have his wife with him. Mr. Wallace's brothers, James Wallace, of Des Moines, and John, of St. Petersburg, and his sister, Mrs. Angus McLay, of Birmingham, Mich., will also be in the party.

Another sister of the Vice President-elect, Mme. Bruggmann, is already in Washington, where her husband is Minister of Switzerland.

About the Town

DUDLEY HARMON

ALFONS LANDA, executive assistant to Inaugural Chairman Davies, has decided that every third person throughout the United States is an embryonic composer. The committee is being flooded with compositions from people who "have just written the greatest song anybody ever heard." Naturally, they are eager to have them played on the great day.

Most of the songs are patriotic in character, and nearly all contain the word "America." Some of the titles are "I Love America," "Do You Love America?" "Let's Help America," "God Save America," etc.

Some 300 letters a day are pouring into the committee's headquarters in the District Building. Many contain suggestions as to the President's conduct on Monday—he should do this but mustn't do that. Others say the writer is a Roosevelt enthusiast and would the committee please send along a ticket for a seat in the grandstand?

IN KEEPING with the importance of the occasion, the invitations for the tea at the Davies home on Sunday are almost the biggest Washington has ever seen. They measure ten inches in length and half a foot in width. At the top is a heavy gold seal and enclosed are cards of admission and a map showing the way to the Davies residence on Foxhall road. The party is in honor of the Governors and their wives and is scheduled from 4 to 6.

ONLY A FEW weeks ago Mary Wilson returned from the Kentucky mountains, where she spent "the nicest Christmas she ever had" working for the Frontier Nursing Service. Now, rather unexpectedly, she is down there again, accompanied by Marion Shouse. They were called to help in the unprecedented number of flu cases in the area.

Founded by Mrs. Mary Breckinridge, the service cares for hundreds of mountaineers who have no other source of medical aid. The volunteers spend all day in the saddle riding from one cabin to another, and take entire care of their horses themselves.

DWIGHT FISKE, who first burst onto the nightclub world as a singer of double entendre songs about eight years ago, is coming down to Washington to play at a party. He will perform at the affair Mrs. Cary Langhorne is planning for Thursday evening, January 30, at the 1925 F Street Club.

Other parties on the calendar are Mrs. Waggaman Pulver's breakfast on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. George Gordon's dinner next Friday, and Mrs. Demarest Lloyd's ditto on January 31. Col. and Mrs. Kemper Williams, of New Orleans, will entertain friends on Sunday before the Inaugural Gala at Constitution Hall.

Hollywood Pair To Visit Here

Planning to linger on in Washington after inauguration are Miss Helen Gahagan, Democratic Committeewoman from California, and her actor-husband, Melvyn Douglas. Unlike others of their profession who will come to Washington to appear in the Inaugural Gala, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas are here as political participants in the scene. Both have been known for their interest and active work in the migratory labor situation in California and elsewhere.

They plan to spend some time next week as the house guests of the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes. On Wednesday Mrs. Ickes will be "at home" and will also be the hostess at a cabinet dinner on Thursday honoring Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Broy to Fete Group at Hotel Tomorrow Night

Mrs. Charles Broy, wife of the United States consul at Brussels, will entertain a party of friends at the governors' banquet and ball at the Hotel Lafayette tomorrow evening.

Mrs. Broy will have as guest of honor Senator Robert Rice Reynolds, of North Carolina. Other guests will include Mrs. Mary Wright Johnson, former Democratic national committeewoman for the District of Columbia; Mrs. Mary Heffernan, of Providence, R. I.; Dr. Webster Chandler, of Norfolk, Va.; Cleveland B. McKnight, of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Golde Norton Kimmel, sister of Mrs. Broy.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Kays, of Warrenton, announce the marriage October 5 of their daughter, Anne Cologne, to George Ramsey Bready, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Ramsey Bready, of Herndon. The couple were wed in Bethesda, the Rev. W. A. Albertson, of the Bethesda Presbyterian Church, officiating.

Women's Clubs Back Defense But Oppose War, Federation's Directors Told at Session Here

Mrs. F. H. Clausen, Citizenship Chairman, Makes Her Report

The Post Club Editor.

The 2,000,000 women of the General Federation of Women's Clubs are opposed to war but unanimously back of national defense, Mrs. F. H. Clausen, of Horicon, Wis., chairman of the department of American citizenship of the federation, declared yesterday, in her report at the second day's session of the board of directors at the Hotel Mayflower.

In the preparation for defense, women have a very definite part, both individually and as organizations, according to Mrs. Clausen. With mounting taxes to finance this gigantic program there will be less to spend on the needs of the home; hence the necessity for an intensive study of the economics of home management and of consumer problems—how best to clothe and feed the family within the income.

Last night the clubwomen were addressed by Barclay Acheson, associate editor of the Readers Digest, and Palmer Bevis, of New York, executive director of Citizenship Educational Service, who were presented by the federation president, Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar.

Americans must be alert to propaganda emanating from the dictators, Mr. Bevis declared, and be prepared to counter it effectively. A democracy "cannot fall unless its own people become faint-hearted, soft, or apathetic." He urged that "we must keep our heads, hear all that any have to say, and cling steadfastly to the great democratic truths stated in our Bill of Rights."

Intolerance plays a great part in undermining democracy, according to Mr. Bevis. "We must not become so terror-stricken that in the name of democracy we slay democracy," he continued. "Foreign agents endeavor to destroy a nation setting faction against faction, citizen against citizen, community against community.

"There are ominous signs of this in our country today. Old World hatreds, religious, racial and social, are being fanned into flame in the United States. He who adds fuel to this fire is playing the game of the dictator-controlled propagandists. The flames of intolerance undermine democracy quickly and completely. Our Nation must strengthen its defenses of morale as well as build ramparts of a more material nature.

It cannot do so with hatred and disunion."

Flaying dictatorships, Mr. Acheson asserted that totalitarianism stifles the normal growing progress of the state. "Its final result must be retrogression and decay," he said. "History shows that whenever power has been concentrated in the hands of a few, that power has been eventually used to exploit the many.

"All of us," Mr. Acheson said, "enjoying the sweet liberty of America should think deeply of the obligation we owe such a form of government. We gladly collect the fruits of freedom in personal comfort through the highest standards of living afforded by any nation to its people.

"We should stop looking for panaceas. The solution of our problems rests within ourselves. Repay your Government with your own individual contribution of thoughtful, responsible, active, good citizenship. Don't look for ready-made cures or 'deliverers'—you and millions of 'yous' are the government. Your forefathers earned the freedom you enjoy—it is your personal responsibility not only to preserve it but actively to further its progress."

Music at last night's session was provided by members of the music section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, and rehearsal for the Golden Jubilee Song, "Federation, March Along."

Yesterday afternoon the visiting club women were received at the Pan American Union by Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general, and Dr. William Manger, the counselor who cooperated in planning "The Imaginary Good Neighbor Tour" of South America, which is a current study project of the federation. Other speakers were Mrs. Frederic Beggs, of Wyckoff, N. J., chairman of international relations for the federation, who led the actual tour made by a group of 25 federation officers last summer; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, who was a member of the party, and Mrs. Ruth Williams, of Balboa Heights, Canal Zone.

Following the talks there was a piano recital of Latin American music by Miss Margarita Madrigal, of New York. Mrs. Dunbar presided over the meeting.

Discussing the part women may play in the cause of Pan American solidarity, Dr. Rowe said: "It is to the enlightenment of public opinion that women can, and are, making important contributions to the great cause of Pan American cooperation. The events of the last few years have demonstrated that insofar as the governments of the American republics are concerned, there is every disposition to develop both unity of purpose and unity of policy. The full significance of this movement must be brought home to the masses of the people."

"The situation which has developed in Europe and Asia," he continued, "together with the dangers which this situation involves for the nations of the Americas, has served to make us conscious, as never before, of the value of our heritage and has aroused a determination that this heritage shall be defended and preserved whatever the cost. One of the first requisites for the preservation of those institutions of freedom which we prize above life itself, is the establishment and maintenance of a united front of the Americas."

Mrs. Beggs, in her talk, urged as three ways of increasing hemisphere solidarity, the teaching of Spanish as a compulsory subject in the public schools of this country; increasing "a thousand-fold," scholarships for Latin-American students, and economic planning for the Latin-American republics.

"More than 2,200 clubs, members of the general federation, have thus far registered for 'The Imaginary Good Neighbor Tour,' organized a year and a half ago jointly by the Pan American Union and the federation," the women were told by Dr. Manger.

Following the visit to the Pan American Union, the women gathered for tea at General Federation headquarters, 1734 N Street.

This morning there will be committee reports and final discussion of proposed revisions in the constitution and by-laws. At 1 o'clock federation officers who are members of their State defense councils will be guests of Miss Harriet Elliott's staff at the National Defense Council for luncheon at the Iron Gate Inn.

In the afternoon the women will make a tour of the Department of Labor. The program tonight will be a presentation of Minnie Frost Rands' story-drama, "The Prince of Peace," at the Arts Club.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY in the campaign for traffic safety will be stressed in a program devoted to the subject, being planned by Mrs. George Clark, safety chairman for the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, to be held Tuesday, January 28, at 10 a. m. in the board room of the N. E. A. Building.

"Until people get over saying 'Why did he do that?' and say 'Why did I do it?' we shall never get anywhere in our safety efforts," Mrs. Clark declared.

The subject also will be included on the program of the annual convention of the District Congress, which has been set for May 27 and 28.

The Oxford Branch maintains a room for the use of all women in uniform, but particularly for transients such as those serving with the motor transport corps. A generous donation for a cup of tea tomorrow will provide many cups of tea for these weary women.

Hostesses for the afternoon are Mrs. John Meehan, Miss Ruth McClelland, Mrs. Helen Crean, Miss Katharine Andrews, Mrs. Edward Bowman, Miss Alice Caughey, Miss Sadie Caughey, Mrs. Wallace Chiswell, Mrs. John Ewell, Mrs. Fred Franke, Miss Caroline Hendricks, Miss Lena Hitchcock, Miss Mary Morton, Miss Katharine McKlever and Mrs. Virginia Nelson.

The District Society, Dames of the Loyal Legion, will have a card party at the clubhouse of the League of Republican Women, 1301 Seventeenth Street, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, with tea following. The proceeds will be devoted to the patriotic work of the society.

Mrs. J. Jerome Wilben is president of the organization, succeeding Mrs. Hugh Carnes Smith, who recently resigned.

Women Voters Back Arms Bill

"As a substitute for war," the national board of the League of Women Voters has announced active support of the "lease-lend" bill to aid the democracies, now under consideration by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The league's stand is based on a program item adopted nearly a year ago: "A foreign policy as a nonbelligerent which permits discrimination against an aggressor and favors the victim of aggression."

Miss Marguerite M. Wells, National League president, clarified the league's position on "the bold experiment to bring pressure in war situations without recourse to war" in a letter to State presidents:

"The act to promote the defense of the United States is of such far-reaching implications that it cannot be operated without sacrifice, public and private, present and future, comparable to the sacrifices demanded by war itself. Yet it is not an act providing for war. On the contrary it is a substitute for war.

"Such a substitute the League of Women Voters has long sought. It comes in a way we had never envisaged. It comes too late to prevent wars elsewhere, but not too late to halt their spread. It comes as an experiment to be made by one country alone; it is not multilateral but unilateral. It is a bold experiment, but it is not war, and the great powers it confers upon the President leave him free to carry out his repeated pledge not to take this country into war."

Features at Benefit

A booth in which fortunes will be told will be in charge of Dr. Laura S. Brennon and Mrs. Harry Richardson at the federation card party and style show to be held at Hotel 2400, February 14, for the benefit of British war relief. Besides this there will be a "white elephant" table with Mrs. Paul J. Heaton and Mrs. Violet Potter in charge.

Folk Council Plans Activity

The Washington Folk Council has elected a steering committee to conduct the program of the council for the coming year. Members of the committee are Herbert Wilson, international house, chairman; Miss Ruth Robbins, director of Holiday House, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. John Burlew, Allemande-Lefters; Miss Carol Preston, head mistress of Potomac School; Miss Mary M. Burnett, music secretary, Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Julia Dwyer, executive secretary, Washington Country Dance Centers; Mrs. Virginia B. Sholar, recreation secretary, Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Kendall Foss, Evelyn Davis dance group; Laurence Kiefer, president, Wellington Villa Association; Hugo Walter, Council of Social Agencies.

The committee plans a practice group in country dance calling, to meet the increasing demands for leadership in this popular form of recreation. The details of this group are being handled by Mrs. Sholar, Mrs. Dwyer and Kiefer. An evening of folk singing and dancing is scheduled for February 15, when outstanding leaders in the folk field will meet with the Folk Council membership and their guests.

The committee is cooperating with the American Camping Association in planning an international program of songs and dances to be given at the Wardman Park Hotel on February 14, during the A. C. A. convention which will be held at that time.

*X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JANUARY 17, 1941 17

Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Federal employment continued its record-breaking pace during November. Civil Service Commission has revealed that 25,359 new employes were added during the month. In the District, new workers were hired at the rate of more than 100 a day, an increase of 3,126 for the month. Over the entire country the commission reports there were 1,111,530 Federal employes on December 1. The figure was 152,605 in the District.

Expanding national defense agencies accounted for the bulk of the increase. War Department hired 1,041; Navy, 708; Justice, 403; Commerce, 259, and Federal Security, 210. The only reduction here of any consequence was the dismissal of 104 employes at Soil Conservation Service. The November pay roll here was $26,244,698, an increase of $240,000 over October.

Dr. Martha Eliot, Children's Bureau assistant chief, is packing her bags for a flying trip to England. She'll study the effect of the war on England along with several other Federal officials, including Dr. Thomas Parran, Public Health Service surgeon general, for the War Department. They plan to leave Saturday on the clipper. Katherine Lenroot was invited to make the trip but couldn't arrange it.

Treasury's Procurement Division has 55 persons buying and packing food, clothing and medical equipment for England, China, Greece and Finland. It has 24 employes here who have made 30,800 shipments of textiles and yarn to Red Cross chapters the country over. The materials are made into socks, sweaters and other clothing for defenders of democracy by volunteer Red Cross workers.

Procurement has spent $5,480,221 of its $30,000,000 appropriation and has nearly $10,000,000 of uncompleted purchases. It has bought 9,000,000 yards of textiles, 640,000 pounds of yarn, 120,000 pairs of trousers, 70,000 raincoats, 120,000 pairs of shoes, 270,000 suits of underwear, 517,000 blankets, 134,000 pairs of socks, 44,000,000 items of medicine and 400 operating sets.

The $30,000,000 is going a lot farther and the Allies are getting more help from the fact that red tape has been slashed to the limit and administrative expenses lowered to a minimum. The agency may buy 50,000 pounds of yarn from one concern to be sent to several hundred Red Cross chapters. Formerly, bills of lading and other paper work were required on each individual shipment. It slowed down the program and added to the overhead expense. W. E. Hayghe, of Procurement's traffic division, is credited with the idea of a blanket bill of lading to cover all shipments from any one factory. Transportation agencies and factories agreed to the plan for the first time in history. Hayghe was assisted by Robert LeFevre, assistant director, and R. J. Widmann, of the Red Cross unit.

Fred Polangin, information chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, is the latest New Dealer to be offered a job by trustees of Associated Gas & Electric. He'll accept if his appointment is approved by the Federal court . . . Robert G. Seaks, TVA lawyer, has been appointed assistant to FCC Chairman James Fly. Nathan H. David, former assistant, has transferred to the commission's legal staff . . . Paul M. DeHart is handling personnel at War's National Guard Bureau . . . Senator Mead, of New York, may sponsor a bill that would require the Government to give annual pay raises to its competent employes.

Top bagpipe player in this country is a Federal employe. He is James Bremner, Navy Yard electrician, who has won the championship three times at annual rallies of the Scottish Games Association. Bremner came to this country from Scotland in 1925 and one of the first things he did at Kearny, N. J., was to organize a bagpipe band. His band was selected to play for the King and Queen of England during their visit here.

Civil Service Commission will establish its card punch register within a few days which undoubtedly will cause a number of temporary Census employes to lose their jobs. Nearly 1,400 punch card operators were hired at Census subject to passing the Civil Service test and those who didn't pass will be axed. Meantime, the demand for punchers is growing and those who pass the exam are almost certain to get jobs.

Even Bessie Speeds up Production

Kappa, Ill., Jan. 16 (INS).—Virgil Redbaugh today named the triplet calves to which his Guernsey cow gave birth "F," "D," and "R."

His explanation of giving them the President's initials was that the cow had responded in such magnificent fashion to Mr. Roosevelt's plea for increased production.

ADA Chief Assails D. C. Relief Policy

Merely Prevents 'Immediate Death' At Least Cost, Ihlder Tells Groups

John Ihlder, Alley Dwelling Authority director, last night charged that the present relief policy of the District "prevents immediate death at the least immediate cost" for those aid recipients who are in the lowest category and the unemployed employables.

Ihlder, who spoke before the joint meeting of the Neighborhood Councils and the Progressive Education Association, characterized the inadequacy of public relief for needy families as shortsighted.

"A really intelligent relief policy should be based on the principle of developing the potentialities in our people. Actually, the net cost of such an enlightened approach to the problem would be less than our present inadequacy," he said.

Ihlder challenged the neighborhood councils to organize and crystallize public opinion in support of decent relief standards. He added that a complete housing code setting minimum standards based on decency and health requirements was urgently needed in Washington.

The objectives and accomplishments of three neighborhood councils were described by Mrs. Warren A. Gardner, of the First Ward Council; Dr. E. B. Henderson, of the Central Council, and Miss Cecelia Dulin, of the southeast Council.

Robert Eaves, chairman of the coordinating committee of the eight neighborhood councils, explained the relationship between the local groups and the Council of Social Agencies. The latter is responsible for the organization of the local councils and provides the services of a secretary to assist them.

A motion was adopted placing the Progressive Education Association and the neighborhood councils on record as favoring the continuance of the art and music projects of the WPA. These projects were described in the motion as invaluable to the settlements and recreation centers of the District, since through them art and music teachers were provided for underprivileged children.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Felian Garzia gives a piano recital Thursday night in the Arts Club. Program: Prelude in F sharp (Bach), Sonata in E flat major, Op. 81 (Beethoven), Prelude in E minor, Etude in Thirds, Scherzo in B flat minor (Chopin), The Little Shepherd, Reflets dans l'Eau, Poissons d'Or (Debussy), Witches' Dance, Sonetto del Petrarca in A flat, Hungarian Rhapsody No. 11 (Liszt).

Contributing his services in the laudable cause of starting a fund for the purchase of a new piano for the Arts Club, Felian Garzia gave a piano recital last evening in the gallery-auditorium. The response of the club members was naturally generous, but that was not the sole reason for the large attendance. Any appearance by Mr. Garzia in his professional role is a guarantee of the pleasure derivative from artistic musicianship. His approach to his art is reverent and his feeling for the nuances of interpretation is highly sensitive. Based upon technical surety, his readings are invariably poetic and evocative.

BROWN

His short program was built neatly in proportions so arranged as to produce cumulative effect. He used Bach's ingratiating little F sharp prelude as preparation for Beethoven's "Lebewohl" sonata, which was welcome as a rare visitor these days. His Chopin group began with the E minor prelude, and led through the etude in thirds to the dark turbulence of the B flat minor scherzo. His Debussy selections started with the simple pipings of "The Little Shepherd," proceeded to the quivering patterns of "Reflections in the Water," and closed with the darting colors of "Gold Fish." In the last group he conjoined Edward McDowell's "Witches' Dance" with the style upon which it was modeled, and presented Liszt's "Sonetto del Petrarca" in A flat and the eleventh "Rhapsodie Hongroise."

Of major importance in the recital was Mr. Garzia's eloquent reading of the Beethoven sonata. This work, which seems to have gone out of vogue for the moment, has particular significance as the only sonata for which the composer provided a definite programatic meaning: farewell, absence and return. It is in Beethoven's grand manner, and constructed on a noble scale, with a treatment of the piano both broad and brilliant.

In view of the title, one wonders whether Beethoven had in mind Bach's "Caprice on the Departure of His Favorite Brother." The title, however, should not mislead the auditor into sentimental romanticism, as it did the musicologist, Adolf Bernard Marx, who frequently started off on the wrong foot in his surmises. Marx saw "a sad picture which brings before the mind the parting—let us assume of two lovers; the deserted person—let us assume again sweetheart or wife, and reunion of the parted ones."

Unfortunately for Marx, the reality was more prosaic. Beethoven wrote on his manuscript inscriptions which leave no doubt that he meant one of his patrons and pupils. At the beginning stands: "The Farewell, Vienna, May 4, 1809, on the departure of His Imperial Highness, the revered Archduke Rudolph" and over the finale: "The Arrival of" and so forth, "January 30, 1810."

New Type of American Nomad—Antique Dealers—Meet Here

STYLES 1880 AND 1941—Marian Wynter, dressed the modern way, wonders how it would be to wear this bustle dress of 1880, exhibited at the antique show in the Mayflower Hotel

The present craze for colonial furnishings has produced a new type of American nomad.

He has the tongue of a traveling salesman, the scholarship of a museum curator, the appearance of a down-and-out aristocrat, and a taste for strange, ornate and sometimes beautiful relics of a by-gone era. He calls himself an antique dealer.

His habitat, generally, is a musty little shop on the byways of the Nation's summer resorts, but when the leaves fall from the trees he packs his bag and takes to the highway to follow the well-to-do with his stock of curios.

The paths of 40 such, both men and women, crossed this week at the Mayflower Hotel. In the luxurious lobby they unpacked their crates and yesterday passers-by could see a curious exhibit of early American furniture, glassware, silver, old pewter, jewelry, porcelain, oil paintings and prints.

They hailed from New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and Virginia, and most were en route to other antique shows in Charlotte, Va.; Jacksonville, Miami, St. Petersburg and West Palm Beach, Fla. At 11 p. m. today they will close their exhibit here. Packing their relics and families into automobiles, trucks and trailers, they will move on to other climes and customers.

George Lord, who runs Ye Olde Tally-Ho Swap Shop in Croton Falls, N. Y., explained that the traveling antique business has been stimulated by colonial architecture in modern homes.

John A. Borrows, of Newburyport, Mass., calls himself a "button-ologist," and deals in nothing but old buttons. He claims there are 100,000 button collectors in the United States, that this new hobby will soon outstrip stamp-collecting, since button are more plentiful than stamps.

But buttons are a small part of the show at the Mayflower. Valuable jewelry, silverware, glassware, rugs and numerous art objects bring the total value of the exhibit over $100,000, according to Henry Winter, show manager.

Lord was broke in the depths of the depression. An antique dealer offered him $50 in antiques for the first offspring of a dachshund he owned. He swapped, became a dealer himself and paid off his debt when the dog gave birth a year later.

Mrs. Mary Van Allen, of Ithaca, N. Y., is the wife of a former professor of English literature at Cornell University who resigned to write poetry 12 years ago. They had furnished their home in antiques, "because they were cheaper," Mrs. Allen explained. When funds ran short they found their furnishings would refill the larder.

Union Told Ramspeck Bill Won't Kill Jobs

Federal Workers Hear There's No Menace in Measure

Government workers from States, including the District, which have filled civil service quotas need have no fear of losing their jobs under operations of the Ramspeck Act, John Q. Cannon, technician on the staff of the Civil Service Commission, declared last night.

Cannon addressed the American Federation of Government Employes at a gathering in the South Interior Building auditorium to celebrate Civil Service Week in observance of the sixty-eighth anniversary of the classified system.

On the program with him were Civil Service Commission President Harry B. Mitchell and Commissioners Lucille Foster McMillin and Arthur S. Flemming. They discussed the significance of the observance.

In general, Cannon gave encouragement to Government workers who fear loss of employment may result when thousands of them are taken into the classified service under the act.

Age will not act to debar them, Cannon said, nor need they fear physical examinations as the commission will eliminate only those workers who are found physically unable to peform their tasks.

A mark of 70, including veterans' preferences of 5 or 10 per cent, will be sufficient to keep an employe on his job, Cannon said. Workers who previously passed an examination for a similar position will not be required to take a second examination, he added.

Employes will only be given one examination, Cannon said, and if they fail will be separated from the service within six months. Examinations will be either written or oral with 25 per cent to be allowed for experience.

Expert Sees Socialized Medicine Gain

Growth 'Inevitable,' Health Cooperative Group Here Told

"Medical science in the United States is undergoing a revolution," declared Dr. Henry Ernest Sigerist, of Johns Hopkins University, last night before the annual meeting of Group Health Association members held in the South Agriculture Building.

Dr. Sigerist, who is head of the history of medicine department at Johns Hopkins, told the members of the health cooperative group for Federal employes that socialized medicine was destined to sweep the country in the next few years.

He said the growth would be inevitable because of changed conditions in the economic life of the country and the greater dependence of families in low-income brackets on medical service.

"It will be a new type of service for a new type of society."

In 1935, 59 per cent of the Nation's families were living on less than $1,200 yearly, he pointed out.

Adequate medical attention for everyone who needs it is the best way to reduce poverty, he said.

Elected for a three-year term on the board of trustees of Group Health were Mrs. Edwina A. Avery, Agriculture Department; James S. Hathcock, Civil Service; M. A. McCall, Agriculture. Philip M. Houser, Commerce, was elected for a one-year term. President will be elected from the trustees on Saturday.

A resolution by David McCalmont, jr., proposing that non-Federal employes be allowed to join group health was referred to the board for study. Cameron G. Garman presided.

Inaugural Marks to Fall, Officials Feel

Sale of Tickets Indicates Records For Attendance Will Be Smashed

Undaunted by rain and sleet falling 96 hours before the big parade, inaugural workers yesterday reaffirmed predictions that Monday's inaugural will smash attendance records.

Grandstand ticket headquarters at 727 Fifteenth Street Northwest, reported last night that more than $3,000 in tickets were sold during the day. This compares with receipts of $350 on January 16, 1937—a rainy day also.

Secretary Arthur Harnett, of the Washington Hotel Association, announced that all but "five or six" of the 28 member hotels already are sold out to capacity for Monday.

The housing and hospitality committee for the event reported it was "swamped with business," all indications being that many of the approximately 10,000 private homes which are registered for paying guests will be utilized.

"Pullman Cities"

The Washington Terminal disclosed that, beginning Saturday and continuing through Monday morning, "Pullman cities" will spring up in four freight yards. Their populations will consist of out-of-town visitors who will make the sleeping cars their homes while here. The Benning, Eckington Place, New Jersey Avenue and Fourteenth Street yards are the yards which will be used.

Harnett voiced confidence that every hotel in the city will be filled up Saturday, Sunday and Monday, pointing out that reservations have been fairly pouring in the last two days.

Meantime, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association announced that downtown retail store members, "with but few exceptions," will be closed all day Monday.

"Many of the retail grocery and some other stores will remain closed during the parade only," said Edward D. Shaw, secretary.

Standing Room in Demand

"Coal and fuel oil firms will be open until 10 a. m. so that necessary fuel deliveries required on Monday may be made early in the morning. Restaurants, drug stores and wholesale food distributors will be open to take care of their customer requirements as usual on Inauguration Day."

A sampling of business houses along the Pennsylvania Avenue parade route yesterday revealed that there is a fairly brisk demand for seats and standing space in store windows and vacant rooms above the stores.

A stationery supply house in the 1200 block said that about a fourth of his 200 available seats have been sold already, though the rush isn't expected before tomorrow. Prices range from $3.30 to $5.50.

A dancing studio along the avenue which will suspend swing for the day in order to accommodate parade viewers, at $3.30 to $7.70 per seat, reported only so-so business so far, with 100 of the 150 available places still unsold.

Another renter, however, jubilantly announced that he has already sold 16 of his 25 seats at the flat rate of $5.

"I pay the tax," he said magnanimously.

Police Orders Issued

Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown yesterday issued the completed order of regulations for Inaugural Day. Among its provisions are the following:

The route to be traversed by the President going to and coming from the Capitol will be barred to vehicles after 10:30 a. m., except for cars showing special passes, ambulances, etc.

Pennsylvania Avenue street car traffic east of Eighteenth Street will be suspended at 11:15 a. m. until the parade is over.

Pedestrians will be permitted to cross the parade route, if such action does not interfere with the procession, at all points except between Madison and Jackson Places.

Inaugural Chairman Joseph E. Davies yesterday urged full public attendance at the interdenominational services to be held at 2:30 p. m. Sunday in the Court of Freedom, in front of the White House.

Scouts as Honor Guards

Officials of the Inaugural Committee and its hundreds of workers will view the ceremonies from seats in stands D and F which have been provided for them. Grandstand seats also will be available, at no extra cost, to purchasers of parade tickets, regardless of their location.

Addressing the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday, Davies said that "we want this inauguration to proclaim that this country, in the face of this terrific ideological conflict and world war, not only clings to the democratic faith of our fathers, but can and will make democracy effective and strong."

Names of Boy Scouts who will serve in honor guards were announced yesterday. In the President's personal guard will be Edward Krise and Roy Corderman, with William McDonald as alternate.

Three Women, Two Children Carried From Burning Building

WOMEN CARRIED TO SAFETY—These three women were carried to safety last night from the smoke-filled building at 601 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast by two youths who heard their cries for help. Left to right—Mrs. Dora Laskin, who was suffering from an attack of influenza; Mrs. Mamie Higgs, 79, and Mrs. Florence Colberg.

Three women—two of them ailing and the third 79 years old—and two children were carried to safety last night from a smoke-filled building at 601 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast by two youths who heard their cries for help.

Those rescued were Mrs. Dora Laskin, of the Pennsylvania Avenue address, who was recuperating from a severe attack of influenza; Mrs. Mamie Higgs, 79, of 1313 Potomac Avenue Southeast; Mrs. Florence Colberg, of 517 Seward Square Southeast; Naomi Pollin, 9, and her brother, Albert, 12.

Mrs. Higgs and Mrs. Colberg, the latter a chronic sufferer from heart trouble, were paying a visit to the ailing Mrs. Laskin in her second-floor apartment when a blaze broke out in a basement trash pile. The Pollin children were in an adjoining apartment on the same floor.

As smoke rolled upward through a hall corridor, blocking the only means of exit from the upstairs apartment, the five found themselves trapped by smoke.

"There was a wall of smoke rolling at us," Mrs. Higgs said. "All of us were choking. I ran to the window and called for help to the crowd below. But nobody seemed to want to help us. Somebody even called out to us to jump."

At this point the rescuers, George Capperell, 21, of 603 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, and Monte Gollasso, 20, 429 Eleventh Street Southeast, rushed through the smoke and up the stairs.

Making five trips in all, they carried the three women, one by one, down the stairs to safety. Then, directing their efforts to the adjoining Pollin apartment, which smoke had also penetrated, they helped the children outdoors.

Firemen from No. 8 Engine Company extinguished the fire in the basement after battling it for nearly two hours. Damage to the stock of a delicatessen store, which occupies the building's first floor, and to the interior of the basement was estimated at $500.

Crystal City Denied Zone Change Plea

Substitute Proposal To Save Project Set for Feb. 6 Hearing

The District Zoning Commission yesterday denied a change of zoning to permit construction of the proposed $15,000,000 Crystal City development on the Dean tract, Connecticut and Florida Avenues Northwest.

Roy S. Thurman, promoter of the huge development, appeared before the commission December 26 seeking a change from residential to commercial of the tract. This change would have permitted buildings to rise to a height of 130 feet and commercial shops along the Connecticut Avenue side of the area.

Col. David McCoach, jr., chairman of the commission, had informed Thurman the commission was "sympathetic" to his request, but did not feel it could order the zone change to permit the Connecticut Avenue shops since strong opposition had been presented at the public hearing.

Seek to Aid Project

In an effort to keep the door open for the proposed development, the commission asked the Crystal City promoters to confer with the District Zoning Advisory Council, hoping the promoters would agree to change the location of the shops and agree to other alterations. Thurman, however, wrote to Col. McCoach demanding the commission dispose of the original petition. This the commission agreed to do and denied the request for the zone change.

A proposal made at the December 26 hearing by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission may yet save the day for the proposed $15,000,000 development. John Nolen, jr., city planner of the commission, suggested the zoning group should grant permission to establish a "community unit," similar to Crystal City, without changing the basic zoning of the site, but not until a public hearing had been called.

Next Hearing February 6

On February 6, the Zoning Commission will consider this proposal, as an amendment to the zoning code. Should the commission approve the change, Crystal City promoters could appear before the Board of Zoning Adjustment and ask for a zoning variance to permit the development.

On one previous occasion Thurman announced failure of the Zoning Commission to grant the change in zoning would kill the project.

Pickpocket on Crutches Has Finesse in Clutches

A colored man who manipulated his crutches with finesse last night deprived John R. Johnson, of 1451 Park Road Northwest, of his wallet containing $5.85, police reported.

Johnson told police the theft occurred on a Seventh Street trolley where the colored man and a companion kept nudging against him.

Overton Formula Basis of Research; 41% of Property Found Tax-Exempt

By James D. Secrest

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent yesterday started gathering data on how much the Federal Government would pay the District under the Overton fiscal formula after the Commissioners reported to the Senate that 41 per cent of real property in the National Capital is tax exempt.

The report disclosed that United States holdings in Washington amount to $668,071,457, as of July 1, 1940, and constitute 31.9 per cent of total assessments. Private property upon which no tax is paid is valued at $111,794,179 and amounts to 5.3 per cent.

Senator Overton, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on District Appropriations, asked Dent to bring up to date his estimate on how much the United States would pay the District on an acreage ratio basis.

While the Federal Government has not added greatly to its acreage during the last two years, the District budget has grown so that the Overton formula would produce more than the $8,000,000 anticipated at that time.

Tax-exempt District-owned property is the smallest of the three classes of privileged property. It is valued at $73,732,063 and constitutes 3.5 per cent of the total assessment.

Federal holdings are divided almost equally in value between land and improvements. The acreage is 8,956.02. Were the property taxed at its book value the District would receive $11,691,257.91, or almost twice as much as it now gets in an annual lump sum.

Were all privately owned tax exemptions eliminated, the District would gain $1,956,401.84 in revenue.

The Commissioners pointed out in a letter accompanying the report that most private property was made tax exempt under laws enacted between 1877 and 1916, but that since then Congress frequently has passed bills exempting specific pieces of property.

A special committee of District officials is now making a study of the uses of this tax-exempt private property with a view to determining whether or not it is entitled to exemption.

The assessed value of tax-exempt private land is fixed at $33,281,263 in the report to the Senate. Improvements are assessed at $78,512,916.

District-owned land is valued at $20,094,346 and improvements at $53,637,717.

Tax Forms Going to 8,000,000 More This Year Than Last

Reducing of Exemptions to $2,000 For Married Persons and $800 for Single Brings Estimated Total to 15,500,000

Nineteen-forty income-defense tax forms, similar to the regular income tax forms of past years in appearance, are now being mailed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue to millions of new taxpayers, subject for the first time to the Federal levy by reason of the reduced personal exemptions in the 1940 Defense Revenue Act.

Last year's 7,500,000 returns will be increased by 8,000,000 filings, the Treasury estimated yesterday, through provisions of the new law reducing exemptions from $1,000 to $800 income for unmarried individuals, and from $2,500 to $2,000 for married persons. The second major change is a blanket addition of 10 per cent to be added to the total tax.

Unchanged, however, is the deadline date of March 15, by which time all returns must be filed. Revenue officers emphasized, however, that returns could and should be mailed earlier and that help in preparing the returns can be obtained with least delay by those who prepare their returns at once.

Experts to Help You

Experts are now available for this purpose at the Bureau of Internal Revenue Building, it was announced.

Although returns are expected to be more than double last year's number, only about 2,190,000 actual new taxpayers will join the existing ranks, it was estimated. Returns must be made by married and unmarried persons having an income, before deductions, of more than $2,000 and $800, respectively; taxes apply, however, only to net income, after deductions, of those amounts.

For those having an income of less than $5,000, tax payments will be computed as before: gross income, less charitable contributions, other taxes, etc., to arrive at net income. Net income is subject to deductions of 10 percent of earned income plus deductions of $800 for single persons, $2,000 for married taxpayers, and $400 for each dependent. The result, after these deductions, is subject to a 4 percent tax.

Ten percent of this figure is then added as a special defense levy to arrive at the final tax amount due.

For persons having an income of more than $6,000, the most important change in the 1940 law is an increase in the surtax rates, applying to net income before deductions of earned income and of income received from tax exempt securities.

The new surtax rates, as compared with the previous rates, are shown below for incomes up to $20,000:

Amt. of income.	New rate (%).	Prev. rate.
$4,000 to $6,000	4	4
6,000 to 8,000	6	5
8,000 to 10,000	8	6
10,000 to 12,000	10	7
12,000 to 14,000	12	8
14,000 to 16,000	15	9
16,000 to 18,000	18	11
18,000 to 20,000	21	13

An important feature of the new law alleviates the tax burden on men called to military service. It provides that they need not discharge their Federal tax obligations until six months after termination of active service if their income is impaired by reason of their military status. This provision applies to volunteers and selectees in the Army or Navy.

Others in Usual Method

All others, however, must pay their taxes in the usual fashion—one-fourth with the return filed March 15, the remainder in quarterly installments.

New taxpayers, brought in by the reduced exemptions, are expected to provide about $45,000,000 of revenue. The reduced exemptions and higher surtaxes are calculated to increase revenues from individual payments by about $252,000,000 in the first full year of the 1940 act's operation. The 10 per cent defense levy, it is anticipated, will bring in another $123,000,000 from individual taxpayers.

For the first time, returns for persons with incomes of less than $5,000 are printed on buff-colored paper, making them easier to distinguish from the white forms for higher incomes. The "green sheets" of past years—duplicates which were required to be filed with the originals—have been discontinued. Only one duplicate accompanies the original, and this is to be retained by the taxpayer.

News of Capital Night Clubs

With Mary Harris

HERE IT COMES—What promises to be the biggest week-end in Washington night spot history. The hotels are so full they're rocking with out-of-towners intent on having a great time over the Inauguration of our First Third-Term President. And all of us year 'round Washingtonians are planning special celebrations, too. The night spots have fully rallied from that monumental New Year's Eve and are all ready for the crowds.

Charlotte, Viennese diseuse and protege of Mrs. Roosevelt, will head next week's Shoreham revue. Charlotte will be a guest at the White House luncheon following the Inaugural and Mrs. Roosevelt will come to the Shoreham to hear her sing . . . Helen Reynolds' nice girl skaters, dancer Talia and the Music Hall Boys will also be in the Blue Room revue.

CLARENCE DYKSTRA, Selective Service Director, is writing lyrics for a composition presented to him by Fritz Kreisler as an alma mater tune for the University of Wisconsin. It's been titled "Valiants of Wisconsin" and was first played in the Pall Mall Room the other eve by Bert Bernath's Orchestra. Maestro Bernath made an orchestration for the tune and has presented it to Mr. Dykstra.

U. S. Yacht Club Awards Medal To Sea Heroes of Dunkerque

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Jan. 16.—In recognition of the part played by British yachtsmen late last May in the evacuation of 400,000 soldiers from Dunkerque, the Cruising Club of America awarded today its Blue Water Medal to the survivors among this group of boatmen and in memory of those who lost their lives in the heroic action.

The award was made at the club's annual meeting, held in the Yale Club.

Each year the club has awarded the medal to mark some feat of seamanship and navigation by an amateur yachtman. Around the world voyages, or shorter ones in which skill has been conspicious, have been occasions for the gift.

This time the awards committee of the club decided that the part played by amateur British sailors in getting the British soldiers out of France and across the English Channel far overshadowed any other feat last year. Many of these yachtsmen manned their own craft, while other clambered aboard any boats that were available. Some returned; others did not.

While the award was made with the club's approval, the disposition of the medal was held in abeyance. It will be inscribed and the expressed intention is to present it to some British yacht club to hold after the war is over. It may be sent to the Royal Ocean Racing Club, the Royal Cruising Club or the Little Ship Club, all deep-water organizations primarily. Members of all three helped in the evacuation.

Rear Admiral Herbert Pott, naval attache of the British Embassy in Washington, addressed the club members.

Before the meeting, George E. Ratsey, head of the American sailmaking company of Ratsey & Lapthorn in City Island, received a cablegram announcing that the large sail loft of the English concern of the same name had been destroyed by Nazi bombers. Chris Ratsey, who sent the message, added that there has been "no casualties."

The Ratsey yard in Gosport, England, is near Southampton, which has been battered repeatedly by bombs. Many yachts usually are stored near it.

The building was 150 years old. Sails for Nelson's flagship, the Victory, were made there, as have been the stretches of canvas for large yachts for generations. All the sails for the America's Cup challengers for more than half a century were turned out in the loft.

PRIZE FIGHT DEPARTMENT—The fistic paths of Henry Armstrong and Fritzie Zivic converge again tonight in Madison Square Garden and their impending battle bears all the earmarks of a beaut. Armstrong was wearing the welterweight title the last time he crawled through the ropes to fight Zivic, but he wasn't wearing the crown when he crawled out.

POVICH

Zivic lifted the title in the biggest upset of 1940 in the prize ring industry. The Pittsburgh boy accomplished what was deemed the impossible—he outbrawled Armstrong in a brawling battle. Nobody was supposed to beat Armstrong that way. Lew Ambers once outboxed Armstrong but Ambers was the master boxer. The man who chose to mix it with Armstrong always had been fighting Armstrong's fight—until Zivic came along. He liked to fight that way, too.

The only man we know who predicted that Zivic would beat Armstrong is Chris Dundee, a boxing authority who never threw a punch. Dundee, who manages a stable of fighters that includes Middleweight Champion Ken Overlin, was raising a lone thin voice in Zivic's behalf when all others were tabbing Zivic as merely another set-up for Champion Armstrong.

"I am getting a bet down on Fritzie," said Dundee a week before the fight. "Zivic is the only boy I know who stands a chance of out-mauling Armstrong. Zivic knows all the tricks. He'll butt Armstrong with his head, gouge him with his thumb and hit just as low as Armstrong. Zivic has been around a long time and knows how to protect himself. If Armstrong is slipping, as I suspect he is, Zivic will lick him."

And that's what happened. The fight was a brawl from start to finish and Armstrong for the first time was beaten in his own special kind of fight. The canny Zivic worked on Henry's scar-tissued face and opened cuts that bled. The infighting, too, was up Zivic's alley. There is nothing fancy about Zivic. He can be outboxed, but even Armstrong couldn't outrough him. At least he couldn't that night. As for tonight, well, to coin a cliche, we shall see.

BASEBALL DEPARTMENT—If Manager Del Baker of the Detroit Tigers isn't the unhappiest manager in the big leagues, he should be by all the evidence. Baker is threatened with losing, to the United States Army, the man who is the home-run and runs-batted-in champion of the American League.

We mean Hank Greenberg, of course. Draft board officials now predict that Greenberg, who drew a low number in the selective service lottery, will be in an Army camp by June . . . And Greenberg himself has said that he would claim no exemption.

It's not difficult to visualize the plight of the Tigers without Greenberg. If any one man won the 1940 pennant for Detroit, it was Big Hank with his home runs and other productive hits. The Tigers needed his punch to offset their deficiencies, chiefly in the infield where ancient Charley Gehringer and Dick Bartell watch the hits go by.

In fact, it is not difficult to vision the Tigers as a second division club next year if Greenberg is lost to them. With Hank out of the line-up, the Tigers would have little to recommend them. The Tiger pitching is tolerable enough, but it needed Hank's big bat to put them across. And with dry-rot setting in in th Tigers' infield as a result of the age of Gehringer and Bartell and the no-trade rule imposed on the Tigers as champions, it is indeed a dreary outlook for the defending pennant winners.

The fact is that Greenberg might have a fair chance of winning exemption if (1) he claimed it and (2) if he were not a big league star. The fact is that Greenberg has probably the most notable pair of flat feet in the world. His daily play comes pretty near to being tortuous for the big fellow whose tootsies hurt him severely. At home every night he climbs into a bath into which he has dumped a box of baking soda to ease the pain of his feet.

But Greenberg's affliction, which might spare another person from military service, will scarcely influence a draft board, which probably would call to his attention the fact that he gets around pretty well on the ball field, flat feet or no.

FOOTBALL DEPT.—Instead of giving the game back to the boys, the rules committee placed football more firmly in the grip of the coaches when it decreed that henceforth there would be no limit on substitutions.

With the coaches now able to shuttle players in and out of the game at will, football strategy is now more heavily concentrated on the sidelines than on the ball field. Signals from the sidelines always have been part of the game, but now the coaches can go whole hog and send players into the game with specific instructions at any time.

Maybe it is just as well. The coaches will now have to take the rap for poor quarterbacking, because the quarterback will be working directly from the bench. Or at least the coach now has the privilege of calling the important play via substitutes. And as long as it hasn't been the custom of the coach to waive credit for a winning game, it's proper that he be on the spot for poor quarterbacking.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Honolulu, Jan. 16.—A chance remark by President Roosevelt, when he visited and fished here in 1934, has brought about much local research as to the sporting appetites of the ancient Asiatics who somehow found and settled this westernmost part of the United States.

CONSIDINE

Someone was telling the President about the superman feats of King Kamehameha the First, who died in 1819, a year before the missionaries brought our own sterling white man's civilization to this simple paradise. The President listened attentively, got interested, and asked, "Why don't you revive some of those old games and perform them on some stated holiday?"

Well, sir, now every May 1, which is "Lei Day" here, the beach boys put away their surfboards and outriggers, and the plantation athletes call a 24-hour truce in their barefooted football or baseball playing, to take part in the prehistoric sports whose rules have been dug out and brushed off by Hawaiian scholars. A number of the sports had been placed on the taboo list because Kamehameha the First excelled in them to such a degree that it was felt at the time that they were his personal property and that thy died with him.

He was a fair-to-middlin' weight lifter, this Kamehameha. The sportswriters of the late 1700's pictured him as moving the 1,000-pound Naha stone, a considerable hunk of rock which now rests on the grounds of the Hilo Public Library. This feat was supposed to have pleased him so much that he forthwith conquered the spear-throwing armies from the several islands in this group and united them for the first time since the fifth century when a coup of incredible sailors from the same land whence probably sprung our American Indians, reached this verdant spot in the Pacific in tiny twin-hulled boats.

One of Kamehameha's ways of avoiding a paunch, from too much fish and poi, was to post himself 50 paces off from a company of spear-throwers and demand that they start pitching at him. He'd catch them like DiMaggio snagging line drives and hurl them back like the catcher as in one of those Indian club vaudeville acts. Kamehameha, the one-man blitz, did this frequently in battle, too.

Some of the other sports at which he was a whizz, and which were buried with him until Mr. Big spoke his piece, are:

HAKOKO—A type of catch-as-catch can rassling, within a 12-foot circle, and not under the auspices of Jack Pfefer or Toots Mondt.

ULUMAIKA—A primitive type of bowling. A discus shaped stone, about 4 inches in diameter, is bowled at various marked objects along the ground.

HONUHONU—The almost universal and lost-in-antiquity game of standing right ankle to the other bloke's left ankle, seizing his hand and trying to pull him off balance.

PUNEHEHENE—One bum leaves the room and the other, definitely a card, hides a stone under a thick spread of leaves. Then he yells the Havaiian equivalent of "ready!" And the guy is supposed to find the rock. This is all bound up with woodcraft and stalking a foe, etc.

CO-IHE—Spear-throwing for distance and accuracy.

KULAI-WAWAE—The two contestants squat within a circle and the object is to push the other fellow out of the ring, with the feet like a Russian squat-tag dancer running berserk among the night club customers.

KULAKULAI—About the same thing, standing up, using the hands instead of feet and pushing on the other gent's chest. Tripping is allowed, which just goes to show you how much trouble Kamehameha, Kulakulai's Babe Ruth, would have had with boxing commissions.

As was the case in the very early Olympics, there was usually a princess at stake here in ancient times when the boys played these games, and the winner took all.

Th final event, or topper, or tie breaker, usually was the venerable one of lying prone, face to face, and trying to bend the other guy's wrist back to the ground. Heaven knows how many Hawaiian dynasties were begun by a bloke with a strong wrist, while his prospective princess rooted him home with a hula bump.

68s Earn Split Purse for Duo; Hines Handicapped By Injured Hand

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Calif., Jan. 16.—Overlooked in the crush of first-round sub-par firing, Tony Penna, of Dayton, Ohio, and Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, Long Island, charged down the homestretch today to end up in a tie for medal honors in the 26-hole qualifying trials of the $5,000 San Francisco match play open golf tournament.

Their scores of 140, four under par for the two rounds, resulted from sparkling 68's today, lowest scores of the second half of the qualifying competition.

Hines' feat won the plaudits of the gallery. He struggled through his round nursing infected hands, so sore he could hardly grip his clubs. He has been under a doctor's care since the start of the tournament because of a severe case of boils.

Boils Lanced

After completing his round, Hines had those on his hands lanced. The pain was so severe he fainted in the doctor's office, but later asserted, "I'll continue to play in the tournament as long as I can hold a club in my hands."

Penna and Hines each carried 35—33 compared to par 36—36—72 for the Presidio course. They pocketed $175 each, dividing first and second money for medal honors.

Melvin "Chick" Harbert, of Battle Creek, Mich., first-round leader with a 67, and John Perelli, of Tahoe, Calif., tied for second low medal score with 141. Harbert missed easy putts on four holes of the first nine, meanwhile taking a par 36, but was unable to find the greens on approaches during the incoming trip, finishing with a 74. Perelli played steady golf to add a 70 to his first-round 71.

Among seven tied at 142 were the defending champion and twice winner of this tournament, Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, Tex.; Olin Dutra former U. S. Open and P. G. A. champion; Sam Snead and the Argentine star, Eduardo Blasi.

Notables Bow Out

Links notables bowed out of competition left and right. They include Byron Nelson, of Toledo, Ohio, present P. G. A. national champion with 147; Ralph Guldahl, twice former U. S. Open titlist with 151; John Bulla, winner of the recent $10,000 Los Angeles Open, who failed to turn in a card after a first-round 75; Leonard Dodson, winner of the Oakland Open playoff last Monday, with a 151; Marvin Ward, former national amateur title winner, with 150; Harold McSpaden, 148; Horton Smith, 147; E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, 147; Mark Fry, 147; Paul Runyan, 152, and Ed Dudley, 154.

Lawson Little, current National Open kingpin, qualified at 144, along with seven others including Denny Shute, former P. G. A. top man and Ben Hogan, leading money winner of 1940.

Best nine holes of the day belonged to Clayton Heafner, the former candy maker from Linnville, N. C., who carded a 6 under par 30. He turned in a 70 for a 36-hole qualifying total of 144.

Ten tied for the last six places. In the play-off the survivors were the Portland, Oreg., Zimmerman Emory and Al; Leland Gibson, of Kansas City; Willie Goggin, of Miami, Fla.; Henry Espinosa, of San Francisco, and Joe Brown, of Des Moines. Those eliminated were Abe Espinosa, of Decatur, Ill.; Leonard Ott, of Denver; Emerick Kocsis, of Detroit, and Everett Goulrt, Burlingame, Calif.

Kayak II Finishes Second to Augury In Year's 1st Start

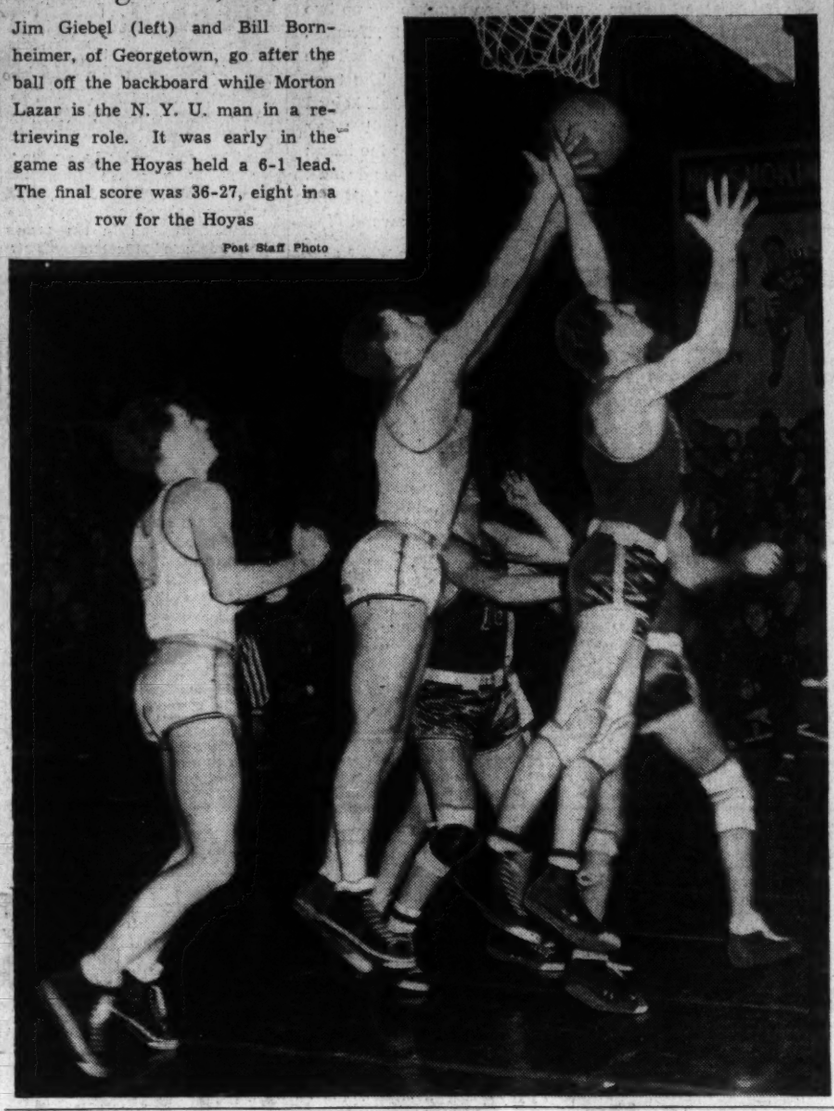

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 16.—Kayak II, big black Argentine thoroughbred of the C. S. Howard stable, returned to the turf wars today after an enforced layoff since last September and finished second to Augury, speed-burning filly from the N. S. McCarthy barns.

Although beaten by a length and one-half in the 6-furlong dash, Kayak looked good and evidently will be brought up to the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap at a mile and one-quarter March 1 in the best of condition.

Spotting Augury 11 pounds, Kayak was slow to reach his stride, and when he did he made his move wide, lost considerable ground on the turn, finished far out in the track, and then continued on to 1 mile in 1:37.4.

It's Georgetown, 2-1, After the Ball Off the Backboard

Jim Giebel (left) and Bill Bornheimer, of Georgetown, go after the ball off the backboard while Morton Lazar is the N. Y. U. man in a retrieving role. It was early in the game as the Hoyas held a 6-1 lead. The final score was 36-27, eight in a row for the Hoyas

2,500 Spectators See Virginians Continue Streak

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 16.—The University of Virginia basket ball team handily defeated William and Mary tonight, 48-32, before 2,500 spectators, to keep its winning streak intact.

Billy McCann, playing a flawless floor game, opened the scoring for the Cavaliers and went on to capture individual honors with 14 points.

Bill Harman, fleet Virginia forward, was held to a single free throw in the first part of the game by the close guarding of Glen Knox but finally broke loose for a total of 12 points.

Shackled for the most part by Al Lowman, Cavalier center who contributed 9 points before leaving the game on fouls, Knox was limited to two field goals and five foul shots for a total of 9 points.

Kansas Clips Missouri In 48-41 Thriller

Lawrence, Kans., Jan. 16 (AP).—Howard Engleman and Bobby Allen counted for 41 points between them tonight to lead Kansas to a 48-to-41 victory over Missouri and lift the Jayhawkers into a first-place tie with Oklahoma in the Big Six basketball race.

Engleman, blond senior forward, tallied 10 baskets and sank five free throws in five tries for 25 points.

Traveling Colonials Finally Come to Grief on Trip Through South; Chuck Holley Is Duke Star

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., Jan. 16.—With Chuck Holley and Bill Mock setting the pace, the Duke University Blue Devils defeated George Washington here tonight in a high-speed basketball game, 44 to 37.

Holley, lanky center for the Blue Devils, scored 15 points, and Mock, 13. Gilham was high scorer for the Colonials, getting 9 points.

The victory enabled Duke to even its two-game series with the George Washington five, the District of Columbia boys having won the first contest in Washington.

G. W. Leads

George Washington jumped into the lead at the start on a pair of baskets by Joe Comer and Lou Veltri. With the Blue Devils trailing by 6-3, Holley dropped in two pivot shots to put Duke into the lead.

The visitors tied the score twice in the first half, but trailed by 24-18 at the intermission, and never were able to catch the Blue Devils in the second stanza, although they came close.

In the first minute and a half of the second half, Bobby Golham scored three field goals, while Duke was accounting for only one. Eddie Smokes then dropped in a shot from the corner, to put the Devils 4 points ahead, but Veltri matched that—and George Washington was within 2 points again.

G. W. Pulls Up

Duke started clicking at that point, and ran the lead up to 8 points. Again the Colonials rallied, and the count stood at 37-33.

Roy McNeil caged a long one, and Mock matched it with a one-hander. Veltri sank two free throws, narrowing the Duke margin to 2 points with four minutes to go. But the visitors were unable to score again, and Duke pushed ahead to its 44-point total.

Commissioner Clause Put In Grid Laws

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Club owners of the National Pro Football League rewrote a portion of the circuit's constitution today, inserting a clause providing for a league commissioner in the event establishment of such a post is formally voted by league executives.

"We are paving the way for employment of a commissioner provided we decide we want one," said George Halas, president of the Chicago Bears.

Halas said the discussion had been devoted almost exclusively to the commissionership, but emphasized that the new clause inserted in the constitution would have to be formally approved at the regular April meeting. Not before then could decisive action be taken on engagement of a league commissioner.

Halas said that in the event a commissioner is selected by the league, the office of league president would be continued.

Hoyas Heavy Favorite Over Terps

Contest Scheduled At College Park Tonight; Gallaudet Also to See Action

Georgetown will be a top-heavy favorite to add a third local school among its victims tonight when Coach Elmer Ripley takes the Hoyas to College Park to meet the University of Maryland five, loser of seven straight.

Victor over American and George Washington already this season, the Hoyas will also be anxious to avenge a 1-point defeat suffered last year in Ritchie Coliseum, in addition to boosting its local standing.

Game time is 8 o'clock.

Only one other local team will be active tonight, Gallaudet, which entertains the Blue Ridge College five in the Gallaudet gym, also at 8 p. m.

George Washington will be back home today after its successful invasion of Southern Conference schools and, except for a game with Army next Wednesday at West Point, the Colonials will not see action again until Furman plays here February 8.

Teachers' Game Postponed

Last night's scheduled game between Wilson Teachers College and Towson Teachers was postponed by Wilson Coach Doc White because of inclement weather, and will be played here February 17.

Wilson's game tomorrow night with William and Mary, Norfolk division, was shifted to Maryland's Ritchie Coliseum at 8:30 p. m. The Owls have beaten Randolph-Macon and Shenandoah this week.

Tomorrow night's home schedule finds Wilson providing the only action. Catholic University will go to Baltimore to meet Georgetown's conqueror, the strong Loyola five, in the Evergreen gym, while Gallaudet will go to Ashland, Va., to

Western Md. Stops Catholic Rally to Win

Cardinals Drop 43-26 Game for Fifth Straight Loss

Catholic University's hard-pressed basketers put on the pressure in the last three minutes of their meeting with Western Maryland last night, scoring the final ten points of the game at Brookland gym, but the rally fell somewhat short.

The Green Terrors took a 43-to-26 victory, issuing the Flying Cardinals their fifth straight loss of the season.

In suffering their second loss in a row to a Mason-Dixon Conference opponent, the Cards were left practically flat-footed at the post. They were able to ring up only seven points in the first half, while the Terrors tossed in 23. It appeared C. U. was going to account for only a slightly better mark in the second stanza until its torrid last-ditch streak.

Trailing by a 43-16 count, Jimmy Mulvihill, Francis Daly and Mike Cherello went into action to cut down the final margin of defeat.

In the scoring duel between Mulvihill, a sophomore, and Capt. Daly, the latter came off with last night's prize. He got eight points to Mulvihill's seven. Irving Baisi and Forward Robinson, however, had ten points apiece for the winners to take a comfortable lead.

C. U. Frosh fared better than their seniors in the preliminary last night, tripping Richard Montgomery High, of Rockville, by 27-16. Scanlon's 13 points were high for the game.

Hoyas Lead All the Way; 3,000 Attend

O'Grady, Giebel Lead Scorers in Eighth Straight Victory March

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Georgetown University continued its unexpected but spectacular climb among the Eastern collegiate basketball powers by defeating New York University, 36-27, last night before 3,000 fans in Riverside Stadium.

The Violets, invading with one of the best records in the country, 26 victories in 28 starts over the past two seasons, presented a fast, flashy passing club that was dangerous all the way but they trailed the entire 40 minutes and only once seriously threatened to knot the count.

The Hoyas played their best and smartest home ball of the season in racking up an eighth straight victory with Buddy O'Grady, the pint-sized guard playing the entire game and coming through with a spectacular performance.

Hoyas Take 6-0 Lead

O'Grady was tied for Hoya scoring honors by G. U.'s only local boy on the squad, Jim Giebel, who vied with O'Grady for individual honors until he left the game with four personal fouls with ten minutes to play in the second half.

Georgetown surprised the fans and most of all Coach Howard Cann's Violets by jumping into a 6-0 lead in the first three minutes of play and they were never headed. They boasted a 19-10 margin late in the first half that ended with Georgetown on the long end of a 19-14 count.

The Violets came back to pull within 22-21 in the opening minutes of the final period. The Hoyas seemed a bit bewildered by the spurt of the New Yorkers but Capt. Rizzi pulled them together and made way for the star of the G. W. contest, Charles Schmidli, who came in and took personal charge of Georgetown scoring.

Schmidli's Shots Count

Schmidli, the touseled-haired sophomore star with the unerring eye, drew three consecutive fouls and dropped them all in the bucket for a 25-21 lead. O'Grady tossed in a one-handed field goal to make it 27-21 but N. Y. U. pulled to 25 when Mort Lazar dropped a field goal on an outside play and a foul shot and Benny Auerbach made good from the charity stripe.

This made it 29-25 and Schmidli replied with a lay-up shot for two points and a field goal from midcourt to make it 33-25 with three minutes to play and the ball game was over for N. Y. U.

Coach Cann then sent in an entire new team and Turner's long shot was their only point effort while the Hoyas finished up with Bill Bornheimer dropping a foul and Ken Engles a snowbird in the N. Y. U. confusion.

The Violets were fancy-dans with their offensive tactics, tricky passes, cuts and fakes, but a Georgetown man, usually Giebel, O'Grady or Rizzi, was on them every time.

The Hoyas then would take the ball down court, zip the ball around just outside the 15-foot line and then shoot at the first opportunity.

Frosh Defeat Maryland

Jim Kiernan, the Hoya set-shot artist, was right back of O'Grady, Giebel and Schmidl in the scoring column, dropping three timely field goals for six points and playing a good floor game until slowed down by three fouls in the last half. The Hoyas made good eight times out of 11 from the foul line, N. Y. U. making only five out of 12.

Benny Auerbach and Ralph Kaplowitz were outstanding both on the floor and in the scoring column for the Violets but the former met his match in O'Grady and Rizzi and took

Flu Forces Cancellation of V. P. I. Athletics for Weekend

Boxing Meet With U. Va. Called Off

School's President Stops Activities As Disease Sweeps Southwest Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 16.—Through a message to Capt. Norton G. Pritchett, director of athletics at the University of Virginia, Dr. Julian Burress, president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, yesterday cancelled all athletic engagements of the Gobblers this week-end because of an epidemic of influenza. The edict included both home and away-from-home contests.

Outstanding of the clashes thus canceled was the V. P. I.-Virginia boxing match at Charlottesville, on Saturday, annually the highlight of winter sports activity at both schools.

V. P. I.'s epidemic came as a result of flu all over the State, particularly in the southwestern portion.

A total of seven sports encounters will be affected by the restriction. Tomorrow night varsity and freshman cagers were to have faced V. M. I. teams in Lexington to start the week-end. Saturday the varsity was also scheduled to meet Wyomissing Poly basketers at Blacksburg.

In addition to varsity boxing Saturday, freshmen glovers were to have tangled with Virginia U. fighters; the wrestling squad was scheduled to face the Apprentice School in Newport News, and the swimming team was down for a dual meet with Concord State College at Athens, W. Va.

Western Wins 32-25 Verdict Over W. & L.

Georgetown Five Leads Whole Way In Arlington Game

Two of its first-string players were unable to take part, but Western High's cage team came through its clash with Washington-Lee last night in Ballston in high style, winning by a 32-to-25 count after leading the whole way.

Irving Schenker, star guard of the Raiders, was left at home with a cold, and young Donny Cross failed to show up.

In their absence Hal Mitchell and Jake Hilleary took over heavy-scoring duties, each checking in ten points. They were forced to share honors with the Little Generals' Rod Gaumnitz.

At the various quarters Western led by 11 to 5, 20 to 9 and 24 to 14 as it registered its fourth triumph in seven games.

Terps Decided Underdogs

Maryland, currently suffering its worst season in Coach Burton Shipley's 18-year coaching stand, is conceded little or no chance of beating Georgetown tonight, despite the old rivalry that tends to bring out the best in the opposing teams.

Maryland lost to Richmond by 12 points in its opening game and in each successive defeat the opposition has beaten them by more than 12 points. G. U. Coach Ripley will probably stick Capt. Brewers Invade Baltimore for Clipper Game

Contest Tonight First Of Two This Weekend For Local Pro Five

Two American Basketball League tests are confronting the Washington Brewers today as they looked ahead to a busy week-end.

Tonight the Brewers are to invade Baltimore for a game with the Baltimore Clippers, a 23-22 conqueror last Sunday night, while they are to entertain the World Champion Philadelphia Sphas at Riverside Stadium Sunday night at 8:45 o'clock.

Coach Mack Posnack yesterday called his players together and expressed complete dissatisfaction at their loss of consecutive games to the Kate Smith Celtics, the Sphas and Baltimore Clippers.

"Unless they snap back into stride over the week-end several player trades may be engineered and a general team shake-up will be in order," Posnack informed his players after a hard workout yesterday. "I'm determined to make a winning team out of the Brewers, even if we have to sacrifice certain of our stars in order to do it."

The champion Sphas, credited with four American League championships within the past seven years and present American League leader, will introduce a line-up Sunday night that includes three former college all-Americans, namely: Howard Rosan, Temple University; Moe Goldman, New York City College, and Irving Torgoff, Long Island University.

The Brewers have won only two games from the Sphas within the past three seasons, taking both of these last year.

Pigeon Club Elects Maynard Durity

Maynard A. Durity was elected president of the Capital City Racing Pigeon Club yesterday at the club's annual meeting. Other officers elected were: James F. Mundie, first vice president; G. Ollie Brown, second vice president, and William R. Pennington, secretary-treasurer.

This season's racing program, designed to test the homing qualities of the birds, will include nine races from 110 miles to 600 miles for old birds and seven races from 110 miles to 300 miles for young birds.

The first races will be held from Cumberland, Md., on May 4, and the final old-bird race will be flown from Chicago, June 28, and the young-bird final from Akron, Ohio.

Longer Races Most Significant Development in '40 Turf World

Extended Distances Prove Popular With Horsemen and General Public

By Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt

President, Belmont Park and Pimlico Race Tracks

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 16 (AP).—Last year the most significant development in American racing was the increased number of distance races. Actually this development was only in its experimental stage. The year 1941 should see the full flowering of races over extended distances, testing the complete powers of thoroughbred heart and stamina.

Perhaps the failure of earlier efforts successfully to provide endurance racing can be charged against the racing people themselves. Breeders contended it was the ultimate proof of a great horse. Racing associations subscribed to that belief, but contended races of that character were financially impractical and furthermore that the available horses were not bred or conditioned to race at extended distances.

The story of racing in 1940 disproved such a theory and revealed to racing associations a startling fact which promises well and almost guarantees the future of endurance racing in America.

Public Favors Longer Races

That fact is the public emphatically favors long races both from a spectator's viewpoint of sustained action and also as a wagering consideration. To bolster this it is established the trainers of thoroughbreds are fully competent to condition horses for the longer events and that the basic thoroughbred blood lines in America provide all the qualities of heart and stamina.

With this knowledge now accepted as fact and proved beyond doubt, the racing associations should and are seizing upon it.

The year 1941 looms as one of a great opportunity for everyone in racing. The breeder can proceed confidently to produce horses that theoretically are bred to run over a distance; the owner can produce new stock of potential endurance powers with reasonable assurance of having the opportunities to realize a fair return in prize monies, and finally the racing associations can schedule more and richer distance races.

At the present stage the responsibility for the further and intelligent development of distance racing rests with the racing associations. Because of the greater testing powers placed upon the thoroughbred in these events there must be coordination and cooperation among the associations in writing the conditions of these races and in the running of them.

Encourages Larger Field

On the other hand, these same associations must be conceded the privilege of determining whether or not the races be run under weight-for-age or handicap conditions.

They should not be blamed for favoring the handicaps in the early stages of this new transition in the sport. Handicaps encourage larger fields and consequently reassure the sponsors of the race courses. Eventually, perhaps in one or two years, there will be an abundance of horses in training able to display their greatest ability over a distance. When that point is reached them the associations must and will accede to the demand for weight-for-age events without fear of small starting fields and consequent financial loss.

Underlying all this important change in American racing there will be the satisfying knowledge on the part of the racing associations that they are giving the public more action, more thrills, better horses and greater races.

Healy Stars As St. John's Beats Blair

Former Jayvee Player Leads Team in 30-22 Victory, 3d of Season

Led by long Leo Healy, a youngster newly promoted from the junior varsity, St. John's High yesterday registered its third basketball triumph in ten games when it defeated Montgomery Blair, of Silver Spring, 30-22.

The Johnnies scored the first point of the game at their home court and led all the way.

Healy's portion of the victory consisted of a nine-point scoring mark and clever and aggressive play throughout. He was tied for point honors of the winners by Buddy Speiss, Johnnie guard, but Blair's Ford Kelley stole the scoring show from both with ten points.

The first quarter proved to be St. John's eventual margin. In that it ran up a 9-2 edge. At the half it was 17-10 and at the three-quarter mark it was 24-17. A sag in the last period allowed the suburbanites to come within three points of the Cadets, but quick points by Healy, Speiss and Dick Hathaway sewed up matters.

The defeat dropped Blair still further down in consideration for its annual county rivalry with Bethesda-Chevy Chase, the first meeting of which will be January 30 at College Park. It was the club's sixth loss, against two victories.

L. Barnum Traded By Football Giants

New York, Jan. 16 (INS).—Len Barnum, veteran New York Giants backfield star, tonight was traded to Pittsburgh, of the National Professional League, for Chet Gladchuk, Boston College center, who, as yet, hasn't announced whether he will play pro ball next season.

Actually the trade is Barnum for negotiation rights on the bruising center, who reportedly has said he will play "if I get a chance with a good club." Pittsburgh picked Gladchuk in the player-draft in Washington last month.

Giant officials indicated Gladchuk will replace Mel Hein, all-league center for the past ten years, who likely will devote most of next season to assisting Head Coach Steve Owen.

At the same time it was reported the Steelers, recently bought by Alexis Thompson, youthful New York sportsman, were dickering for Banks McFadden, swivel-hipped Brooklyn Dodgers back.

Rain Halts Tennis Play at Orlando

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 16 (AP).—Rain at the Orlando tennis tournament this afternoon halted a quarter-final match between Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Wayne Sabin, of Los Angeles.

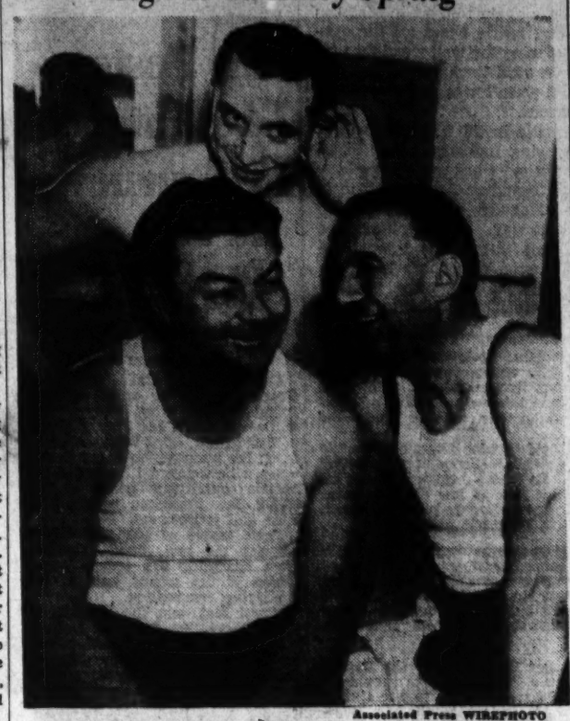

The count was knotted at 2-all in the first set when play was postponed until tomorrow afternoon.

Other matches carried over were Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, against Jack Kramer, of California, and Ed Alloo, of Rollins College, against Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg. Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, the national champion, reached the semi-finals yesterday.

Canadiens Rout Chicago Black Hawks

By International News Service

Montreal, Jan. 16.—The Canadiens proved tonight that Sam Lo Presti, sensational Chicago rookie goaler, can be defeated when they shellacked the Black Hawks tonight, 5-1, to be the first team in the National Hockey League to score a win over Lo Presti.

The win brought a little more security to their sixth-place standing and gave them a breathing spell for their coming drive against the fifth-place Rangers. The Detroit Red Wings were out in full force to watch their rivals battle it out. The Wings play here on Saturday.

Canadiens scored their first three goals, one each period all coming in the first five minutes of play. Joe Benoit, who played his first game in two weeks got the first goal when he picked up a rebound, after Ray Getliffe sent a piercing drive at Lo Presti and had no trouble getting the rubber into an empty net. Five minutes later George Allen evened the count for the Hawks from a pass by Bill Carse and Mush March.

After three minutes of play in the second period Elmer Lach stole the puck away from a Hawk defenseman and fooled the Chicago Goalie with a corner shot to put the Canucks ahead, 2-1. From then on the Canadiens had the game on ice making most of the play and keeping the Hawks inside their own blue line.

Red Goupille started the third period with a goal that Lo Presti had no way of stopping as the Chicago defense seemed lost and were milling in front of him. Toe Blake had assists on that one. Getliffe and Tony Demers scored the other two Canadiens' goals.

Rangers, Bruins Tie

By International News Service

New York, Jan. 16.—In 70 thrill-packed minutes of hockey the Boston Bruins and the New York Rangers played to their second successive 2-to-2 tie of the season when they met in Madison Square Garden tonight in their fifth game of the current term.

Two goals by Lynn Patrick in the second period wiped out a 2-to-0 lead of the visitors and the toughest kind of going by both sides failed to produce a tally after that.

It was a typical Rangers-Bruins setto and the battling became so hot late in the second chapter that Coulter and Schmidt drew majors for fisticuffing. None of the other players joined in because of the rule passed on Wednesday by the Board of Hockey governors which assesses an automatic $25 fine on players joining in a fight already started. That was the end of the punch-throwing, but the body checking was tough throughout.

For the Bruins it was the ninth straight game without a defeat and their fifth tie in nine contests. It was the third game in which the Rangers went undefeated and their second successive tie in the Garden.

Thurnblad And Hall Win In Cue Play

Pair Remains Unbeaten In $20,000 Billiard Tournament

By the Associated Press

Art Rubin, of New York, came from behind in the last six innings tonight to hand Jake Schaefer, of Cleveland, his first defeat of the tournament. The score was 50 to 44 and came in 42 innings, the shortest game of the current event.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Allen Hall, of Chicago, a leading contender for the world's three-cushion billiard crown, easily scored his second straight victory in the $20,000 tournament today. Another veteran, Art Thurnblad, of Kenosha, Wis., had to come from behind to keep his unbeaten record intact.

Hall and Herb Peterson, of St. Louis, went scoreless for four innings before the Chicagoan took a 2-to-1 lead and increased his advantage to win, 50 to 38, in 61 innings.

Thurnblad trailed Paul Lewin, of Chicago, 19 to 15, going into the third inning, but then began picking up and finished with 23 points in the last 17 frames to win, 50 to 32. The match went 55 innings.

In the other afternoon game Irving Crane, of Rochester, N. Y., collected his first triumph in three starts. He defeated John Fitzpatrick, of Los Angeles, previously unbeaten, 50 to 49, in 57 innings. Fitzpatrick led, 33 to 21, after the twenty-sixth frame, but Crane's late rally overtook the West Coast star.

Jay Bozeman, of Vallejo, Calif., off to a slow start against Len Kenney, of Chicago, finally began clicking after the intermission to register his second straight victory, 50 to 25. The match went 62 innings and marked the third straight loss for Kenney.

The outgoing 1940 officers of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter of the Izaak Walton League gave to the incoming officers for 1941 a dinner last night — one of those beef-roasts for which Frank Burrows and George Miller have become famous. Further comment on it isn't necessary, if you have ever been to one of them.

Elmer E. "Doc" Huffer, who has been guiding Bethesda with the aid of Bob Swingle, would be missed were it not that outgoing officers in this organization have a habit of sticking around and working just as hard as the new ones, who appear to be just about what it will take to handle the important problems coming up this year.

T. O. "Tim" Nichols is the new president, and he is just as enthusiastic about black bass fishing as his secretary, P. C. Cissell. Vice President Joseph "Joe" H. Perna raises quail or release in Montgomery County.

The board of governors are C. C. Clark, jr., Charles T. Crockett, W. B. Holton, J. W. Mohler, Abner L. Roe, W. B. Swingle and E. E. Huffer.

Floyd Akers and Lawrence Richey are just back from a fishing trip down in the Florida keys. We haven't heard from them directly, but then there was no need of that, for reports have been coming in right along from George Smith at Tavernier. He says they didn't catch every one of the 600 known varieties their first day out, but made a swell stab at it. Larry had a little the best of the going with two amberjacks that scaled close to 50 pounds each.

George Smith, just in case the odd name might be a little confusing, is welll known to anglers in the Chesapeake Bay area because of his Point Lookout Hotel. In southern Florida it is the Inn-by-the Sea at Tavernier, 72 miles south of Miami, which each year is attracting more and more Washington anglers, not only because of the grand fishing to be had, but for George's turtle steaks and stone crabs.

We have always wondered how anyone could steal another's dog, believing that taking in a "lost" dog was being kind to it or the owner. Yet both are common occurrences, in this section—usually just at the beginning of the hunting season.

This is noted in the hope that someone might be mistakingly giving Charles W. Sydnor's female English setter a home and will let him know where through this column. The dog is black, tan and white ticked, with Maryland license No. 8106.

Miami Beach, Fla.

Dear Boss:

I take back everything I've written about Miami weather. Believe me, Boss, Mother Nature really hit the jackpot around here today. In fact, she began last night when she lifted a big, yellow moon out of the sea and sent that gliding along in a field of stars that seemed to blink like so many caution lights. She sent a breeze, so soft and tropically fragrant that it made one believe that elves must be hiding behind each palm tree squeezing little bellows saturated with perfume. I don't want to make you cry, Boss, or anything like that, but it was one of those nights that simply make a guy wish he had taken up guitar instead of pool.

HAIGHT

Tell the truth, Boss, Jake came along, and in the setting I could have sworn he was Robert Taylor. Bringing Jake into this picture at this point is like blurting a commercial between verses of "I Love You Truly." Since we left Washington, Jake has appointed himself my literary manager. I have asked him several times what I could write and his answer has been the same, "Aw, just write beautiful Miami and this and that." Well, Boss, this is one day that I will try to write about beautiful Miami.

I got up this morning at 7, drank a large orange juice for an eye-opener and ran around the block four times. No. Boss, it's too pretty a day for me to lie like that. I got up at 11, drank a Bromo Seltzer for an eye-opener and wobbled around the corner for a racing form. This is one of those days that almost make it sacrilegious to go near a race track. It is as colorful around here as a rack full of picture postal cards. Every tinge seems exaggerated under a golden sun. I'm trying to give you the picture, Boss, but it's sort of hard for a guy who always thought the prettiest thing in the world was a chalk ring around his horse on Jimmy's blackboard. But as you ride around this city and over the causeway to Miami Beach, the earth looks as though it has been bombed with a thousand rainbows. It's kind of tough to put down in black and white a description of this wonderland.

Nature and man have teamed around here to make one's eyes run up and down the color scales. Vines, bushes, plants, trees—houses, clothes, autos—in light greens, poison greens, in soft blue and deep purple, in pale yellow and bold orange. Color, color, color, until you begin to think there can't be a faded gingham gown left in the world. It's like somebody has dropped a paint store in an electric mixer. Flowers, flowers and palms, palms, and nature can't tell the masses from the classes, either. A poinsettia in the front of a squatter's shack lifts its petals to the sun as proudly as one on the lawn of a swanky Hibiscus Islander.

Nature just doesn't know the clubhouse from the grandstand around here. The sun sends it's sparkling beauty everywhere. Boss, I've almost got myself crying about it by now. But then I didn't tell you about the beach. It is the life. I was over there this afternoon. Sand so clean and white that a guy almost wants a bucket and shovel, ocean water so clear and blue that it looks like the chamber of commerce has spiked it, and girls—so nice. I sat in a beach chair, a satisfied sun-seeker. A man came along selling out-of-town papers. One of the headlines read "20 below in Bosburg." Tell the truth, Boss, I haven't anything in my pocket but a half dollar, but it's a situation like this that makes a guy wonder what the poor people are doing.

Always your ace,

MIAMI HAIGHT.

Armstrong in Return Bout With Zivic Tonight in Garden

Henry Intent On Regaining Welter Title

18,000 Expected For 15-Round Scrap; Former Titleholder In Favorite's Role

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 16.—For probably the last time in his career, the miracle man of boxing, Henry Armstrong, tries to do it again tomorrow night.

Deadly intent on regaining his world welterweight championship—because he wants to "quit at the top"—the little Hammer tangles with Fritzie Zivic for 15 rounds or less in Madison Square Garden, and the chances are the biggest crowd of the indoor season, possibly more than 18,000, will be on hand to wish him hail and farewell.

Although most of the evidence points to a repeat victory for Fritzie, not even the betting men are willing to give up on "Li'l Perpetual Motion." The only warrior to hold three championships simultaneously, he has done more than once before what everyone thought was impossible.

Hank Favored

Despite his defeat last October at the hands of the youngest of the five Flying Zivics—a defeat in which he toppled on his face, a beaten battler, as the final gong sounded—Hennery the Hammer remained a surprise 5 to 8 favorite in the wagering today. The experts, however, generally picked Zivic, largely because the Pittsburgher has been particularly impressive in his training while Henry has been somewhat less than terrific.

Zivic has just as much incentive as Armstrong in this bout. While Henry is shooting at the goal of retiring as a champion, Zivic remembers seven years of kicking around fistiana's bush leagues for coffee and cake money. He likes the "heavy sugar" and won't give it up easily.

Fritzie will have a weight pull of 8 pounds, and, while this is strictly nothing new in the way of a handicap for Henry, it's telling no secret that he is "over the hump" now and nearing the end of the trail. Finally, Armstrong is trying a new style.

He is certain an "old dog" can be taught "new tricks," but it just isn't his way of fighting. He is standing straighter and is thinking of defense, a totally foreign thought for the little fellow who knows no other way of battling but just to walk out there and throw punches.

Style a Mystery

Just what Henry is going to do from here on in, not even he is quite certain, although 1941 definitely will be his last year in action. If he wins, the chances are he'll leave the ring for keeps and turn to his poetry writing and music. He has nothing to worry about financially. If he loses by a close margin, he'll be back later for another crack. If he is badly beaten, it is doubtful if he'll try again.

Missing from Armstrong's corner for the first time since he skyrocketed out of the West to rule the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight divisions will be his manager, Eddie Mead. Large Eddie is recovering from a heart attack. In his place will be Ray Arcel, generally regarded as the top man among ring seconds.

The preliminary card is featured by an eight-rounder between young Kid McCoy, highly regarded Detroit welterweight, and Aaron (Al) Smith, of Los Angeles, who bowed into the garden a few weeks ago by knocking out Irish Eddie Dunne. The main go is slated for 10 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Bill Tilden Hurt In Auto Accident On Way to Net Date

By the Associated Press

Mendota, Ill., Jan. 16.—Big Bill Tilden, internationally known tennis player, on tour with a professional troupe, was cut and bruised about the legs today when the automobile he was driving sidewiped another car near here.

Tilden was en route from Milwaukee to St. Louis, where his tennis troupe, which includes Don Budge, Alice Marble and Mary Hardwick, is scheduled to perform tomorrow night.

Tilden said he was determined to fill the St. Louis engagement "if my knee will hold me up." However, his physician, Dr. N. R. Musick, said it was unlikely that Tilden could play for several days.

Furman, Reed Share Honors At Petworth

Reed's Set of 441 Is New Pin Record; Furman's 169 High

Frank Furman, owner of the Petworth alleys who rolls on the Wonder Bread team, divided high honors in the Petworth League with Waldorf Reed, Soller's Plumbing, last night. Furman rolled the high game of 169 and went on to a 403 set but Reed, with a near high game of 165, finished stronger and was credited with a season high set of 441, topping his own previous high of 418 by 23 sticks. Schaeffer Motors topped the other in team totals with 647-1,827, taking all its games from Gochran's Restaurant to go into first place over Soller's who had led all season but whose loss of the odd game to Double Flavor Bread put them in the second spot.

SOUTHEAST

In the Southeast meet at Queen Pin it was MacDonald who had the top game with 144 for his Brinkley team while Red Megaw, Chat's Liquor and Queen Pin manager, took the string with 380. The A. B. Price lads won team highs after scattering 622 pins for game and 1,763 for set. Both Red Megaw and Charlie Renwick won free rides in Chilly Barnard's Tournament at the GPO Saturday.

INTER-SORORITY

Edith Burns, Alpha Zeta Beta No. 1, rolled 128 for high game in the inter-sorority meet at Brookland with "Stimmy" Hart. Chi Sigma No. 2, winning the top set with 347. The Beta Gamma Phi girls took the top game with 490 while Lambda Sigma Delta rolled 1,410 to capture the top set. The last-place Sigma Phi Gamma No. 2 girls won all three games from opponents. Alpha Zeta Beta No. 1 still leads the league.

CATHOLIC "D"

Jimmy Pepper, St. Francis Xavier, was high game roller in the Section D rolling of the Washington Catholic loop at Queen Pin, getting 156 to top the others. He also had a 349 near-high set. Frank Ford, a teammate, divided high set with honors with George Harbin, each rolling 337. John Wilkinson, St. Peter's No. 2, came close with his 137 game and 349 set. The St. Francis Xavier lads won team highs with 600 for the game and a set of 1,652. St. Peter's No. 1 still leads the league with 24-18.

SILVER SPRING

Florence Douglas, Hilltop Market, rolled a 131 game and 331 set in the Silver Spring ladies' loop at Hugh Arbaugh's drives to lead all the rest and pace her team to high game of 517. The Silver Spring Bakery girls won the top set with 1,464. Both Shepherd Park and Silver Spring Standard won all three from opponents.

CLARENDON

A special match between the Clarendon Juniors and the Petworth Juniors is scheduled for Sunday afternoon at 2:30. The match will be a block of five games with the second series to be rolled at Clarendon the following Sunday. Frank Furman's Petworth Juniors are led by "Bud" Cozlin, junior champion of Washington, whose current average is 118. All of the juniors are high school students, the Clarendon boys attending Washington and Lee High School.

D. C. TAXICAB

Gus Placos, D. C. Mutual, was the big shot of the D. C. Taxicab meet at Brookland Recreation, his 152 game and 390 set being high for the night. The Redskins, league leaders, won the team highs with 875-1,612 and beat Taxi Go-Round three straight as Bell Cab took Yellow Cab's measure in like manner. Bell Cab is in second spot, two games behind the Redskins.

CONN. AVENUE

The Connecticut Avenue Ladies loop was sparked by Margaret Gerke, Robins, with a 122 high game and 307 top set. The high-flying Orioles again took the team highs after knocking over 475 pins for the game and 1,421 for the set. The Robins defeated the Penguins in all three contests. The Orioles lead with Blue Jays, Pelicans and Eagles tied for the runner-up spot.

UTILITY GIRLS

The Utility Girls at New Recreation were paced by Ethel Ritt, Five Fuses, with 118, 298 with the Live Wires taking game and set with 470 and 1,335, respectively.

Minor Leagues To Be Affected By Draft-Frick

National League Head Thinks Majors Will Escape Heavy Damage

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 16.—The fact that baseball has made a practice of paying its young men a handsome wage now promises to pay dividends and enable the national pastime to escape any mortal hurt by the operations of the draft, President Ford Frick, of the National League, said today.

"The great majority of our players are married and have families, thank goodness," said Frick as he looked out from behind a mass of draft data he had obtained from the individual clubs of his circuit. "By the time they reach the big leagues ball eplayers are making enough money to marry, and that's usually the first thing they do.

"For the present I'm afraid the minor leagues are going to be the most seriously affected. Most of their coming stars are single and without dependents. But, of course, if the draft continues for several years we will feel the effects more and more.

Hard to Regain Form

"Unfortunately, baseball players very seldom, if ever, can regain their peak after being away from the game a year. At least, none of the fellows who held out for a season and then tried to come back ever was as good again.

"That part of it scares me. And what makes it worse is the fact that a player drafted during the season will, in effect, lose two years, and his club will have to figure on replacing him for two campaigns. The only thing we hope is that this can be avoided in some measure."

Frick, hopeful of learning with some degree of accuracy what players his clubs stand to lose to the Army in the coming year, asked each team to forward him a list of players, with the draft number and the drawn number of each. Now he has all the information, and he confesses he doesn't know a bit more than he did before.

"Here I've got all the numbers, they don't mean a thing," he mourned. "I've got to start all over now and find out from each player where he stands on his local board list. It's all very, very complicated.

Frick's Son in Army

"For instance, here's one player, Walker Cooper, of the Cardinals, with No. 6, drawn. But that doesn't signify that he's practically in the Army already. My son, Fred, was drawn No. 1817, yet he's already been called up.

"Other low numbers in the league include Truett Sewell, of Pittsburgh, with 120; Vince DiMaggio, of the same club, 214; Lou Stringer, new Cub second baseman, 61; Joe Vosmik, of Cincinnati, 9; Charles Gilbert of Brooklyn, 532; Alvin Glossop, of the Bees, 463. Those are all low numbers, but it doesn't mean anything much. Hugh Mulcahy, of the Phils is No. 2231, but he's single and might be called before any of them. I might even lose my new umpire, Al Barlick. He's No. 200."

Lombardi Returns Contract Unsigned

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 16 (AP).—Ernie Lombardi, first-string catcher of the World Champion Cincinnati Reds, said today he was not satisfied with the 1941 contract offered him.

Lombardi had a $6,000 pay cut last season and wanted part of that sum added to his 1941 salary.

The big fellow has been exercising most of the winter by fishing for driftwood in the Oakland surf. He reports this has strengthened the ankle he injured late in the 1940 season and which kept him on the sidelines through most of the world's series.

Zeke Bonura Envisions Pennant For Chicago Cubs This Season

Big First Baseman Happy to Be With Windy City Club

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Jan. 16.—The big man in muddy overalls looked up from his cabbage patch, waved, grinned and shouted:

"Say, I've got a scoop for you. For the first time in my eight years in the big leagues I feel I'm going to be in the World Series."

It was Zeke Bonura, all right, with this sensational news, but 'twas a far different Zeke from the pouting, disgruntled fellow he was this time last year.

Everything was wrong, then, when the big first baseman and Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants were indulging in long-distance sparring over a contract and related matters. Today all was rosy, as Zeke, now a Chicago Cub, went about the chores on his 200-acre farm across the river. Even the grunts from his fat Poland China pigs sounded cheerful.

"I'm going to try harder than ever before," he declared. "I'll be in a city where I like to play ball. I'm in good shape from working on the farm and I'll be at training camp on Catalina Island early. They haven't sent the contract yet but the terms are all settled.

"I'll like playing for Jimmy Wilson, too. He has hustle and fight and that's my kind of baseball.

"The Cubs will be back. Bill Lee is a good pitcher and will win 22 games this year. So will Clay Bryant. Billy Myers will help us plenty at short, too. He pushed the Reds into the pennant.

"I've been with the White Sox, Senators and Giants and always felt in my heart the teams lacked something for pennant winners. But the Cubs don't lack anything."

ZEKE BONURA

Charley Root Unsigned

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP).—Pitcher Charley Root, a veteran of 15 years with the Chicago Cubs, may be the Cubs' No. 1 holdout this season.

First the Pirates, Then the Steelers, Now the Iron Men

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Jan. 16.—The Pittsburgh pro football team henceforth will be known as the Pittsburgh Iron Men, the new owner, Alexis Thompson, disclosed today in a telephone call from Chicago. Previously the eleven had been known as the Pirates and later the Steelers.

Thompson also said he had traded his draft rights to Center Chet Gladhuck, of Boston College, for Leonard Barnum, veteran backfield star of the New York Giants. Barnum starred with West Virginia Wesleyan in his college days.

Another deal will bring Banks McFadden, a Clemson College graduate who starred last season with the Brooklyn Dodgers, to the Iron Men. Thompson said this deal is a "complicated one," with some of the details to be ironed out.

Ernie Dusek Victor Over Milo Steinborn

Crowd Objects to Outcome of Match At Turner's Arena

A knee bend by the Green Hornet, newest mystery grappler, finished off Tommy Rae in 20 minutes of one preliminary. Others were won by Warren Bockwinkle over Ed Newman in 20 minutes, and Joe De Valteau over Tiger Tasker in 22 minutes. Ivan Managoff and Lou Plummer wrestled to a 30-minute draw.

After Dawn. Derby Hopeful, Breaks Leg, Is Destroyed

By the Associated Press

Lost Angeles, Jan. 16.—After Dawn, one of the Milky Way Farm's outsanding threats for the $50,000 derby for 3-year-olds at Santa Anita race track and possibly the Kentucky Derby, was destroyed today after suffering a broken leg in a workout.

Winner of a race on Santa Anita's opening day and second place runner to Bull Reigh in the $10,000 San Felipe Stakes, After Dawn recently suffered a "filled" leg and only returned to training today.

Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, owner of the Milky Way Stable, purchased After Dawn as a yearling at Saratoga in 1938 for $8,000.

Parkers Win Recreation League Game

Bellman Fuel Wins Over J.C.C. Quintet; Typos Beat Regals

Close competition marked yesterday's action in the District of Columbia Recreation Department basketball tournament, the highlight being Maryland Park's overtime triumph over the Bowie Thoroughbreds, 24 to 22.

Other clashes at Eastern gym went to Call Radio, 35 to 34, over the Arlington Maccabees, and Ballard by a 32-10 count over Briggs A. C.

At Roosevelt High the closest engagement went to Bellman Fuel five, a 16-14 margin over Jewish Community Center. Another close one was taken by Washington Flour, which tripped General Tires by 30 to 24.

Three games at Tech saw United Typewriters steal a march on Regal, 30 to 24; Census blasted Maritime Commission by a 42-to-19 score, and Adam Hats trounced Jacobson Florists, 36 to 19.

Herby's quintet tipped Central High action with a 37-to-18 margin over Mount Vernon. Chilcotte's 18 points in the winners' behalf proved the best individual scoring effort of the day. Railroad Retirement Board nosed out Treasury cagers, 32 to 23, and Agriculture turned back the Cavaliers, 25 to 14.

Roosevelt and Eastern Fives Clash Tonight

Interhigh Game Scheduled at Riders' Gym; Central and Anacostia Also Meet on Indians' Court; Other Games Listed

Again struck by a schedule that forces it to meet its toughest foes first, Roosevelt High cage team tonight takes on Eastern in another public high school tangle that may be a preview of the interhigh round robin tournament final in February.

Hostilities will take place at 8 p. m. at Roosevelt's gym, having been transferred there from Tech, where Friday night double-headers are usually held. The other end of the bill—Central vs. Anacostia—will be staged on the latter's floor at 7:30.

The two public school battles feature a 14-game schedule for scholboy basketers of this vicinity today, only two of them being out of town.

If Roosevelt is to be stopped in its march to a second interhigh title after more than two decades of going without one, tonight's meeting with Eastern may be the turning point. The two clubs are unbeaten in series play, each with two victories, and to all outward appearances they, along with Tech, hold the only good chance of winning the 1941 crown.

Both Beat Central

Roosevelt romped over Central in its opener, but had a lot of trouble with Tech before winning 38 to 33. Eastern had a little difficulty with Central, but swamped Anacostia as it pleased.

Again tonight's scholastic feature will present a clash of individual stars, Hymie Perlo for the Riders, and Moe Schulman for the White Tide. Perlo was stopped completely in the scoring department by a Tech rookie Tuesday, but his generalship was nevertheless mainly responsible for victory. Leading the floor attack is Schulman's job, too, so tonight's affair may develop into a passing duel with little scoring.

Roosevelt's big edge will be Frankie Ciango, the youngster who is stealing a lot of Perlo's thunder. He is one of the fastest runners and dribblers hereabouts and he has an uncanny scoring eye. Against Ciango and Perlo, and an unexpectedly fine novice, Tom Howard, the Tide will match such dependable players as Ritchie Poston, Neil Craig, Ralph Capone and George Piggott in addition to Schulman.

With a victory over Woodrow Wilson to its credit, an Anacostia triumph over Central tonight is not utterly impossible. Central, with many veterans and good coaching, has yet to fulfill its promise of early in the season. The Vikings, however, go into action as the favorite.

Wilson Meets Gonzaga

Of the supplementary card today, the Woodrow Wilson-Gonzaga game will probably be best. In a double-header earlier in the season, the Purple eked out a 1-point margin and Wilson will be out to avenge the loss. Gonzaga gym will be the scene at 3:30.

At Catholic U. tonight St. John's moves up against LaSalle High, of Cumberland, after a parochial school preliminary at 7:30. LaSalle is touted as one of the strongest clubs to visit Washington this season.

Eastern at Roosevelt, 8 p. m.
Central at Anacostia, 7:30.
LaSalle vs. St. John's, at C. U., 7:30.
Geo. Prep at Bethesda-C. C., 3:30.
Fairfax at Falls Church, 8 p. m.
Washington-Lee at Petersburg (Va.).
Wilson at Gonzaga, 3:30.
Rockville at Friends School, 3:30.
G. W. High at John Marshall (Richmond).
Devitt at St. Alban's, 3:30.
Charlotte Hall at Woodward Prep, 3:30.
Bladensburg at Mount Rainier, 7 p. m.
Baltimore Friends at Landon, 3:30.

Christoforidis Sought for Fight Here

Promoter Menendez Wires Lightheavy as to Offer for Overlin Match

Gabe Menendez, local matchmaker, realizing that Ken Overlin is the first Washingtonian ever to win a middleweight championship, yesterday announced he had wired Anton Christoforidis, the Greek sensation, who recently annexed the light-heavyweight title, for a match with Kongo Ken here the latter part of next month.

Menendez stated he had offered Lew Burston, manager of the conqueror of Mello Bettina, $5,000 or a privilege of 30 per cent for a 15-round scrap at Uline's Palace.

Overlin, however, has a tough hurdle next Tuesday night when he has a date at Turner's Arena over the ten-round route with Tony Cisco, rugged Norristown, Pa., slugger.

The champion, who plans to build himself a home in Washington from his fistic earnings, must defeat Cisco first if Menendez is to have him fight Christoforidis for the light-heavyweight crown. Overlin wants to be a holder of two crowns. He is under contract to Mike Jacobs for middleweight title bouts, but Jacobs can't say nothing about his lightweight aspirations, Ken explained yesterday.

Overlin breezed through eight rounds with two sparmates at Huron gym yesterday, going at a merry pace with Dave Chicoine and Buddy Holmes. Today at 1 p. m. the champ trains again.

Overlin has two other nontitle bouts in the offing. He meets Jack Munley at Allentown February 3 and Paulie Walker at Trenton February 10.

Earl Brown Named Harvard Coach

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 16 (AP).—Earl Melvin Brown, all-America football player at Notre Dame in 1938, has been appointed head basketball coach and end coach of the varsity football team at Harvard, it was announced tonight.

Brown, who is now end coach and freshman basketball coach at Brown University, succeeds Wesley Fiedler, who resigned to become head football coach at Wesleyan University at Middletown, Conn.

Town Boy Wins Miami Springs Race Purse

Victor Pays $20.90 for Each $2

Montsin, Favorite, Second; High One In Show Spot in Featured Sprint

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 16.—Joseph E. Widener's Town Boy, showing marked improvement over his one previous effort of the winter, led home five other sprinters in the featured Miami Springs Purse here today. Paying $20.90 for $2, the 4-year-old son of Haste, with Wayne Wright up, covered 6 furlongs of muddy going in 1:13 3-5 to top Henry Friedberg's Montsin, the favorite, by a neck. A. C. Snyder's High One trailed the pair by three lengths.

Maxwell Howard's The Chief, a veteran that has looked like a champion on occasions when he felt like running, made his winter debut and finished fourth, a head off High One. The Chief, Howard's reliance in the Widener Cup Handicap, ran sluggishly although he had worked well. He was a close second to Montsin.

The fact that heavy rain fell during the night and soaked the track proved no hardship to Town Boy. The gelding was away on his toes and dashed right into the clear. Briar Sharp sampled the pace and retired early. High One had a whirl at the leader around the bend, but he, too, weakened. Montsin's move came through the home lane. He made a bold try as Town Boy tired in the final sixteenth. The latter had to be hard ridden to stave off the choice.

MEDIA LUNA, in the thick of contention from the start, bore over steadily through the stretch and drew clear at the end. SIR WAR, a keen factor throughout, continued tenaciously in the final drive to outlast ETERNAL BULL. The latter broke in the air and was bumped after the start, raced greenly and showed a good performance.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:31½. Winner, Mrs. E. Kelley's ch. m. GOLD MESH, on the outside and forcing the pace after leaving the backstretch, bore over on GRAEME CRACKER at the furlong pole forcing her to pull up. She drew clear thereafter. Claim of foul was lodged and disallowed. GRAEME CRACKER, on the inside and keen factor, appeared to weaken after the trouble. DIANAPAT saved much ground and outlasted NEDDIE'S LASS.

HERE AGAIN broke well and on the inside the entire trip, responded courageously when the final issue came to outgame TRAGIC ENDING. The latter moved up stoutly on the outside entering the stretch, but hung in the final furlong. PEEP SHOW raced wide from the start and outlasted FETTACAIRN.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DRUDGERY, $7.70, $5.60, $3.50; INTERLACE, $8.50, $4.40; WEISENHEIMER, $3.00.
DRUDGERY, suited by the going and racing to his top form, opened up a winning lead at his leisure the first half mile and was eased at the finish. INTERLACE, forced back in the early running, swung around the field entering the stretch and finished stoutly. WEISENHEIMER, hard urged, raced evenly all the way.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:06½. Off 4:07½. Winner, Mrs. G. C. Winfrey's ch. h. MICHIGAN FLYER, under stout restraint until well straightened into the stretch, moved up on the outside with determination when placed to pressure and won as his rider pleased. REMARKABLE displayed the most foot, but was no match for the winner. ABBASSIDE came through on the inside and dead heated O PLAY for third place. The latter was compelled to race wide.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Miami Springs. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:37½. Winner, Joseph E. TOWN BOY, away alertly, bore over sharply in the opening furlong and pinched back his opponents, drew out thereafter and held on gamely in the final drive. MONTSIN, shuffled back in the run down the backstretch, swung around the leaders in the last quarter mile and finished with a belated rush. HIGH ONE, well placed early, faltered under his impost, but outlasted THE CHIEF.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:05½. Off 5:06. Winner, H. H. Price's gr. g. KIEVEX, permitted to settle into his stride, moved up gradually on the extreme outside in the last 3 furlongs, wore the leaders down and held STRIDENT safe at the end. STRIDENT, a trailer all the way, closed gamely, but could not reach the winner. CHANCE RAY opened up a good gap in the early stages, but faltered when it came to a drive.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al: Holders of daily double tickets yesterday ending on Gold Mesh had some nervous moments. Jockey Don Meade, who rode Graeme Cracker, claimed a foul against the winner. The stewards ruled against him, but it looked mighty like Apprentice C. Knisley crowded him into the rail. The reason Gold Mesh was not disqualified probably was because the Mr. Bigs contended that Graeme Cracker was a beaten horse. I still say that, beaten or not beaten, a foul is a foul and the number should come down. Would a ball player be called out on a close play just because his team was trailing, 8 to 0, at the time? What happened is that Gold Mesh kept bearing in on Meade's horse from the top of the stretch and finally got him so close to the rail that Meade was forced to pull up. Earl D. Walden, chief assistant to Mort Mahoney, mutuel manager here, is recovering from an attack of flu. George C. Lynch, of the RFC, got in from Washington and is taking in the horses. Meade is leading the veteran riders here with ten winners and Wendell Eads is topping the apprentices with six. Preston Burch, who holds the contract on Apprentice W. Canning, has turned the rider's book over to George Woods, who also is Meade's agent. Paul Sandford (Harold Bester take notice) is making arrangements for Jockey Jimmy Stout. Jack Carpenter, of the Baltimore News-Post, is on the verge of being taken into the service. He wrote a letter here that was so full of draft that it opened itself. Liberty Flight, winner of the Inaugural here, has been assigned top weight of 126 pounds for the $5,000 Palm Beach Handicap, feature of the week-end program. The weights scale down to 100 for Play House. Dr. and Mrs. McDonald got in from Washington and they tell me Art Brown has been letting me have it. I'll get even. Wish I had him over the rail. BILL.

First race—Starweista has all the earmarks of a winning favorite. Won a race here and goes back after another with Meade in the saddle. Carries top weight of 120 pounds but I'm forced to string along. Remembering has been second twice and is the one to beat. Keekee may be the third one.

Second race—Conscript is a doubtful starter in this field but is so fit that I can't pass him up. Will have Eddie Arcaro to do the riding and I'm hoping he gets off the reserve list. Blind Pig and Madison to take care of the others.

Third race—Cruising is a veteran with a liking for an off track. Seems well placed in this field and I'm going to be there. Ugin won that last in good fashion and is a threat this time. Count Morse is dropping down to meet these and is dangerous.

Fourth race — Old Friend was messed about last out. Will have plenty of price in this field and may win it with clear sailing. Rogers Boy is good as recent races suggest and belongs with these. Air Post for the show.

Fifth race—Battle Colors ran second in last Saturday's stake and seems capable of turning back these. Gets only 110 pounds and is ready for brackets. Clarksville was a tip last out. Version may fill out the cash bracket.

Sixth race—High Fidelity has too much class for these. Likes the track and the route and needs only a good ride. Oversight won recently and promises to be close. Gino Rex will be in the thick of contention.

Seventh race—Red Burr seems the best suited of those gathered for this distance affair. Leblanc will do the riding and I see no reason for mistakes. Cloudy Night gets in light and will be a factor. The same goes for Blumere.

Eighth race—I'm going to take a shot at the moon in the day's finale with Orchids Next. This one has been kidding and may take it all at boxcar odds. Stable was third last out and is dropping down. Sweet Adeline for the minor award.
Best—Starweista.

Torrid Eagles Meet Olympics Tonight

Danny Sullivan, left wing of the Olympics, which face the Washington Eagles tonight at Riverside Stadium, is leading all Boston goal makers in the Eastern Amateur League. He was captain of the Dartmouth hockey club last year

Burns Aims for Scoring Mark As D. C. Six Seeks 6th Straight; Dewey Forced Out of Line-up

A double-barreled offensive on Eastern Amateur Hockey League scoring records will be continued by Norman Burns tonight when the league-leading Washington Eagles entertain the surprising Boston Olympics at Riverside Stadium, 8:30 o'clock.

The Eagles will be pointing for their sixth consecutive Eastern League victory and a near capacity crowd is anticipated.

In 31 games thus far Burns has scored 41 goals and 14 assists for a 55 point total. In Washington's 34 remaining matches he is conceded a splendid chance of bettering the Eastern League record of 101 points set by Ab Collings, of the New York Rovers, last season and a virtual cinch to eclipse the mark of 53 goals established by Baltimore's Norm Calladine a year ago.

Burns, who is being hailed by many as the greatest hockey player turned out by the Eastern League within the past five years, yesterday was optimistic over his chances of cracking both records.

Fears Injury

"If my luck holds out and I don't get hurt my chances are good," Burns commented quietly yesterday. "All of the fellows have been helping me a lot, and I'll need their help in order to gain my goal.

"I want it distinctly understood, however, that I'm willing to sacrifice my own interests for the team at any and all times. I can sincerely say that the fellows I play with mean as much to me as my own individual welfare."

The Eagles will be weakened tonight by the departure of Hal Dewey, veteran wingman, for Canada, where he must make a run for the railroad by which he is employed prior to returning here. It is believed that he will return to the Eagles for their game with Atlantic City a week from tonight at Riverside.

The surprising Olympics, comeback champion of the Eastern League, share with Atlantic City the distinction of being the only team to have defeated the Eagles at Riverside this season.

The All-American sextet from New England lost 10 of its first 12 Eastern League games this season, deadlocking one and winning another. Since then, however, they have won 11 matches while losing six and playing one tie.

Boast Long Streak

A duel of outstanding goalies will be one of the features of tonight's match when Gordon Hemming, Washington's crack net tender, squares off against Vic Polich, Boston's standout.

Polich made good with the fanciest exhibition of goal tending of the season in the Olympics' last visit here when they upset the Eagles after a fiercely fought match, 4 to 2. The Olympics are the only amateur hockey team in the United States, comprised exclusively of American players. Polich, a native of Duluth, Minn., is the only team member who does not hail from Boston and vicinity.

Former college hockey players representing the Olympics are: Al Carvelli and Gerry Desrosiers, former Boston University captains; Frank Stubbs, jr., formerly of Harvard, and Jack Costello, Paul Guibord, Frank Spain and Dan Sullivan, formerly of Dartmouth.

War Affects Badminton

Seattle, Jan. 16 (AP).—War is threatening the status of badminton. Eddie Bauer, of Seattle, shuttlecock producer, reports the European war has shut off the source of supply of tail feathers for the bounding birds. Strong, tough wing feathers from Balkan Greece have been relied upon. American goose quills, he said, lack the necessary toughness for the battering they must take.

Narcotic Head Scolds Race Men For Negligence

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 16.—H. J. Anslinger, Commissioner of Narcotics of the Treasury Department, told the National Convention of State Racing Commissioners today that many of them had failed to report regularly the stimulating of horses by illegal drugs.

He agreed with other speakers that very few narcotics cases were discovered last year, but pointed out that some commissions were slack on cooperation. In addition, he cited a case in which a known drug addict was reinstated as a trainer and another in which a trainer convicted of peddling narcotics was granted a license.

Former Capitol Policeman Named House Librarian

Appointment of Larry Cates, 31, of Eufaula, Okla., as librarian for the House of Representatives was announced yesterday. He succeeds W. P. Miller, librarian for the past ten years, who resigned because of ill health.

CATES

Cates has been in Washington for the past five years and has served in various Government departments. As a member of the Capitol police force, he aided in dispersing an anticonscription demonstration last September on the Capitol steps and had the crowd singing "America" before it was all over.

The new librarian is a graduate of Oklahoma University, where he was a star of the boxing team. He was formerly in the newspaper advertising and publishing business in Oklahoma. He lives at 1525 Twenty-eighth Street Southeast with his wife and 2-year-old daughter.

165 Attend Dinner Fete For Bishop

Retiring Title Firm's President Honored; Early Days Recalled

A $15-a-month clerk, who became one of the best-known figures in the Washington building field, was honored last night at a testimonial dinner in the Raleigh Hotel.

Gray-haired Arthur G. Bishop, whose dignity is belied by the twinkle in his eyes, sat and listened as his friends recalled his notable career. He's president of the city's three title insurance companies—District, Lawyer's and Washington—and is chairman of the board of the Perpetual Building Association.

After 46 years of service, Mr. Bishop recently announced his intention to retire. The dinner was arranged by his colleagues. More than 165 building leaders, employes and guests attended. Roger J. Whiteford acted as toastmaster.

It was just 46 years ago last night that a young man walked in the just-formed Lawyer's Title Insurance Company and started transcribing records—at $15 a month.

Young Bishop worked his way up through successive executive positions to become vice president in 1923. After a consolidation five years later with the District and Washington title firms, Mr. Bishop was named president of the three companies.

A native Washingtonian, Mr. Bishop graduated from Georgetown University law school. Among his varied interests, he is a director of the National Capital Insurance Company and the Fidelity Mortgage Investment Company; member of the Washington Board of Trade, and is president of the board of the Ninth Street Christian Church. For a number of years, he has served as treasurer of the Central Union Mission.

He is married and has two daughters.

Brokers to Remain Open

Although financial institutions out of the city will remain open on Inaugural Day, Washington banks, building and loan associations and the local stock exchange will be closed Monday.

However, brokerage houses here with New York connections generally will remain open because the New York Stock Exchange will continue operations.

Governors of the Washington Stock Exchange took formal action yesterday to close the market on Monday.

Henry H. Edmiston, division of research and statistics, board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, who has recently joined the faculty, will conduct the course in money and banking.

Another new member of the faculty is Edson B. Olds, jr., member of the firm of Brown, Goodwyn & Olds. Mr. Olds will give a course in corporation finance and investments.

Steel and Industrial Shares Depressed; Most of Post-New Year Rise Is Erased

By Frederick Gardner
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 16.—The stock market today suffered another setback that reduced prices of steels and pivotal industrials 1 to more than 2 points. Isolated issues were down 3 to 5.

It was the fifth successive session in which no progress had been made on average and, at the close, virtually all of the post-New Year's advance had been wiped out.

The list tried for a feeble rally at the start but failed to follow through and the decline was interrupted but few times during the remainder of the session.

Volume was not large at any period, although transfers stepped up to 609,720 shares, against 396,580 yesterday, which was the smallest turnover in about three months.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .5 of a point at 43.8. When the recovery shift got under way on January 3 the composite stood at 44.1.

There was still plenty of business cheer, but many buyers apparently stood aside, brokers said, because of revived worries over taxes, possible expansion of Government controls over industry and the outcome of the lease-lend bill controversy in Congress.

Continued sales of heavy blocks of stocks "over the counter"—that is, off the stock exchange—deepened apprehension in commission houses. After today's close a syndicate offered 500,000 shares of Standard Oil of New Jersey from a domestic estate at the final quotation of 34½, which was off ¼ of a point from Wednesday.

Favorable straws included a more than seasonal upturn in last week's freight loadings and reports automobile distribution was holding at a record level for January.

Prominent share losers were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber common and preferred, Dow Chemical, duPont, Westinghouse, American Can, Texas Corporation, Douglas Aircraft, American Smelting, Western Union and Johns-Manville. Among weak senior stocks were those of American Locomotive, International Agricultural Chemical and International Paper.

Rails and utilities generally kept minus signs to fractions. Crane Co. made a new 1940-41 high. Consolidated Cigar common and preferred were among the gainers, along with Reynolds Tobacco "B" and Air Reduction.

Bonds, on the whole, took a downward slant, although carriers did fairly well. Commodities were irregularly lower. Wheat at Chicago was off ⅜ to ¾ of a cent a bushel and corn up ⅛ to ⅜. Cotton conceded 15 to 40 cents a bale.

Among curb casualties of as much as a point or so were Aluminum, Ltd., Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Mead Johnson. The aggregate here was around 124,000 shares, versus 90,000 the day before.

Three Airlines Bought By Canadian Pacific

Toronto, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—The Toronto Star said today that the Canadian Pacific Railway was reliably reported to have bought three Canadian airlines companies, embarking on a program estimated to amount to $12,000,000 in the acquisition of other companies and development of air services across the Dominion.

The companies said to have been purchased were Yukon Southern Air Transport, operating from Vancouver and Edmonton, Alberta, into the Yukon; the Ginger Coote Airways, operating from Vancouver to Vancouver Island, and the MacKenzie Air Service, operating out of Edmonton into the MacKenzie River Basin.

Bank Clearings Drop After Setting Record

The total for 23 leading cities was $5,595,578,000, a decrease of $1,549,869,000 as compared with the figure for the period ended January 8. It was 4.4 per cent under last year's comparative of $5,856,083,000.

New York clearances were $3,098,535,000 against $3,448,724,000 last year, a decline of 10.2 per cent. Aggregate for the 22 outside cities was $2,497,043,000 against $2,407,359,000 last year, down 3.7 per cent.

Over-Counter Deals Worry Wall Street

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—After the New York Stock Exchange closed today Dillon, Read & Co. and associates offered "over the counter" 500,000 shares of Standard Oil of New Jersey stock at 34½ net. The stock closed on the exchange at 34½.

The stock was understood to be from a large estate and not to represent British holdings.

From the portfolio of a charitable institution, Smith, Barney & Co. and associates offered 22,500 shares of Great Northern Paper Co. common stock at 42.

The heavy stream of sales of securities "over the counter" from British and other sources, while business on the Stock Exchange languishes at the lowest level in years, has the Wall Street brokerage fraternity by the ears.

Why is it, they ask, that the investment banking houses are having no difficulty offering and selling thousands of shares of stock directly to their customers, while seemingly almost nobody wants to buy on the exchange?

One leading investment banker told a high official of the stock exchange the other day that if the exchange did not do something soon to make itself function more effectively, it would have to give up claim to being the Nation's leading market place for securities.

Auto Output Rises Sharply During Week

The Chrysler divisions' output was estimated at 27,000 this week against 26,775 last week. Ford plants increased activities this week with an indicated output of 26,650 Last week's assemblies numbered 25,650.

London Stocks

London, Jan. 16 (AP).—Industrials were strong and active in the stock market today. Strength was attributed to demand ensendered by distribution of Treasury funds for requisitioned American securities.

Store and provision groups were most prominent but heavy industry and brewery shares also improved substantially.

Domestic rails gained up to 1 point. Oils made up early losses. Kaffirs were most active at the close but base metals turned dull after initial firmness.

The Offering Prospectus, which must be furnished to each purchaser, should be read prior to any purchase of these Bonds.

THE COMPANY Illinois Bell Telephone Company, over 99% of the stock of which is owned by American Telephone and Telegraph Company, was incorporated in Illinois on January 14, 1881. The Company is engaged in the telephone business in Illinois (except a portion adjacent to St. Louis) and in two counties in Indiana. The Company's properties consist mainly of telephone instruments and facilities for their interconnection, the latter consisting chiefly of central office switching equipment and connecting lines. The Company is subject to regulation by the Illinois Commerce Commission, and as to its business in Indiana by the Public Service Commission of that State. Certain phases of its business are also regulated by the Federal Communications Commission, which in 1939 transmitted to Congress certain recommendations for additional legislation designed to extend its regulatory powers.

Of the remainder, $5,250,000 will be applied toward reimbursing the Company's treasury for funds, not obtained through the issuance of securities, which have been used for extensions, additions and improvements to its telephone plant, and the balance will be added to working capital. Thereupon, the Company intends to use $3,375,000 to meet the redemption premium on the Series B bonds, and $1,500,000 to repay to American Telephone and Telegraph Company the advance now outstanding. The Company may borrow additional amounts from the American Company from time to time as occasion therefor arises.*

With the exceptions specified therein, the provisions of the Mortgage and the rights of the bondholders may be modified by the Company and the Trustee with the consent, evidenced as in the Mortgage provided, of holders of 66⅔% in principal amount of all bonds outstanding affected by such modification.

There is no firm commitment for the remaining $3,750,000 of Bonds, but the Company is withholding such Bonds for sale, on or before January 31, 1941, to the Trustee of Pension Funds established by the Company and by certain companies associated, allied or affiliated with the Company, without underwriting discounts or commissions, at 102%, or a total of $3,825,000, plus accrued interest.*

The Underwriters named in the Offering Prospectus have agreed to purchase $46,250,000 of these Bonds on the terms and conditions set forth in the Purchase Agreement including the approval of legal matters by Messrs. How J. P. Morgan & Co. Employs Its Funds

Market to Get $50,000,000 Bell Offering

Bonds Are Priced To Yield 2.61 Pct. On Annual Basis

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 16.—A $50,000,000 issue of first mortgage 40-year 2¾ per cent bonds of Illinois Bell Telephone Co. will be publicly offered tomorrow by an underwriting group headed by Morgan Stanley & Co.

The offering price will be $1,035 per $1,000 bond with accrued interest. This price puts the yield at 2.61 per cent annually.

Net proceeds of sale of the issue will be used in retirement of the company's outstanding 3½s, and remaining proceeds after the retirement will go to reimburse the treasury for recent advances for expansion, additions and improvement to plant.

Associated with Morgan Stanley in the offering are 74 underwriters throughout the country, and a Nation-wide selling group of 500 dealers.

Rail Loadings Jump 15.9 Pct. During Week

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 711,67[illegible] cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was an increase of 97,50[illegible] cars, or 15.9 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 43,434 or 6.5 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 129,431 or 22.2 per cent compared with 1939.

All classes of freight except ore showed increases from the preceding holiday week. The gain in total loadings was appreciably more than seasonal, lifting them to the highest level in ten years for the second week in January.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index of loadings, based on 1929-30 as 100, advanced to 82.[illegible] (new 1940-41 high), compared with 80.5 the previous week, and 77.2 a year ago.

Engineering Awards Continue to Gain

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Engineering construction awards this week totaled $89,174,000, topping the corresponding week a year ago for the twentieth consecutive time, Engineering News-Record reported today.

A large volume of big-scale, privately financed apartment construction in the Californian defense areas boosted private awards 14 per cent above the previous week and 258 per cent higher than a year ago.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP).—Wheat prices closed ⅜@¾ cent lower today at the ebb point of the session as the market reflected good grain belt rains and continued sluggish flour business.

Although selling at no time was on a very large scale, the market was under persistent pressure after a show of firmness at the opening. Prices recovered fractionally at times, but support, which came largely from commercial interests, including mills, was erratic. May wheat closed at 86½@86⅝ and July at 81⅝@81¾.

In contrast to the acton of wheat, corn displayed independent firmness most of the time, due partly to reduced country movement as a result of bad weather. Corn closed ⅛@¾ higher, May, 63½@63⅝; July, 63⅝. Oats unchanged to ¼ lower. Soybeans, ½@¾ lower. Rye, ¼ off to ⅛ up, and lard 5@15 lower.

Rains were reported in both the hard and soft winter wheat belts. Traders said moisture was welcome in the Southwest, but was more urgently needed in the soft wheat area of the Ohio Valley where there has been a deficiency the past few months. The forecast indicated further precipitation is in prospect.

Army Creates All-Negro Air Corps Unit

Pursuit Squadron To Have 33 Officers, Ground Force of 400

The War Department yesterday announced formation of the first Army air corps squadron with a Negro personnel.

Decision to create the new unit, a pursuit squadron with Negroes both as officers and ground crew, is in line with a policy of including colored persons in every branch of the Army, Undersecretary of War Patterson asserted.

Pilots are to be selected from among colored men who have completed the secondary course of the Civil Aeronautics Board, which is considered prerequisite to basic Army flight training. They are to be trained at Tuskeegee Institute, Ala.

Ground crew soldiers must have at least a high school education and are to be recruited from among selectees and men enlisting for the Regular Army. The enlisted personnel, too, is to be trained at Chanute Field, Ill.

Patterson said the squadron should be able to operate as a unit in about a year's time.

New Songbook To Be Issued To Army Feb. 1

Improved Field Cooking Range Also Scheduled

The grim business of national rearmament includes such lighter matters as ragtime tunes and modernized cook stoves, the War Department revealed yesterday.

One department announcement disclosed that "in line with efforts to maintain a high morale" the Army will distribute a new official Army song book on February 1.

The book, prepared by the Morale Division of the Adjutant General's Office and the Music Division of the Library of Congress, contains a repertoire of 67 songs.

The tunes range from "The Caissons," famous Field Artillery air, to "Pop Goes the Weasel." The book is to be distributed in the ratio of 1 for every 50 soldiers.

Another announcement disclosed the "development of a sectional gasoline field range, built in individual units so it can be expanded to meet the needs of any size organization, which assures Army troops in the field of better cooked meals than ever before."

U.S. Data Show No Axis Threat, Rome Asserts

Fascist Publication Claims Secret Army And Navy Report

By Eleanor Packard,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, Jan. 16.—The ultra-Fascist organ La Vita Italiana today published extracts from a purported secret United States military and naval report said to brand as "erroneous" the contention that the United States would be endangered by an Axis victory over Britain.

La Vita Italiana, a monthly review, said the report was drafted by United States military and naval commissions and "was withheld from the American people, not being published in the press."

[The State, War and Navy Departments last night declined to comment on the Rome paper's statements. Officials professed no knowledge of such a report and one curtly rejected the Italian claim as "pure propaganda."—Editor's note.]

"No Military Foundation"

According to the Fascist review, the secret report says that belief the United States would be in danger of an Axis attack if Britain should fall is "based on an erroneous evaluation of the facts and has no military foundation."

"The United States should not interfere in European affairs and should not take a financial interest in the war," La Vita Italiana said in quoting from the purported report.

"Useless to Talk About Liberty"

Addressing itself to Mr. Roosevelt, the newspaper said editorially:

"Mr. Roosevelt, we are fighting and will fight until we attain liberty of bread and not liberty of speech. Poor nations don't know what do do with a liberty which allows them to cry out when they are hungry.

"It is useless to talk about liberty of speech, religion and trade. You, Mr. Roosevelt, want to rebuild the world on these liberties but there is a fifth liberty which you have forgotten—the liberty of having bread necessary for all our children."

Roberto Farinacci, former secretary of the Fascist Party, wrote in today's Fascist newspaper Regime Fascista of Cremona that it is because of United States aid that Britain still is fighting and said:

"England by now would be on its knees if it had not received from the neutral United States airplanes, tanks, ships and munitions."

U. S. Workers May Be Barred From Cab Jobs

All District and Federal employes would be barred from operating taxicabs, if their Government service occupies 30 hours a week or more, under provisions of a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan.

Hoffman told the House that a report from the hack inspector's office disclosed that "around 75 Federal or District employes, men who have regular jobs, are under license" to operate taxicabs.

On December 18 Hoffman quoted Chris Panagos, president of the District Cab Drivers Mutual Benefit Club, to the effect that between 700 and 1,000 Government workers were driving cabs while off duty.

Hoffman said that the part-time taxi drivers work in the Railroad Retirement Board, the Federal Works Agency, the Postoffice Department, the National Resources Planning Board, the Government Printing Office, the Department of Commerce, and the Department of Interior.

Reynolds Tells Plans to Northeast Businessmen

Senator Robert Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, denied his appointment as chairman of the Senate District Committee was assured, in a speech last night at the annual banquet of the Northeast Businessmen's Association, but declared:

"If I am appointed I shall do everything I possibly can to make Washington the finest capital in the world."

"Washington is now the social, economic and political center of the earth . . . and we cannot continue to lag, as we have in the past."

One of Washington's prime needs at present, the Senator asserted, is a stadium with a capacity of at least 100,000. Reynolds also urged that Washington bend every effort to expand its tourist trade.

The speech was followed by a series of patriotic tableaux. Other prominent guests at the banquet included Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas; Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, and Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi.

260th Arrives At Waycross, Ga.

Waycross, Ga., Jan. 16.—The 260th Coast Artillery, of Washington, D. C., arrived here this afternoon, approximately 2 hours and 45 minutes ahead of schedule. The regiment arrived from Fort Jackson, near Columbia, S. C., 262 miles north of here. The total mileage of the convoy in the four days of travel is 760 miles.

Col. Walter W. Burns, commanding officer, ordered a display of searchlights and guns tonight. The searchlights were placed in operation and attracted a large turnout of the population of the area. The regiment bivouacked in tents for the first time tonight.

Vichy Chants Hymn of Hate Against Britain

Accuses England of 'Stealing' Canada, Egypt From France

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Jan. 16.—An authorized source who for more than two weeks has taken a violently anti-British tone asserted today that the British stole Canada and Egypt from France and the anthem "God Save the King" as well.

The words and music for that hymn, he asserted, were, in fact, written for Louis XIV.

This was in answer to a broadcast made Tuesday by Alfred Duff Cooper, British minister of information, who asserted among other things that French newspapers were now simply "the German press printed in French."

Meanwhile, the news agency Havas, government-controlled, blamed the British troops who retreated last spring from Flanders for the current shortage of food in France.

Havas republished a dispatch from DNB, the official German news agency, stating that Germany was sending 600,000 tons of potatoes to France and 100,000 tons of sugar.

"This," the French agency went on, "is of the greatest importance since the stock of food for the French population was destroyed by English troops during the retreat from Belgium and northern France. Now England tries by all means to halt the transport of food from the United States to France.

In answer to an appeal to Latin Americans and Spaniards made by Duff Cooper on January 10, the French spokesman asserted that the Latins had been "perpetually the victims of the English."

The British, he said, had treated the French Canadians "like the Irish—that is to say, like dogs."

He accused the British of taking from France, Canada, India and Egypt the Suez Canal. He blamed Britain for the "abasement" of Spain, the "vassalage" of Portugal and the sanctions of 1935 against Italy—a step which the French "did everything possible to prevent."

Talk to Urge Peace for U. S., Kennedy Says

The radio address by Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring Ambassador to London, tomorrow night will emphasize "keeping out of war," he said yesterday after a conference with President Roosevelt.

While he "might touch upon" the President's lend-lease bill for aiding Britain, he said, the legislation is "incidental" to his "chief concern—that of keeping the country out of war." Continuing reports that he would oppose enactment of the measure brought no confirmation from him.

The address will "explain my position entirely on foreign policy," Kennedy said, adding that the speech was already written and he didn't expect to change it "as a result of my conversations today."

Significance was seen by many, however, in the fact that following his White House visit, the Ambassador, whose successor is expected to be named very shortly, met for more than an hour with Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, a leader in the Senate fight against the President's bill.

Though Wheeler said the visit was a social one, it was followed by his issuance of a "challenge" to the President to "make public the reports of Mr. Kennedy and Ambassador Bullitt (former Ambassador to France who has resigned), which began before war was declared and before the invasion of Poland, down to the present time."

Wheeler declared that if that is done "the American people will be in a better position to give the lend-lease bill intelligent consideration."

The Senator told The Post last night, however, that he had not seen the reports and did not know what was in them.

Ambassador Kennedy also is expected to testify at the House Foreign Affairs Committee hearing on the lend-lease bill, probably Tuesday. He returned to New York after his conferences here yesterday.

Mrs. Wallace Selects a Simple Black Gown for Inauguration

It's One of Those Plain but Important 'Little Things;' Her Evening Gown For Sunday Concert Is of Blue Satin

By Ruth Cowan
Associated Press Staff Writer

Mrs. Henry Wallace relaxed last night, happy that she has finished a very important task—her Inauguration shopping.

The smart black frock she will wear when her husband is sworn in as Vice President Monday, and the handsome evening gown for the Inaugural concert are in her clothes closet. The accessories—gloves, shoes, hat, bags—are at hand.

For evening—the concert is Sunday night at Constitution Hall—she selected a gown of shimmering satin in a lively new blue that is near the color of cornflowers. With it she will wear a soft velvet jacket of deep brown, hip-length.

The bodice of the gown is of a molded Grecian effect, cut modestly low in back. The skirt, cut on the bias, hangs smoothly in front. Drawn back in a close-fitting line over the hips, it sweeps out to a modified fan-shaped train.

Her jewels will be a single strand of pearls, her conservatively sized diamond engagement ring and her narrow wedding band. Her shoes will be of silver mesh with open toe.

Mrs. Wallace's black crepe frock for Monday is one of those severely simple "little black numbers" that are billed by designers as so important in a well-dressed woman's wardrobe.

She plans to wear a black pill-box hat trimmed with a narrow ribbon band and a soft veil. Her coat is mink with a ripple collar. Her bag and gloves are black antelope.

Flow of U. S. Goods to Soviet Vexes Britain

Fears Nazis Benefit; May Seek Hemisphere Contraband Control

By Robert P. Post
Copyright by New York Times

London, Jan. 16.—The possibility of asking the Americas for permission to establish some sort of contraband control on a West Indian base such as Trinidad is being considered here.

The reason for this is growing worry over Russian help to Germany, which is reaching a proportion such that Russia may prove a dangerous loophole in the British blockade. Most of this aid comes from the United States and South America and goes through the Panama Canal. It does not go direct to Germany. Instead, it goes to Vladivostok and reaches Germany by delayed action. The Russians are not acting as a direct channel for goods for Germany. But they are replacing their own stocks west of Vladivostok with goods which arrive there, releasing those stocks for use in Germany.

For example, according to the British, Russia received within the last three months more cotton from the United States than its previous yearly averages. Germany has gotten more cotton under the British blockade than she is expected to have. The same thing applies to oil. Russia can feed her needs in Siberia by importing and thereby be capable of diverting westward oil which ordinarily would go eastward. The same thing applies to oil drilling machinery, of which the United States is practically the sole world producer.

There is reason to believe that the complicated process goes even further. There is a possibility that goods labeled for Japan eventually reach Russia and that they, or their equivalent, finally reach Germany.

Van Duzer Urges Staggered Hours For U. S. Workers

A new plan to further stagger the hours at which Government employes report for work and a program to change the opening times of public and parochial schools, both designed to relieve traffic congestion, will be ready next week, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday told the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Two of the three District Commissioners were present to hear Van Duzer tell the planning group that he had worked out a tentative schedule of Government building opening hours ranging from 7:45 a. m. to 9:15 a. m. He also will propose, Van Duzer said, to change school openings from 9 to 9:30 a. m.

He pointed out that half of the city's 150,000 Federal workers and 110,000 school children now report for work at 9 a. m., creating a congestion problem unequaled in any other city.

The Planning Commission has agreed to cooperate with traffic officials by presenting the stagger-hour plan to Federal authorities.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, announced the current parking survey will be ready in time for a preliminary report early in April.

Army to Supply 1,418,000 Men by June

Patterson Expects Sufficient Basic Weapons Will Be Ready

The War Department will have sufficient equipment to supply the 1,418,000 men who will be in the field by June with basic weapons, and will have a fully-equipped Army ready to take the field by 1942, Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, said yesterday at his press conference.

This includes all personal equipment for the troops such as shelters, blankets, uniforms and shoes, as well as basic weapons such as rifles, bayonets, pistols, .30-caliber machine-guns and certain types of artillery, mortars and shells.

Aircraft would be the main deficiency of the new Army, he said, though there was enough of everything to provide training for the men that were being called to service as they enter the ranks.

The War Department announced earlier that it intended to maintain the Army at 1,418,097 men and 97,371 officers during the fiscal year of 1942, and that this figure would include selectees, National Guard and Regular Army units.

The department also announced that it would call into service 16 more National Guard units, comprising 18,250 officers and men, on February 3.

Antiwar Group Link Denied By Lindbergh

Reiterates His Stand Against U. S. Entry Into Conflict, However

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Jan. 16.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, whose name has been associated with the No Foreign War Committee, denied today that he has any connection with the organization. His statement, as telegraphed to press associations from his home at Huntington, Long Island, follows:

"I wish to state that while I have attempted to cooperate with all American organizations opposed to our entering the war in Europe, I have no connection with the No Foreign War Committee. Shortly after the No Foreign War Campaign was launched in Washington, I agreed to speak at an opening meeting in St. Louis, providing certain conditions were met. These conditions were not met, and since that time the No Foreign War Campaign has undergone reorganization.

"I attended a number of conferences when its successor, the No Foreign War Committee, was being formed, but found myself unable to support the methods and policies adopted by the new organization. I have at no time been a member of the committee, nor have I contributed to its financial support. My belief that it would be disastrous for this country to enter the war remains unchanged, and I intend to continue the stand I have taken against our participation."

Later in the day Verne Marshall, chairman of the committee, who had said Col. Lindbergh was one of a group who urged him to accept the chairmanship, issued the following statement:

"Col. Lindbergh is not associated with the No Foreign War Committee and never was. He did agree to speak in St. Louis, but the arrangements were balled up by O. K. Armstrong (promoter and national field director of the committee, who recently resigned). Lindbergh agreed to speak if Armstrong obtained approval from the president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce. Armstrong did not get that approval."

Colored Student Sues in Air Corps Rejection Case

Yancey Williams, 24, engineering student at Howard University, yesterday asked the District Court to compel the War Department to consider his application for appointment as a cadet in the Army Air Corps.

Saying that he filed suit on behalf of himself and all other colored citizens with like qualifications, Williams asked the court to decree that the Army's practice of excluding members of his race from flying service was unconstitutional.

Named defendants were Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Maj. Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff; Maj. Gen. E. S. Adams, adjutant general; Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Air Corps chief, and Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant, commanding Third Corps Area. All were sued in their official capacity.

Prof. Samuel I. Krieger would be a handy man to have around when you're trying to figure out your income tax return or trying to balance your cheekbook or any one of those virtually impossible things.

He can give out the answers at a moment's notice on any trigonometric problem you put to him. He can instantly tell you on what day any date in history fell. It's his gentle boast that while he was at the Sorbonne, Paris's famous university, he solved in 5 minutes two mathematical problems that are supposed to take 14 and 15 years respectively.

After a recent visit he had with Prof. Albert Einstein, who is known as something of a mathematical wizard himself, Einstein declared "Prof. Krieger is the greatest genius in mathematics and the greatest mathematical mind I have even seen in my life."

Well, Prof. Krieger's in Washington for a few days, doing lectures and things. Today he's going to be a guest on a special broadcast over WJSV at 3:35 p. m. Harry Crow, WJSV's auditor, is going to dream up some prodigious mathematical problems for the professor to figure out and if you want to be amazed we suggest you listen in.

Incidentally one of the professor's ambitions is to meet President Roosevelt. Says he: "I could show Mr. Roosevelt how he could save weeks in making out the budget."

Contract Bridge

Sam Fry jr., leader of the Master Solvers Club, is your partner. You are sitting South and hold these cards:

♠ K 8 5
♡ 10 3
◇ Q 4 3 2
♣ Q J 5 2

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Dble	Pass	1 ♡
1 NT	Dble	?	—

What call do you make with the South cards?

Answer: "Redouble," says Sam. This is the only bid you can make to show correctly the power of your hand. Your scattered strength almost enabled you to redouble on the first round of the bidding; and, despite your pass and the opponents' bids, your partner chose to bid freely with one no-trump. Unless he is being "fancy" he can rescue himself.

A two-club bid would show a hand with the same club holding as the redouble, but it would not indicate the side king and queen.

With all your honors, it looks as though East has been too optimistic and by redoubling you are in a position to win a nice score. If the opponents run out to two hearts, your partner may be in a position to double and severely penalize that contract. If you are left in one no-trump, redoubled, you will probably be stealing a game and maybe overtrick bonuses on a hand which probably wouldn't quite reach game otherwise.

Spirit of the Market Place Shows France Isn't Dead Yet

Gossip of Women Reveals the People Distrust Nazis, Look Forward to Day When They Can Rejoin Fight With British

(This is the fifth of a dramatic series of uncensored articles by Betty Barzin, Belgian journalist and magazine writer.)

By Betty Barzin

World Copyright, 1941, by International News Service

New York, Jan. 16.—When all is normal in France, peasants take their produce daily to the nearest market. But since the collapse, many peasants can no longer do so. Very few are allowed gasoline by the departmental authorities, and while cars and lorries decay in sheds and garages, a good deal of agricultural produce runs the risk of rotting in fields and kitchen gardens.

Were it not for the endless resourcefulness of the women, there would be much waste.

Ancient dog carts and bicycles have been mended, odd boxes and containers have been made up of wood and cardboard, every conceivable tank has been strapped onto quaint four-wheeled vehicles, even out of use perambulators have taken a new lease of life.

And in the early morning hours old women and young girls take as much as these strange transports will carry to local markets, where eager crowds are waiting for them.

Men Don't Know Vegetables

Men scarcely ever visit the village shops. As a French girl once told me:

"A man cannot tell a good lettuce from a bad one, nor fresh radishes from old ones. It is strange, for after all, when they are not in the Army, men grow these vegetables. But once they are lying on a counter in a shop, men do not seem to know them any more. It is a good thing there are women about."

The girl struck me as being very wise, for she had put her very finger on the trouble of France.

Men have made France, but they were unable to forestall France's misery. Happily, France has its women "who can tell a good lettuce from a bad one," and who can fight against the spirit of defeat.

In the village shops they gather in the early morning and cheer each other.

"No potatoes? Well, let's do without them. The Germans need them much more than we do. They know nothing about cooking. And a plain boiled potato is not worthy of a Frenchman's dinner," an old peasant woman said one day.

Hitler Talks "Rubbish"

"Rice and onions make a nice filling dish. I have a notion that when Hitler says that the British blockade makes no difference one way or the other, he is talking rubbish. But all the same, we will have to make the best of turnips. They look like potatoes once they are cooked.

"We French have much imagination. The Germans have none. They are sure to feel the blockade much more than we do. And besides, to them the blockade is a real blow. To us it is a sign that Britain is doing well."

"My husband died in 1924," the owner of a small farm told me one evening, as we were waiting for the village grocer to unload a long-expected van which brought such marvels as "ersatz" coffee, salt, macaroni, olives, jam, salted sardines and what not.

Spirit Was Different

"It was as well, for he had gone through the battle of Verdun and he would have been too disappointed at the present turn of events. In the 1914-18 days, we also did without many things, but the spirit was different, for one was in the midst of a gigantic fight.

"Now we are clean out of it, and even if England wins, or rather when England wins, we shall feel like poor relations. It is unworthy of France. I do all I can to keep things going on the farm. My son is wounded in a hospital in Flanders. There is some talk now about sending the French wounded home.

"Of course, I shall be happy to see my boy again. But what does this sudden Nazi kindness mean? Surely they want some further concession, something which is not stipulated in the armistice convention. If one could only trust the Nazis' words and their intentions. But they are fundamentally dishonest, and not likely to give us something just for the mere joy of being generous."

"All this talk about releasing our prisonres makes one feel uneasy. Anyway, if they hope that our men are likely to help them to make an armed stand against the English, they are very mistaken. If my husband comes home now, he will raise trouble, and if his gun goes off, it will not go off in the direction of the English Channel, that much I know. Nor will any other gun in our neighborhood, for that matter. Surely all the Fifth Columnists who are still knocking about must have told their paymasters that much!"

"My husband is becoming a real nuisance these days. He wants me to air and brush his uniform every Saturday, so that no moth gets into it, he says, because he will soon need it when the English come back and the fight against the Nazis is resumed."

'Amps' in Pants New Stunt to Keep U. S. Fliers Warm

Fairbanks, Alaska, Jan. 16 (AP).—The captain and his bomber crew flew toward the North Pole yesterday in nothing but their underwear, and were cozy and comfortable, thank you.

It was a test of the newest wrinkle in Arctic clothing for United States Army fliers at the experimental northern flying station here: "electric underwear." In the privacy of a bomber, there was nothing shocking about it.

Clad only in the new garments—except for head, hands and feet—were Maj. Dale V. Gaffney, Ladd Field commander, and his crew.

The neat in the electric undies is provided by tiny coils interwoven in the garments. The wearer plugs into the circuit beside his seat, just as simple as plugging in an electric bottle warmer at home. It was 15 below zero at the air base while they were making the test.

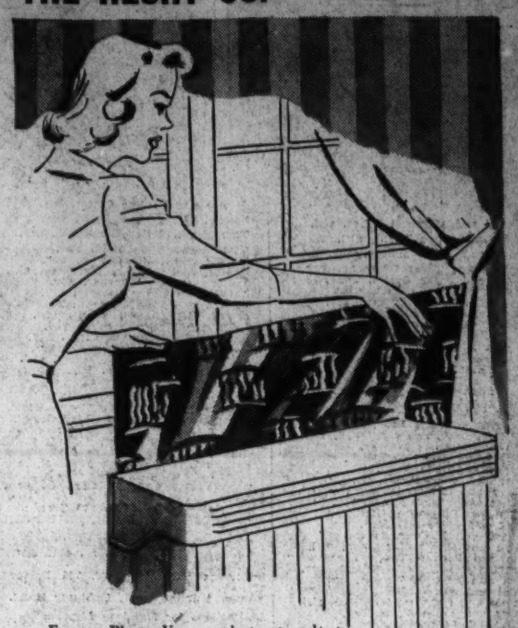

Swedes Tell How Petain Called Bluff

Stockholm, Jan. 16.—The Rome correspondent of the Stockholm Tidningen reports from "Vatican circles" that when the German Ambassador to Paris, Otto Abetz, visited Marshal Petain following former Vice Premier Pierre Laval's ousting from the Vichy cabinet, he emphasized that "German troops could, within six hours, occupy the remaining unoccupied part of France," to which Marshal Petain allegedly replied, "In such an eventuality it would take six minutes for the French colonies to go over to the British side."
